AS ONE MAN The Molalla Pioneer, VIEWS IT a newspaper which has kept entirely out of the recall discussion, and which heretofore has taken no side in the fight, now announces itself as opposed to the movement. Editor Taylor has suspended judgment in the matter until he could hear all sides of the argument, and having digested the information obtainable, expresses himself as follows:

"We have read everything we could get bearing on the present recall election. We approached it without prejudices. We did not know a person in question. Not even the editor scrappers in the case. Our conviction is that there has not been a case made against the court strong enough to warrant their recall."

OPPORTUNITY The question is of TO BOOST ten asked as to what is the one thing a commercial club, or any body of citizens interested in the advancement of a community, can do to better that community. The answer is not easy to give, because conditions are different in every town or city, and what would be good advice for one would not be particularly useful in another. Of course every such organization tries to interest new settlers in its own community, and endeavors to put before the rest of the world the attractions of a home in or near its own town, where everything is painted as being ideal.

Sometimes, though, in doing this, such organizations over reach the mark, and miss opportunities near at hand. Oftentimes, when new settlers have been attracted, and have been procured, there is still work that can be done. For instance, if a man comes from Minnesota to some Western section, and settles down, it is quite as necessary that he be provided with a means of livelihood as it is that he be told the advantages of the community into which he has moved. And herein lies a line of effort that any commercial club or similar organization may well specialize in.

Probably no such organization can create a market for the products raised in its vicinity, but it can help find a market. If a new settler is devoting himself to raising poultry, for instance, the commercial club might try and make it easier for him to find a market for his eggs. If the new settler is growing potatoes, the civic organization of his community might do much by making it easy for him to dispose of his crop. Such work can be done by urging local grocers, men, butchers, commission men and other merchants to buy home-grown produce in preference to buying produce elsewhere.

Buying home-grown stuff at home not only helps the settler, but it helps the market community. The farmer who drives into town with a load of spuds, and who can sell them for cash in town, is pretty apt to spend some of that cash next door buying goods for dresses for his children, or shoes for the boys, or shingles for the barn. On the other hand, if the farmer drives into town with a load of spuds, and his crop is not purchased, he will either drive on to the next town to dispose of them, and do his buying there; or he will drive back home again with a well-developed grouch, and will ship his produce to some metropolitan market, and will then order what he needs from a mail-order house in Chicago.

In such cases the central community of his district gets no benefit from his presence. And the settler will not be a booster for the community, and if any of his friends back East write to him, and ask him about his new home, he will answer them that it is a pretty place, but that there is no use of their coming out, as the trade field is limited. And in that way he becomes an actual hindrance to the community, and cannot be blamed for so being.

This is a side of the commercial club question that is not sufficiently regarded in many Western communities. The organizations of this nature that look after settlers after they arrive, it will be found, are the ones that have a "follow-up system," and that never cease their interest in people. They not only get more settlers, but they place benefits in the way of those they have secured, and they help build up both the central town and the surrounding territory. And they do all this without spending any extra money, but merely by urging their own members to always buy what the farmer has to sell. They may not buy at a very high figure, perhaps, but they always buy, and buy for cash. And the greater share of this cash stays in the town through other trade channels.

North Yakima, for instance, is such a town. Its commercial club is never greatly concerned about the Panama canal, or about coast-wide conferences. Its chief business is to make the lot of people near North Yakima as happy and as prosperous as possible. That it has $2,000-an-acre apple land on which to work makes no difference. Hoquiam, where acreage can be had for $100, is working along the same lines. North Yakima has been at it longer than any other community, perhaps, and now all the literature sent out by the North Yakima Commercial Club bears in red ink across it the following legend: "Prospective settlers who have not at least $2,000 are not advised to come to this region."

When a commercial club can print things like that on its literature there must be a reason. North Yakima has looked after its own, and that is the reason. Hoquiam's commercial club is doing much the same as did North Yakima's club, and Hoquiam's territory is developing in much the same way. Other commercial clubs might do well to copy after these two. Looking after one's own may seem selfish, but it pays. And it is logical.

