Child's Knowledge of Art. A teacher was surprised one morning to see a pupil who had come to school for the first time showing a remarkable interest in the reprints of great paintings which she had arranged along the blackboard. Unobserved, she drew near the child and was further astonished to hear her exclaim delightedly, "There's 'Baby Stuart,' the 'Sistine Madonna' and 'The Horse Fair."

This teacher mentioned the occur rence to another teacher, who told her that the child's brother and sister had likewise surprised her by the knowledge they had not only of masterpieces in painting, but of sculpture and architecture as well. Later the teachers met the children's mother and were shown the playroom.

Instead of the highly colored pictures that one so often sees in playrooms, there were several good paintings illustrative of the time honored childlore and the ever new fairy tale. One could readily see that considerable time and money must have been spent on these pictures. The visitors particularly admired the imaginative suggestion and harmonious coloring of a painting of Cinderella. "That pieture," said the mother, "is the best we have in the house. My little daughters and I sacrificed our new spring bonnets at Cinderella's shrine the first time we caught a glimpse of her."

Numerous prints of great paintings were arranged in groups according to subjects around the room. These pictures were mounted on mats of uniform size and color, and each one was plainly labeled with the name of its author and its subject.

. "The pictures in the various groups are constantly changing." the mother explained. "If any one finds a picture which appeals to him it is brought in for consideration. No picture, however, gets the coveted place in the group if any of the children raise a valid objection to it. This censorship not only develops the children's observation and judgment, but keeps the groups of pictures from becoming too large and usually insures survival of the fittest. "At different seasons the interest is transferred from one group to another. disease. At Christmas the Madonnas claim most of our interest; later, when the children are enthusiastically building snow houses and fashioning snow men, we naturally turn to the groups headed by the Coliseum and Michelangelo's David. In the spring we are all enthusi-

WHEN PITCHER BROWN WAS NOT RECOGNIZED.

Recently a Cincinnati friend and admirer of Mordecai Brown entertained the three fingered pitcher at one of the fashionable country clubs in the vicinity of the Ohio city. Said friend introduced the miner to a great baseball fan, and they took lunch together on the veranda

This fan failed to connect Brown up with the famous pitch er and during the course of the conversation asked him if he liked baseball.

"I certainly do," smiled Brown. "So do 1," enthusiastically. "I just love to get out and play whenever I can. Do you ever play?"

"Occusionally."

"What position do you prefer?" "Oh, pitching, I guess. During this time Brown had his right hand on the table in full view, showing his world renowned three fingers. The last remark was too much for the man who had brought Brownie out to the club. He couldn't help introducing Mordecal to the fan again.

It is said the expression which spread over his map was wonderful to see when he wised up.

The International Correspond-ence Schools are not simply educational, they are ethical; they not make foremen and craftsmen and draftsmen, but they make MEN-in capital letters. For you can never awaken any one to his commercial possibilities without stirring up all other possibilities-sopatriotic, philanthropic, intellectual, moral. The moment you succial. ceed breaking up one area of inertia you set vibration moving through every part of the being and all kinds of dormant and stagnant powers are set into healthy motion. When a man's mind gets engrossed with an intellectual occupation and he finds that he has a grip upon the laws and forces of the universe, the saloon, the vulgar and degrading show, the curb-stone loafing, and the hours of inane and ribald waste all seem to be unworthy of him and his self-respect clothes him in a protective armor which helps to keep his entire manhood inviolate. A great American preacher used to speak much about "the expulsive power of a new affection," and, having as your life work the duty of both supplying and developing this "new affection"-the love of the best, by which the unworthy and base will be expelled, perhaps unconsciously but surely, from many and many a man.
