after right-of-way has been secured and construction started that the property will be turned over to the Oregon Electric, and will be operated as a part of the Hill Lines in Oregon. Whether or not an effort will be made to have it get beyond Oregon City over the tracks of the Clackamas Southern is not at present known.
In asking for a franchise in Portland those backing the road expressed a willingness to deposit with the city a cash bond guaranteeing the completion of the line within a year, and gave every indication of having tremendous financial resources at hand. While Mr. Carver is known to have ample funds for the completion of the line at least between Portland and Oregon City, those who are watching the progress of the work believe that wealthier interests are also concerned in its construction.

DUNIWAY DEAD; TROUBLE AHEAD

ture to pass the bill repealing the law of 1911 over the veto of the governor, and the lower house did so. The senate, however, sustained the veto.
The 1911 law became operative immediately upon the death of Mr. Duniway. It provides for the appointment of his successor by the governor, the appointee to serve until January 1, 1915. It further provides that a state printer shall be elected at the general election in November, 1914, and shall assume the duties of his office January 1, 1915. As the new law becomes effective on that day, there may be no candidate at the 1914 election.

SMITH, BORAX KING, FACING BANKRUPTCY

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 5.—Rated only a year or two ago among the great multi-millionaires of America, Francis M. Smith, widely known as the "Borax King," appears before Judge Morrow in the United States district court today to show cause why he should not be adjudged a bankrupt on debts amounting approximately to $150,000.
The petition filed by Smith's creditors declares that he is unable to pay when a committee was appointed to act as trustees in managing his affairs, he conveyed without any consideration properties valued at $1,000,000 to the Merchants Trust company, to B. F. Edwards and to his wife at a time when he was insolvent. These transfers it is alleged in the complaint constitute acts of bankruptcy.
Smith's career is one of romances, of modern American finance. Born in the town of Richmond, Wis., about sixty-five years ago, he spent his boyhood and youth on his father's farm. At the age of twenty he came to the West and in 1872 he discovered the great borax deposits in Nevada. After years of labor he secured a monopoly of the product and from that time his financial success was one of the wonders of the West. Eventually he became the head of a two-hundred-million-dollar string of corporations. His personal fortune has been estimated at many millions.

CANBY CORN GOES TO CALIFORNIANS

Oregon's fame as a corn growing center is spreading. One carload of sweet corn has already been sent to San Francisco and the pleasure of the firm receiving it was so great that two more carloads were ordered.
California is a very big producer of sweet corn itself, but it never saw such corn as was recently shipped from this state. The shipment was made by A. R. Cummings & Son of Canby.
The corn is by far the best ever produced in this section and its shipment to the south is expected to create additional interest in the industry. The corn was packed in berry crates and contained five dozen ears each. The crates were used instead of sacks in order to give the stock better ventilation during transit, thereby saving it from heating.
This is not the first time that Cummings & Son have created surprise in California by reason of the wonderful quality of their produce. Some months ago the firm sent a carload of rhubarb to the south and it showed California what real rhubarb looked like. The buyers of the corn ordered a shipment of rhubarb to go forward with the former.

REV. OVALL WOULD PUT COLLEGE HERE

The Rev. John Ovall, of the Swedish Methodist church, visited Oregon City the early part of this week, and said he was seeking a good location for a college. Mr. Ovall says he is one of a committee appointed by his church board to find a site in the Northwest for an institution to be devoted to the education of Swedish-American youths and maidens, and adds that he believes Oregon City is a location that should be called to the attention of the board, and that he believes the city has a good chance of being selected.
The Rev. Ovall has canvassed most of the smaller cities of Washington in the interests of this college, and in nearly every instance has expressed the belief that the particular city he was visiting was well suited to the purposes in which he was interested. Friends of his say that this is due to the fact that most Western cities are suitable for college towns, and add that as he travels he probably finds newer and more favorable locations.
Mr. Ovall for some time has made Vancouver, Wn., his headquarters, and in the Garrison city has done much good work in interesting people in the Swedish church. He will speak upon the same subject in the First Methodist church here this week.

SEVEN TAKE OATH OF CITIZENSHIP

The United States acquired seven new citizens in Oregon City Monday following a naturalization hearing before Judge J. U. Campbell in the circuit court. Those to whom final papers were granted were William Henry Silcox, of Oregon City; Frederick Marshall of Mulino; John Leonard Meser, of Oregon City; Gottfried Falmexger, of Wilsonville; Chris Knuzi, of Canby; Frank Haver Maier, of Oswego; and John Hammeinen, of Canby.
Two of the new citizens were born in Canada and took oath to renounce their allegiance to British rule, four were formerly subjects of Kaiser Wilhelm, and one was a native of Switzerland.
The petition for citizenship of Andreas Anton Mayer was to have come up, but last February Mayer died.
A number of the candidates for citizenship were unable to comply with the requirements, and will later seek rights again.

What's What in Bathing Suits.

Never has the Anglo-Saxon eye gazed upon such startling bathing costumes and accessories as those designed for this season's wear. Emerald green taffetas, scarlet satin with Scotch plaid trimmings, bishop's purple satin, black taffetas with adornments of cubist designs were some of the color schemes seen recently at a fashionable seaside resort.
For head coverings there were quaint bonnets, caps and hoods of rubberized silk or satin in the gayest of tints. Stockings of dazzling green, purple

FOR THE SMART SEA COSTUME. Red and blue were displayed with silk and satin bathing shoes laced with satin ribbon in the prevailing cothurn fashion, halfway to the knees.
Under these suits were worn bloomers to match, finished below the knee with a ruffle of the same or with a contrasting frill. A purple satin suit had frills of white linen printed with Jouey flowers, and the unmistakable resemblance drew from scores of women the exclamation, "Fantaisies!" Among the accessories pictured must be noted the corsage bouquet of rubber roses.