"THIS IS MY 37TH BIRTHDAY"

Earl of Lytton Victor Alexander George Robert Lytton, second Earl of Lytton, was born in Simla, India, Aug. 9, 1876. He is a grandson of the great novelist, Bulwer Lytton, and son of the diplomat and poet who chose the pseudonym "Owen Meredith." The present Earl succeeded his father in 1911. He is said to have inherited, to a large extent, the brilliancy of his father and grandfather. He has taken a prominent part of the debates in the House of Lords and is generally regarded as one of the best orators among the younger generation of British statesmen.

Congratulations to:

Louis P. Hanha, governor of North Dakota, 62 years old today. Marvin Hughtit, former president of the Chicago and Northwestern railway, 76 years old today. Charles Nagel, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor, 64 years old today.

Heart to Heart Talks

"THE STRAIGHT GAME."

George Robinson (not his real name), twenty-four years old, a prisoner in his Britannic majesty's prison of Wormwood Scrubs, saw no use in his continued living, so he hanged himself in his cell. And that was the end of a man who, still very young thought that all hope ended for him when the prison door closed behind him.

When hope dies, all dies. In the working of the universe, wise, though often inscrutable, everything has a purpose. Even the pitifully short and hard life of George Robinson will help to uplift the world, for he left a message.

Before he died he wrote a note to a young woman. In it he said:

The straight game is the best, after all. You who laugh at preaching, who think the teachings of the moralists are "rot," think over the testimony of the poor burglar convict. For himself he realized too late that "the straight game is the best." At the end of a short note to his sweetheart he preached the lesson to the world, that others might read and profit thereby.

He had followed the crooked path, knew the weariness of the journey and the disappointment that lies at the farther end. From afar he had beheld the straight road, traveled in honor and respect, with hard toil perhaps, but still with the strong arm of consciousness of right to help over the rough places. He lacked the courage to cross over.

He had played the crooked game and knew that in it the cards are "stacked" against the player, the dice are loaded and the roulette wheel is weighted.

You can't beat it. He knew the game was crooked, but he had not the moral courage to break away from it. To its very crooked end he played it, for suicide is a crooked way of finishing the game, of casting aside the world's burdens and responsibilities.

The message of George Robinson proved that he had intellect enough to appreciate the meaning of life. If he had had the courage to stick it out to the end and to serve his term, something might have been made of him.

If you are playing the crooked game and think you are going to "get away" with it think of the convict of Wormwood Scrubs and his last message to the world.

LUCK.

Luck is of your own making. Luck means rising at 6 in the morning and living on $1 a day if you can make $2. Luck means the hardships and privations you have not hesitated to endure, the long nights devoted to hard work. Luck means the appointments you have never failed to keep, the train you have never failed to catch. Luck means the trusting in God and your own resources. Luck comes to them who help themselves and know how to wait.—Max O'Rell.

Howard Elliott Rose From $40 A Month to $100,000 a Year

THIRTY years ago Howard Elliott followed Horace Greeley's advice and went west. He became a forty dollar a month clerk at Burlington, Ia. Now he returns east to become the $100,000 a year president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. How did he do it? Hard work, backed by a well grounded education. His parents weren't wealthy, and he had a hard struggle to get through Harvard. He was born in New York city, brought up in New England and won his success in the west. He became president of the Northern Pacific, succeeding Charles S. Mellen. Now he succeeds Mellen as head of the New Haven system. He announces a new "open door" policy for the New England lines, which will be in contrast with the stand of President Mellen, who has long been under fire tastes, but the chief characteristics of the old piece of headgear are clearly seen. The puffed crown is of bright green silk and the brim of gray straw. About the crown is a band of black velvet dotted with green silk roses. The veil is of white washable chiffon cloth.

A Good Suggestion.

When you go on your summer trip have four or five pieces of mat or straw board cut the size of the inside of your trunk, so that they will slip in easily. Wrap dresses in tissue paper and tie to these boards with tape. You can pack or unpack and nothing need be disturbed until it is ready to be worn. You may almost live in a trunk with such an arrangement.

To Launder Handkerchiefs.

