YOUR DUTY—Every citizen of Clackamas county has a public duty to perform next Saturday, and should plan to perform that duty. Nothing should be permitted to stand in the way. No other engagement should be allowed to interfere. The duty of every man and woman who is legally qualified on Saturday is to VOTE.

Saturday is the day when the people will decide whether faithful county officials are to be recalled because of the pique and jealousy of a few disgruntled folk who seek to run this county for selfish purposes, and who want to garner to themselves "plums" which shall be paid for by the public money. Saturday is the time when the trumped-up charges of the valiant trio will be put to test, and so that there shall be no doubt about the public verdict, every legally qualified voter should go to the polls and VOTE.

Some citizens entitled to the ballot may not have registered. The law provides for such contingencies, and if there are any who have failed to observe the preliminary formalities, they should take six-freeholders to the polls with them and swear their ballot in. But most important of all, everybody should VOTE.

The main hope of those who are trying to besmirch the records of County Judge R. B. Beattie and County Commissioner N. Blair is that their supporters will be over-confident, and will not think it necessary to go to the polls to support these men. The coming election is not a time for any display of confidence save in one form, and that is by VOTE.

Charges have been preferred, but not supported, which concern every citizen of the county. These charges are not generally believed. People who do not believe them should not stop at mere denial, however; they should rebuke Oids and Brown and Hagemann and Castro and Schuebel and the others of their camp by expressing their opinion at the polls. They should VOTE.

The most important thing to do next Saturday is to VOTE. This means you!

83 YEARS On August 12th, 1830, OF GOING just 83 years ago today, a number of daring souls risked their lives, as they thought, by mounting a

Methods of Gaining Happiness

THE present age is a less emotional period than that of fifty years ago. As an example observe the prevalence of fainting then, but there is still much nervousness. If there were LESS OF ARGUMENT, SWEARING AND FRETTING and more willingness to listen to criticism in a sane manner there would be few cases of nervous prostration.

The workingman should come home each day TIRED AND HAPPY instead of tired and cross.

The child of today, after crawling in its crib, has discarded the "Now I lay me down to sleep" in favor of "Don't mention death to me or I will lie awake all night."

new-fangled contrivance hooked on behind an engine that snorted and threw out volumes of sparks, and made the first railroad trip in these United States, traveling from Albany to Schenectady—a distance just about as far as from Oregon City to the heart of Portland. The trip took about two hours, and was regarded as a most wonderful achievement. Those who survived the journey with no more serious injuries than accumulating cinder burns underneath their collars, where hot sparks from the puffing engine lodged, and who lost no other raiment than a burned up parasol or a badly scorched beaver hat, were the envy of all, for their had been an experience both unique and marvelous.

Today, somewhat over four score years, since, are express trains which run from Albany to Schenectady in 17 minutes, and don't even hesitate at the latter place. Sometimes they do it in less, for where the first train puffed and jerked its uneven way it is now one of the most superb roadbeds in the nation, and the things that they do in speed over the tracks there even surpass the stunts of the North Coast Limited, when it is about two hours late at Stampede tunnel, and "falls down" the grade so as to arrive in Tacoma and Seattle on time.

Across New York state, of which the Albany-Schenectady bit is merely a step, they whisk trains at speeds often exceeding 70 miles per hour, and when one stops to consider that such a rate is just about ten times as fast as was done 83 years ago, that is "going some."

Eighty-three years of railroading in the United States has brought on refinement and advancements well worth considering. Steam locomotives in this land of the free, when letting themselves out, have hit it up at a rate of 112 miles an hour for over 89 miles at a stretch. Electric locomotives, testing their ability to catch up with the speed of the earth which revolves at a little better than 1,041 miles an hour, have attained 170 miles an hour—and then flown to pieces. But 112 miles an hour is fast enough; and the fact that this can be made in comfort is a sufficient proof of the perfection of railroading in this country. It is something to boast about, considering that it has been attained in 83 years.

