For the Children Boys, Here's a Fine Chance to Play Polo.

READY FOR THE GAME

Boys, here's the chance of your life. Play polo this summer on roller skates and be up to the minute in sports. No doubt all of you were excited over the recent international polo match at Meadowbrook, N. Y., and three your caps high in the air when our team licked the British players, but we didn't lick them hard, for the score, you remember, was 4 1/2 to 4 1/2 in the Americans' favor. It was a peachy game from our standpoint.

Well, a sport loving New York boy has organized two teams, who oppose each other in what he calls "roller skate polo."

For the field he uses an old tennis court. At each end are the goal posts, twenty-four feet apart. Hard rubber balls of medium size and mallets are used, the latter in sizes to suit the individual players. Each man is "mounted" on ball bearing roller skates.

When the timers give the signal for the commencement of the game the teams line up to the opposite sides of a mark drawn across the field, the referee throws the ball and the match is on. The object of each team is to drive the ball between or over the goal posts defended by the opposing team.

A goal counts one. When a ball crosses a side line it is out of bounds. Should a ball cross an end line it is also out of bounds, and the side defending the goal is entitled to a knock in, the ball being placed on the line at the point where it crossed, but in no case nearer to the goal posts than ten feet.

Now, boys, go in and win.

Here's the Only Movable Tunnel On the Map and It's Unique

CALIFORNIA boasts of many big and odd things that the rest of the country does not possess, such as giant redwood trees and sixty-seven varieties of climate, but now it is capping the climax with the only movable street tunnel in the country. This unique tunnel is formed under the old residence of Adolf Spreckles, which is being moved. When the contract for the removal of the house was signed the street railway company objected to the obstruction of traffic, and it forced the movers to elevate the house so that cars could pass beneath it. The movers proceeded via the aerial route. The picture shows a street car passing through the movable tunnel.

Heroic Treatment

By F. TOWNSEND SMITH

My friend Rogers was forty years old and a bachelor. He had no taste for society, and his life was solitary in the extreme.

I had been to his room occasionally, and his landlady knew my name. One day Rogers had worked himself up to such a condition that she feared he was going to commit suicide. They hunted my name in the telephone register and called me up to say that she wished I would come round and take charge of him. I went to his room and found him walking the floor with a desperate look in his eye. I took him out with me for dinner, after which we went to the theater, and he spent the night in my rooms. Before going to bed I said to him:

"Togers, the thing for you to do is to get married."

"Who would marry me?"

"I know several young women who would be glad to get you. I'll introduce you to the one that I think would be the most likely to suit you if you like."

"Anything to relieve me of myself."

The young person to whom I introduced Rogers was twenty-seven years old. Not having thus far fulfilled the condition for which she was made—a wife and mother—she was beginning to get dissatisfied with herself and those about her. I told her of Rogers' case, and she confessed that it was much like her own. She, too, said "anything but the life of an old maid."

It was understood when I brought them together that it was for the purpose of matrimony, and they didn't pretend to what they did not feel—that they were in that delirium commonly called love. They made short work of the preliminaries and, being very much pleased with each other, became engaged and were married.

I think their honeymoon was as happy as it is with married couples usually. Both seemed to have taken laughing gas. There was no attention too great or too trivial for Rogers to pay his wife, and she seemed disposed to suffer any inconvenience rather than put him to the slightest discomfort.

I called on them soon after their marriage. Then I did not see them again for six months. I met Rogers and, grasping him by the hand, said: "How are you, old man? How goes married life?"

"Oh, married life is well enough, I suppose."

"Well enough? Why, I thought at first you considered it delightful."

"That was in the beginning, when we hadn't really settled down to the business of married life. I find double harness pretty hard to work in some-times."

"Have any company?"

"All we want."

"Well, I'm coming round to see you pretty soon."

When I called Rogers had been detained at business, and I was entertained by his wife. Being an old friend of mine, I did not hesitate to ask her how married life suited her.

"Oh, I don't suppose," she said, "that Ed is any harder to live with than most men?"

"He isn't soubser, is he?"

"Oh, no; he is cheerful enough, but I surprise him every now and then by not being what he has always supposed a woman to be, and if all men are what he is sometimes they must be!"

While we were talking in came Ed. He saw by his wife's expression that she had been pouring her troubles into my ear, and he didn't like it. He sat down with a very ugly look on his face.

"Well," he said to me, "I suppose she's been making me out a pretty hard nut."

"See here," I said, flaring up, "I did the best I could for you two in bringing you together. If you want to quarrel I would prefer that you leave me out."

"Who's drawing you in?" asked the husband, with a snarl.

"He's drawn himself in," snapped the wife. "He tried to pump you when he met you the other day, then came around here to pump me."

Good Form

On the Steamer. There is just as surely an etiquette for a steamer as for a drawing room, and for the benefit of readers who contemplate a trip on the water some of the formalities on board ship will be talked about.

After finding the location of your room and receiving the room key from the purser you should investigate your baggage, and if any is missing the cabin steward will direct you to the official to whom complaints can be made. It is wise to find out any little "landmarks" that will help you in locating your cabin, thus preventing mistakes and facilitating journeys to and from your room.

