WORDS OF Vice President MARISSA

shall, speaking at Aurora, Illinois, is reported in press dispatches to have said:

"Too many persons who see the sign 'P. C.' in the heavens think it means 'French Christ,' when it means 'Plover corn.' Out of the superior educational advantages of today, one unhappy corollary has developed. A vast army of persons whose labors would make for the industrial advancement of the nation have conceived themselves fitted for fancied nobler pursuits, and thus the progress they would have made in the work they are fitted for is lost."

These are somewhat brave and outspoken words for a man in public office, who must rely upon the vote of the people for further advancement in politics. Yet they bring up an interesting line of thought; a line very similar to that which must have been in the mind of the Secretary Stone, of the Portland Y. M. C. A. some years ago, when at a banquet given to newspapermen, he was pleading the case of technical training and of trade schools, particularly in Oregon.

"In Oregon," said Mr. Stone, "there is a greater percentage of people who make their living off other people in any other state in the union. There are more ministers and lawyers per capita in this state than in any other, more who do nothing themselves to earn a living, but who obtain their livelihood by attempting Oregon's lack of development is too pronounced to disregard. She has vast areas that are unimproved, and while there are people who blame this upon a certain railroad system, that for years "bottled up" the state in a sort of private preserve; it must also be charged to the fact that there are too many Oregon people afraid of hard work, overalls and calloused hands. It is a fault of this modern day civilization, so-called, that people have a desire to appear to be everything but toilers. There is a fear of being thought "low class" if the daily bread is earned by the sweat of the brow and the brawn of the arm. Things should not be thus. Especially should they not be this way in Oregon, where there are thousands of acres awaiting development, and where this development can only come by honest, hard, and even disfiguring toil. Oregon people should not be fearful of this; if they expect to bring their state to its destiny, it is time that they changed. It is not only a matter of getting back to the soil, as the popular cry has it; but it is a matter of teaching the young men and young women that there is nothing to be ashamed of in honest labor, and it is quite impossible that everyone should be fitted to practice law, for instance.

The gilded youth that flits about today, enjoying life on dad's money, will not develop Oregon. The gilded youth should learn a trade, and amount to something. There is more opportunity today for the bricklayer, the mason, the machinist, the agriculturist of the common and non-expert variety, than there is for the half way professional man of the kind that is being ground out by colleges that are not equipped to make good professional men. And the sooner this is generally appreciated the better it will be for Oregon.

Vice-President Marshall's remarks will apply in this state with a special significance; not so much so because the ministers of Oregon are not doing their work, but because so many of Oregon's young men do not "plow corn." Plowing corn may not be the best agricultural treatment for it, but familiarity with the plow, and the shovel, and the hammer and monkey-wrench, and the lathe and planer, are all good things for the young man of Oregon to know. In short the young man of Oregon needs most of all to realize that father's money will not last forever, and that

"THIS IS MY 47TH BIRTHDAY"

Booth Tarkington

Newton Booth Tarkington, one of the most successful of the younger generation of American authors and playwrights, was born in Indianapolis July 29, 1893. His early education was received in private schools in his native city. Later he attended Princeton University, where he received his A. B. in 1913. Six years after he left the university Mr. Tarkington leaped into fame as the author of "The Gentleman from Indiana." This was his first effort at novel writing and its success was instantaneous. A year later "Monieur Beaucaire" appeared from his pen and added greatly to his reputation as an author. These two are his best known works, though his later books have all been widely read. "Monieur Beaucaire" and several other of Mr. Tarkington's works have been dramatized with great success.

Congratulations to:

Heart to Heart Talks

HE HELD ON TO THE BALL.

There was an amateur ball game in one of the big cities the other day. One team was an outfielder named Charley Rocks.

Charley is a little fellow. He is only eight years old. But, young and little as he is, he knows how to play the game.

The ball was batted Charley's way. His "field" was on a river bank—there isn't very much room for playing ball in Charley's part of the city—and the ball threatened to go overboard.

When the "fly" came Charley's way he thought only of the game, not of the danger to himself in following it into the river, for he can't swim.

He jumped into the air and caught the ball. The next thing was a big splash. Charley was in the water with the ball gripped in his hand. When they fished him out the ball was still there.

The play counted; the batter was out. If Charley can hold on to the ball in later life as well as he did when he fell into the river he'll be a good citizen.

He'll hold on.

When the ball of life is batted his way he won't think of the river; he won't think of the danger to himself; he won't stop to reckon the consequences. He'll take a chance, and when he pulls himself out of the river of circumstances—he won't have to be fished out then—he will be found to be holding on to the ball.

In the big game of life an important thing is to hold on to the ball. Keep your eye on it and grab it when it comes toward you.

Above all, hold on to it. It's the ball that's caught and held that counts, not the one that's juggled so that it finally falls to the ground.

If you cultivate the habit of holding on and don't stop to look back at the water into which you MAY fall you'll be a valuable man.

Suppose you do fall in. You may drown, of course, but the chances are that the spirit which prompted you to hold on will find a way to get you out. When you get out you'll have the ball.

And you'll be a hero.

An improvement. "Jumping cats!" yelled the victim in the chair. "You've cut off part of my ear."
"Why, so I have," replied the barber coolly. "but you must admit it looks better than the other one does."

Don't Seek to Destroy Our Institutions

By Chief Justice EDWARD D. WHITE of the United States Supreme Court

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE MUST FROWN DOWN THIS ATTEMPT WHICH IS GROWING IN THE LAND TO ATTACK THE PRINCIPLES OF THE GOVERNMENT.

The very foundation of our free institutions was the belief not in the march of a triumphant democracy, not in the march of popular feeling and popular conduct unrestrained, but that MEN COULD RESTRAIN THEMSELVES, that great principles could be written into our national life which could steer and guide and restrain and hold us and lead us on free from anarchy, full of liberty, with life and property and everything that blesses mankind saved and secured.

Look around in this great land today. Where is there a country like this? The WORLD HAS NEVER SEEN THE EQUAL OF IT, and the world will never see its endurance if the American people forget the foundation principles of their free institutions because of what they imagine to be an evil here and an evil there and seek to PULL DOWN THE PILLARS OF THE TEMPLE in order that they may destroy what they suppose to be a rat within the house.

Let us FROWN DOWN THIS ATTEMPT which is growing in the land. Many thoughtless persons today suppose that everything that is wrong is wrong in the institutions, when without the institutions there WOULD BE NO RIGHT AND EVERYTHING WRONG.