A sheet of glass large enough to hold two handkerchiefs on each side is a convenient article to put in the trunk. It can be easily exposed to light and air and iron handkerchiefs better than a windowpane or mirror.

The Whole Show. When Rubinstein was traveling through the United States upon a concert tour it chanced that Barnum's circus followed exactly the same route chosen by the great Russian. "On one occasion, when the train was filled with snake charmers, acrobats, clowns and the like, the guard, noticing perhaps Rubinstein's remarkable appearance, asked him, "Do you belong to the show?" Turning his lionine head with a savage shake, Rubinstein fiercely growled out, "Sir, I am the show!"

NOTICES

ORDER In the County Court of the state of Oregon, for the county of Clackamas.

In the matter of the guardianship of Frieda Braunschweiger, an insane person.

It appearing to this court from the petition this day presented and filed by Edward Braunschweiger, the guardian of the person and estate of Frieda Braunschweiger, an insane person, praying for an order of sale of the undivided interest in certain real estate belonging to said ward, described as follows: An undivided one-fourth interest in lot numbered nine (9) in block numbered forty-nine (49) in Oregon Iron & Steel company's first addition to the town of Oswego, in Clackamas county, state of Oregon; that it is for the best interest of said ward and necessary that said real estate be sold.

It is therefore ORDERED that the next of kin of said ward, or persons interested in said estate, appear before this court on Monday, the 11th day of August, 1913, at 2:00 o'clock p. m., in the court room of this court at the court house in the county of Clackamas, state of Oregon, then and there to show cause why an order should not be granted for the sale of said real estate. And it is further ORDERED that a copy of this order be published at least once a week for three successive weeks before the said day of hearing, in the "Morning Enterprise," a newspaper of general circulation in said county of Clackamas, state of Oregon, published at Oregon City.

R. B. BEATIE, Judge. Dated July 18th, 1913, and first published July 19th, 1913.

SUMMONS In the Circuit Court of the state of Oregon, for the county of Clackamas.

Gertrude Harrington, Plaintiff, vs. Jere M. Harrington, Defendant.

To Jere M. Harrington, defendant: In the Name of the State of Oregon: You are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint filed against you in the above entitled action on or before August 25, 1913; and if you fail to answer for want thereof, the plaintiff will take a decree dissolving the marriage relation now existing between you and the plaintiff, and also for the restoration of her maiden name, Gertrude Greaves.

Service of this summons is made upon you by publication in pursuance of an order of the Hon. J. A. Babin, circuit judge of Clackamas county, made July 11th, 1913, directing such publication in the Morning Enterprise once a week for six (6) successive weeks, the first publication being July 12, 1913, and the last being August 23, 1913.

I. N. HICKS, Attorney for Plaintiff.

NOTICE OF MEETING OF VIEWERS to assess damages and benefits for establishing a street on the bluff between Sixth and Seventh streets.

Notice is hereby given the city council of Oregon City, Oregon, at special meeting thereof held on the 29th day of July, 1913, at 9:30 o'clock a. m., appointed three disinterested free holders, of said Oregon City possessing the quality of jurors of the Circuit court of said Clackamas county, to-wit: O. Dollar Spirit Prevails In England

By C. E. JERNINGHAM, "Marmaduke," English Journalist

PROBABLY there never was a nation so susceptible to influences from the outside as England. Even within the last half century France, Germany and the United States have STAMPED DISTINCTIVE IMPRESSIONS upon English manners and customs and greatly modified the course of thought of the country and the character of its people.

IT IS A HARLEQUIN JOHN BULL THAT WOULD NOW BE A BETTER REPRESENTATIVE OF THE RACE. TO HAVE A FRENCH MIND IN AN ENGLISH BODY IS ATTEMPTED BY MANY—A COMBINATION TO WHICH IS OCCASIONALLY ADDED THE DOLLAR SPIRIT PECULIAR TO NEW YORK. ENGLAND IS THE PARADISE OF THE UNSOCIABLE.

It is the millionaire who is the attraction, not the woman nor the wit. EVERYTHING IS FOR SALE—family portraits, treasures accumulated through ages, the estates, wines, cigars, motorcars, titles, friends, sons, daughters.