The next thing to do is to secure your seat at the dining table. You will be given a check, generally, which will place you in the dining room. This is given to the head steward on your first meal, and unless changed you should take the same seat at all subsequent meals.

Your deck chair is also important if you intend to profit by a rest each day. The deck steward for a stated fee will seat you and mark your chair by a card with your name written on it. It is unpardonable to use another person's chair regularly, for nothing is so embarrassing to the rightful occupant as to find a chair filled and to be compelled to evict the man or woman who should have one of his own.

At table it is quite correct to speak to the ones seated near you. A "good evening" or "good morning" serves to break the ice. It is also permissible to speak to one's fellow passengers after the first day. It is very convenient to have some one introduce other men and women, but there is an informality on shipboard that bridges many gaps. Above all, do not overstep the bounds of good breeding. Do not bring on yourself the censure and adverse criticism of others.

Do not indulge in gossip, unkind criticism of others and be a nuisance by complaining against the accommodations and service. This type of travel is never a favorite, and the punishment falls on his own head by the flight of others at his approach.

On the majority of lines it is not yet the accepted thing for a woman to go to the smoking room with a man to enjoy her after dinner coffee. The German steamers have shown a departure from this rule if the woman be married, in a party or with an older chaperon.

It is not obligatory to subscribe to the sea concert, but nearly every one does. Indeed, it is counted in with your "extra expenses" these days. If talented you should be a gracious contributor when asked.

STATE RIGHTS.

I solemnly believe that our political system is, in its purity, not only the best that ever was formed, but the best possible that can be devised for us. It is the only one by which free states, so populous and wealthy and occupying so vast an extent of territory, can preserve their liberty. Thus thinking, I cannot hope for a better. Having no hope of a better, I am a conservative, and because I am a conservative I believe that in the rights of the states are to be found the only effectual means of checking the overaction of this government, to resist its tendency here and to prevent a departure from the constitution, or, in case of one, to restore the government to its original simplicity and purity. —John C. Calhoun.

PESSIMISM.

We are but as the leaves which appear with the flowers of spring. —Homer.

The best for mortals not to have been born or to look upon the light of the sun. No mortal is happy all his days. —Bacchylides.

THEOCRITUS.

Demeter, rich in fruit and rich in grain, may this corn be easy to win and fruitful exceedingly. See that the cut stubble faces the north wind or the west; 'tis thus the grain waxes richest. They that thrash corn should stum the noontide sleep. At noon the chaff parts easiest from the straw. As for the reapers, let them begin when the crested lark is waking and cease when he sleeps, but take holiday in the heat. Lads, the frog has a jolly life. He is not cumbered about a butter to his drink, for he has liquor by him unstinted. Roll the lentils better, thou miserly steward. Take heed lest thou chop thy fingers when thou art splitting cumin seed. —Songs of the Reapers.

TENNIS MEN TRAIN WRONG.

Wrenn Tells Why Many Racketers Are Never Successful.

There was once a United States tennis champion by the name of Robert D. Wrenn. Wrenn was also a famous football player. And in speaking of the two Wrenn once said:

"There is no comparison in the strain the two games put upon the body. It is much easier to go through two thirty-five-minute halves of football than to play a five set championship tennis match."

"Many young players begin too strenuously. The first spring day on the courts calls invitingly for a good long afternoon's sport. Result, getting overfired."

"The right way to play tennis is to start in easily. Don't play more than two sets of singles and only one of doubles on the first day out. Don't even engage in those if you feel tired after the first or second set. It is not an indication of weakness, but of strength, if you quit before you have had enough."

Seasoned. Auntie—I notice your dolly doesn't cry "Mamma" when she is squeezed now. She did when I bought her for you. Niece—No, auntie; but you forget this is her second season out—London Opinion.

CLOSE TABS KEPT ON BROWNS' PLAYERS.

The St. Louis Browns' clubhouse is the only one equipped with a time clock which the players must punch when they report for morning practice.

This fact occasioned Jack Powell and Jimmy Williams to wire Bobby Wallace from Louisville, "Do you have to wind up the clock every time you make a hit, and have they put a whistle on the clubhouse yet?"

I. C. S. An Ethical Power

Now, gentlemen, just for a moment, I would speak to you, not as an educationalist, but as a preacher of manhood and a lover of his kind. The question of the use of alcohol by the student when studying, has carried me back to the thought, The International Correspondence Schools are not simply educational, they are ethical; they not only make foremen and craftsmen and draftsmen, but they make MEN—in capital letters. For you can never awaken any one to his commercial possibilities without stirring up all other possibilities—social, patriotic, philanthropic, intellectual, moral. The moment you succeed breaking up one area of inertia you set vibration moving through every part of the being and all kinds of dormant and stagnant powers are set into healthy motion. When a man's mind gets engrossed with an intellectual occupation and he finds that he has a grip upon the laws and forces of the universe, the saloon, the vulgar and degrading...