People who journey from Oregon City to Portland, and who make the trip in something less than an hour, have enough to congratulate themselves upon, however. They are making a journey very similar to that pioneer trip made this day years ago, but are making it as a matter of course and with much less peril. In fact it is such a commonplace affair that one traveling thusly can hardly appreciate the feelings of those who made a trip of equal length when the iron horse was new and "unbroken," and when electric traction was undreamed. Yet the differences between the Oregon City-Portland trip of today, the Albany-Schenectady trip of 83 years ago does not begin to cover the span of railroad progress.

Since the first trip behind what small boys delight to call the "choo-choo" have come comfortable cars, Pullman sleepers and rolling palaces, block system signals that insure perfect safety, steel coaches that make collisions mere inconvenient jarrings, undreamed of ease of riding and speeds, and the rapid transmission of mails and express matter. People are now able to scoot from one side of the continent to the other in four days if they are in a tremendous hurry and in five if they are merely traveling at leisure. The iron horse has conquered mountains, leaps across rivers and capons on bridges that seem to be mere cobwebs, and when necessary bobs through the hills like a mole. Travel goes on by day and night with equal ease and speed, and there is scarcely a hamlet in the whole land that cannot be reached, or almost reached, by the steel trail. Surely this is a remarkable development for 83 years, surely it is typical of American progress and mastery.

"THIS IS MY 61ST BIRTHDAY"

Earl of Kintore

Sir Algernon H. T. Keith-Falconer, tenth Earl of Kintore, was born in Edinburgh, August 12, 1830, and succeeded to the earldom on the death of his father in 1880. He was educated at Cambridge University and for many years has been prominent in public life in Great Britain. A strong supporter of Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Balfour, he became a candidate for a seat in the house of commons in 1880, and after succeeding to the earldom he was for a time the first government "whip" in the house of lords. In 1889 he became captain of the Yeoman of the Guard, which position he resigned three years later to accept appointment as governor and commander-in-chief of South Australia. The Earl of Kintore's family played a prominent part in the early history of Scotland. The first earl was appointed hereditary knight marshal of Scotland from the hands of Cromwell.

WARFARE.

Regular troops alone are equal to the exigencies of modern war as well for defense as offense, and when a substitute is attempted it must prove illusory and ruinous. No militia will ever acquire the habits necessary to resist a regular force. The firmness requisite for the real business of fighting is only to be attained by constant course of discipline and service. I have never yet been a witness to a single instance that can justify a different opinion, and it is most earnestly to be wished that the liberties of America may no longer be trusted in a matter of degree to so precarious a defense.—George Washington

The frontiers of states are either large rivers or chains of mountains or deserts. Of all these obstacles to the march of an army the most difficult to overcome is the desert; mountains come next, and broad rivers occupy the third place.—Napoleon Answered the Question.

W. J. Fox, a free trade colleague of John Bright, was a clever debater and unexcelled in repartee. His chief heckler in Oldham was a local baker, who once had the misfortune to be fined by the magistrates for selling short weight bread. Fox also had the misfortune to separate from his wife. On one occasion, after he had delivered an address to his constituents, the baker got up and said: "Mr. Fox, there is just one question I should like to ask you. What has become of your wife?" "Sir," replied Fox, "she has been weighed in the balance and found wanting."

New and the Old in Aquatic Sports During Summer Term

Photos by American Press Association.

HERE you see illustrated the new and the old in aquatic sports. Canoe tilting is one of the recent games which has gained favor as a summer pastime. It's full of excitement for those who participate and for those who watch. There's a thrill in almost every move. The contestants try to dump each other into the water. Now, every one knows that a canoe is the easiest thing in the world to tip over, but in this game a noticeable feature is the fact that it's hard to overturn the canoe unless the tilting is done in the right way. The contestants wear bathing suits, and so a ducking does them no harm. If they are overturned they scramble back, and the contest is on again. Tub racing is one of the oldest but funnest of water games. One of the side splitting spills is here illustrated.