OVER A PRECIPICE

Climax to the Reckless Ride of a Fearless Horseman.
HIS WILD LEAP IN THE DARK.

It Carried Horse and Rider Past the Edge of a Sheer Cliff to a Fall of Two Hundred and Fifty Feet to the Rocks and Water Below, Yet the Man Lived.
Perhaps the most extraordinary fall that a human being ever survived is that described by Thormann in his "Sporting Stories." The lucky man was Colonel William Yorke Moore, a British officer, who rode his horse in the dark over a sheer precipice 247 feet in height and came out alive! It seems incredible that such a fearful experience should result in anything but instant death, yet here are the facts, which once again confirm the adage that truth is more wonderful than fiction.
Colonel Moore, who commanded the troops at Dominica, lost his way one evening after sunset. In complete darkness he endeavored to make his way home. Two or three times he had difficulty in making his horse cross obstacles, and at last they came to something that the horse would not face.

Colonel Moore was a fearless rider. Again and again he rode his horse at full speed against the unknown obstacle, but in vain. At last, urged fiercely by whip and spur, the terrified animal, with a snort of terror, cleared the low hedge—for such the obstruction proved to be—and went over the cliff.
Colonel Moore says that during his flight on horseback through the air every event of his whole life seemed to pass in a luminous panorama before him. Suddenly there came a terrific concussion, which deprived him of his senses and left him with his legs in the sea and his body on the rocks, apparently dead.

He must have lain there stunned for some hours, for when at last the lapping water and the cool breezes restored him the moon was shining brightly in midheaven, and his beams fell upon the upturned, glittering shoes of his gallant horse, which lay dead and mangled beside him.
As soon as he had collected his scattered wits Colonel Moore coolly began to examine himself to ascertain what injuries he had sustained. He found that he was severely cut about the body and head, that his right ankle was dislocated and that his back was benumbed or paralyzed by the concussion of his fall.
When the sun rose it shone upon his bare, bleeding head with such intolerable heat that, as a protection from its rays, he tied his cotton handkerchief about his forehead. Above his head projected the two ends of a knotted bandage stained crimson with his blood.
After lying in horrible pain for several hours he spied a boatful of natives rowing toward the spot where he lay. As they came near he yelled them in a faint voice, but the moment they saw the ghastly figure of the colonel, with his bloody headress, they set up a yell and rowed away as if 20,000 devils were after them.
After some time a single black man came clambering over the rocks, intent on catching fish. He was within a few yards of the colonel when the latter hailed him. The moment the negro caught sight of the bleeding head and the blood stained bandage he, too, uttered a fearful yell, flung down his rod and line and scrambled off over the rocks as fast as his feet and hands would carry him.
The colonel now began to resign himself to the prospect of a lingering death, but fortunately his English servant, alarmed at his master's absence, went in search of him and, following the horse's tracks, at last came to the edge of the precipice.
The sudden disappearance of the boot prints near the low hedge fence convinced him that an accident had happened. He ran to the barracks and got out a boat, which a party of soldiers rowed to the foot of the cliff.
Very tenderly and carefully the soldiers lifted the colonel into the boat and brought him back to the barracks. For some months he lay in great pain and danger, but in time the paralyzed muscles of his back recovered, and eventually he was restored to complete health. Not even the slightest touch of lameness remained to remind him of his fall.

STATE COLLEGE TO HAVE FINE CAMPUS

CORVALLIS, Ore., Aug. 5.—Campus plans for improving the Oregon Agricultural college grounds, comprehend the three-fold feature of economy and convenience in use, and beauty for all who traverse them. The scope of the plans is outlined by Professor A. L. Peck, landscape gardener in charge, somewhat as follows:
The grounds about Cantner hall will be straightened up and made attractive and the fir hedge on the east will be removed, bringing the hall from its former retirement and putting it on the campus map.
After drainage, the athletic field will be divided into tracks, fields and courts, and fitted up with apparatus for the use of classes, in physical culture, and, when not so employed, of any of the men. A section of the field will be set aside for the use of non-specialized athletics, so that the men who most need physical exercise and generally get the least of it may play baseball, football, soccer, or at other sports they enjoy. It is expected that this department in athletics will make outdoor sports so attractive that every man will take some part in them.
But the competitive features will not be neglected, and a football field for rapidly as possible with vines trained on a woven-wire fence. Moveable bleachers, in sections, will be provided.
AUTOISTS PLAN TRIP
Charles W. Risley and John F. Risley and their families left Monday in two automobiles for Southern Oregon. They will be absent several weeks, and will tour through Southern and Eastern Oregon, visiting Medford, Crater Lake and Eastern Oregon towns. Both men are prominent members of the Clackamas County Automobile club.
SWEDISH SERVICE
Rev. John Ovall, the Swedish minister who has charge of the Swedish church work in this part of the county, will preach in the Methodist church tomorrow evening, Thursday, at 8 p. m. All welcome.

WILLAMETTE HOLDS BALLOTING TODAY

Willamette today will try for the second time to increase her territory, so as to include about two-fifths of the valuable mill property that has heretofore been outside of the corporate limits of the city, and also to prevent the proposed city of West Linn from gaining too great a share of the benefits of the Willamette school district. A former election, held for a similar purpose, was defeated in its purpose by three votes.
The election today concerns more territory than did the former one, and the territory added to what was formerly desired was picked with a view to the inclination of its inhabitants to join the city. Learning of this, some voters who were opposed to seeing the annexation scheme go through moved into the territory where a vote is cast, and establishing "residence" in tents, declared that they would claim the right to cast a ballot. It is believed that their votes will be challenged if they attempt to enter the polling places.
