MOVIES AS AN Moving pictures are rapidly becoming more of a factest city with its daily change of program.

On the screen, the average man or woman sees and gathers more information as to the world and its happenings than by any hurried scanning of numbers of printed pages. The moving story is rapidly taking its place with the newspapers of the land in its ability to tell the events accurately ture. and well as they happen even in the isolated quarters of the globe.

The dramatization of many of the world's best literary productions is bringing home to the masses of the country those stories that are the classics of literature and that are known to most persons only by name. The "movie" is by increasing strides taking an important and influential place in the world's disseminators of news and in its becoming, with the newspa-

ENTERPRISE pers, a factor that is to be reckoned with in the molding of the public opinion as to men and events

There are many things that can be told accurately and vividly only through the "movie" of today. The historic struggles through which the nation has passed in its years of history, the great battles of the war with E. E. BRODIE - - - - Editor and Publisher Britian and in the conflict between the states can best be shown to the growing child or to the average man or woman through the medium of the screen. To them, it teaches a new phase of the battles that have made history. It tells them things that the printed page cannot bring home to them in nearly as clear or vivid way.

It gives them an insight into the struggles that have taken place in the $3.00 historic days of the country's wars and shows to them how are armies 1.50 marched, how the guns roared, and men fell as some one or other important Four months by mail_______1.00 strategic point was reached that turned the tide of defeat into a nation's

> Is there a clearer way of impressing upon the mind of the man or woman how these things were done than by showing him the position of the hostile forces in action as they were on the days when history was made?

Through the highly centralized film companies of the country, these EDUCATION or in the educational life of any community in the coun-picture stories of historical events are given with considerable accuracy and try, from the little hamlet with its show once or twice a week to the larg- detail. They tell the story in a clear and concise way. What is true of historical events, is also true of most of the pictures taken from the field of natural history. The lives and habits of the beasts that inhabit the dense forests and the darkest jungle's are thrown on the screen in a way that tells the history of their activities in their native homes. Some of these pictures are taken at a cost that is, in itself, a story of romance and adven-

The men who "hunt with the camera," who risk their lives that the men and women at home may see thrown on the screen at a moving picture house the lives and habits of the jungle's best specimen of ferocity and savagery, are men whose lives are filled with romance and adventure. To them, the tiger in his lair, the lion as he roams through his native haunts is a beast that must be caught-not with the net or the bullet of a rifle-but with the rapidly moving film of a camera. The more danger there is in the adventurge, the more excitment generated by the hunt for the wild beasts, the more they enjoy their lives of activity in the open and the hunt that has for its only aim the education of the masses at home, a thousand or three thousand miles from the jungle haunts of the beasts of the zoo.

All of these pictures are good. They are educational. They tend to teach the masses of the people something of the events of the world as they anspire thousands of miles away. They widen the vision, broaden the view, of the busy man or woman. They give him a new insight into things that are not otherwise brought home to him.

But there are movies and there are pictures that by some hook or crook get past the searching eyes of the National Board of Censorship that are worse than the infamous dime novels and the stories of the wild West. What the yellow back novels have done in the way of demoralizing the youth of the community, what they have aroused in the minds of boys and girls all over the country, these moving pictures are capable of repeating. As the "movie" is an influence for good in an educational line, so it may be a degrading factor that arouses evil and dangerous ambitions in the minds of those who see it and who do not make the proper allowances for its exag-

A "movie" that brings in its train a nightmare or that leaves an impression that is other than elevating or educational does not fulfill its mission. Its effects the same results that the stories of the "wild and wooly West" bring to the minds of small boys, arousing their ambitions to become murderous bandits of the plains. It is demoralizing, degenerating,

Such "movies" are usually caught before they make they public appearances. Others, however, manage to get by the all-seeing eye of the board. It is a pity that even these are allowed on the screens of the picture houses for their dangerous effect upon the public mind is more than can be measured by the actual box receipts at the houses where they are shown.
