PERSONAL The Enterprise prints LIBERTY elsewhere a protest, signed by a number of Gladstone and other women, all of whom say they are readers and patrons of this paper, in regard to the proposed performance in these parts of a wild West show on Sunday. The protest says that the Enterprise is exerting an influence in favor of the proposed performance.

The Enterprise regrets that these of its readers think this paper is exerting an influence in favor of the proposed show. This paper is trying not to do that, but to print an unbiased account of the news in relation to this particular phase of local activity. The Enterprise believes that when some 25 percent of the population is fighting something, this fight is a matter of news. And when the other 75 per cent of the people of the community is talking about the subject opposed, it becomes still more a matter of news. And so the Enterprise is printing, from day to day, such news in regard to this thing as comes to its hands.

LOOKING One hundred and thirty BACKWARD seven years ago today the engrossed copy of the Declaration of Independence was signed by 54 colonial delegates at Philadelphia, and the real beginning of this nation as an entity was made. The rough draft, first made and approved on the fourth day of July, was but the informal agreement, as it were, that the colonies were resolved to stand together and seek their destiny unhampered by the apron strings of any nation of the Old World.

Strong Navy an Insurance For Peace. Pay For It!

By Admiral GEORGE DEWEY, U. S. N.

I BELIEVE IT IS THE DUTY OF EACH GENERATION TO PAY ITS OWN INSURANCE AND NOT TO THRUST ITS BURDENS UPON THE GENERATIONS THAT COME AFTER, AND THE INSURANCE FOR PEACE IS A NAVY STRONG ENOUGH TO COMPEL IT.

The only function and justification for the existence of a navy is the preservation of peace. To perform this function the navy must be adequate, and, though so much discussed in these recent times, the word "adequate" as applied to the navy has but one meaning, and that is: AN "adequate navy" is a navy of a STRENGTH SUFFICIENT TO MEET AND DEFEAT ANY PROBABLE ENEMY. This strength is not absolute, but is relative and varies from period to period as the other naval powers of the world vary. At the present period "adequacy" on our part calls for a navy SECOND IN STRENGTH TO THAT OF ENGLAND ONLY.

We ourselves through lack of foresight of our fathers and grandfathers paid the penalty of our generation in the loss of hundreds of thousands of lives, and our sons and grandsons have been paying the costs of the billions of dollars wasted and the hundreds of millions in pensions for which they were mortgaged, and they still continue to pay.

We are paying today for the navy, as AN INSURANCE WHICH DOES NOT INSURE US, roughly $1.50 per capita per annum. Besides what has already been paid in lives and money, we are still mortgaged by lack of foresight in our fathers to the extent of the national debt and the additional $1.80 per capita per annum that we are paying in pensions.

Shall our lack of foresight continue this system of mortgaging the coming generations, or shall we add the relatively small sum needed to insure that insurance ADE-

The 137 years elapsing since then have been marked by a wonderful development of this nation. From a brave and struggling group of settlements fringing a vast territory, the size of which not even its early inhabitants even so much as guessed, the nation has become a world power, reaching out its dominions from the Atlantic tropics to the Pacific Orient. It has fought and defeated Old World powers, and it has fought itself in what was one of the most sanguinary and desperate wars of history. It has met many problems, facing them all with the clear conscience of a land whose people know themselves to be free and equal, and it has solved most of its difficulties—though perhaps not always in the best or simplest way.

But it is not in this that the greatness of the nation really lies. Other nations have done as much; even if in not as brief a span of years. The United States has been the most powerful land of the world because of its power to assimilate the peoples of other lands and make of them true Americans. No other country has shown this power, no other nation has met ought but failure when it attempted it. For over fifty years Europe has been pouring her surplus hordes into the western continent, and yet they have not even had the effect of making this land of ours "cosmopolitan." Those who have come here have thrown off the mantle their original nationality even as they have cast aside their allegiance to their former rulers, and have become, in two generations at the outside, Americans in the fullest sense of the term.

It is this that has made the United States the wonder of the rest of the world. Its Constitution has been broad enough to provide for this marvelous assimilation; its very air has in it that which makes for a common set of characteristics of all those who breathe it. Children of the second generation of Scotch, Irish, English, Russian, Italian, French parentage show no difference that is appreciable, save in the spelling of their names. The grandsons and granddaughters of folk who came to these shores plainly marked with the racial signs of their nativity are not to be differentiated today from the sons and daughters of the oldest families. They are all citizens of the United States, and they all glory in being Americans and in subscribing to American principles.

It is true that there are reversions to type to be found. But they are the exceptions, and usually they are lacking in the fuller development of their fellows. But for the most part the people of this nation are a race (by themselves, united by a burning patriotism which it must be confessed they like to hide), a quick wit, a superb sense of humor that enables them to meet reversals with a smiling face and a new courage, and a broadmindedness that gives them a tolerance for the follies of those who are less enlightened. And in all this lies their pride, the pride that is reflected in their carriage and demeanor and that makes them easy to pick out no matter in what part of the globe they may chance to be.

This mysterious power of assimilation seems to be native to the soil of the northern part of the western hemisphere, and nowhere else. Nations of the other parts of the world have tried it, either willfully or otherwise, and have failed. The Romans that was overrun by the Huns was a totally different Rome from the one of earlier history. German conquering of Alsace and Lorraine has never made the people of these states any less French. The uniting of Ireland, Scotland, Wales and England has not brought about any similarity between the several peoples. Yet carry an Irishman, a Scotchman and a Welshman to the United States, and set them down in any community, and in a generation the offspring of the three will be Americans in thought, peculiarity of speech and general character. The subtle power that brings about this change, be it the Spirit of Freedom or the ineffable Americanism, is what has caused the growth and marvelous development of this nation; and it is that sacred thing which will forever hold this land in the lead, and keep its peoples leaders of the world.

"THIS IS MY 45TH BIRTHDAY"

King of Greece Constantine, the new king of the Greeks, was born in the royal palace of Athens on August 2, 1893, being the eldest son of the late King George, who was assassinated at Saloniki last March and whom he succeeded on the throne. The new king is connected by blood with virtually all the great sovereigns of Europe. In 1889 he was married to Princess Sophia, a sister of Emperor William II. of Germany. The royal couple have five children, the eldest of whom, Crown Prince George, recently passed his twenty-third birthday. Constantine came to the throne of Greece at the very height of his popularity, which he won last spring on the field of battle against the Turks in Macedonia and which his recent successful warfare against the Bulgarians has raised to the highest pitch.

England Muzzles Forbidding; German Broadside Effective

ENGLISH naval supremacy has been threatened by the new German program. Comparison of the strength of the two navies is therefore interesting. England is at present far ahead. She has forty-seven modern battleships, compared with Germany's twenty-seven. England has 210 destroyers, while the Germans have only ninety-four. As regards torpedo boats the countries are more nearly equal. King George has fifty-eight and the Kaiser fifty-two. There are sixty-nine English submarines and only eleven German. England far outstrips Germany as regards first class cruisers, the relative figures being forty-one to nine. The top picture shows the business end of an English super-Dreadnought, while the bottom one shows a German battleship firing a broadside.

HOPS ONLY FANCY CROP IN MARKET

With the raspberry season about over, and with fruit so soft that it will hardly keep for a day, prices in the berry market are tumbling to any figure that will clear the days receipts. Logans are also low, and blackberries are not holding up very well as far as quotations go. Blackcaps are about the highest of any, but even they are being sold at a dollar a crate.

New spots are generally plentiful, and are selling from 90 cents to a dollar per hundred pounds. Second grade stuff is being offered as low as 75 cents wholesale, but is not moving rapidly. Hood River cherries are in such shape that they are being unloaded for as little as two-bits per box. Willamette valley cherries, though not over-plentiful, are holding up pretty well. The Dalles and White Salmon fruit is all gone. Peaches are in such the same fix as cherries, though the poorer grades are not as bad as the Hood River black republicans.

The market for hop contracts is gaining in strength, and while it is rumored that 21 cents is being offered privately, this figure has not yet been publicly quoted. That it will be, however, there is no doubt. Such strength was never before seen in hop contracts at this period of the year. The great advances that have occurred in the markets of Germany and England during the last few weeks indicated the sore straits that short sellers have found themselves in.
