CITY OFFICIAL NEWSPAPER

THE GOSPEL OF GOOD ROADS By bond issues and by appropriations through the various county courts, the gospel of good roads is being spread over the length and breadth of the state and the logic of road improvement has taken a firmer hold on the minds of the people than ever before in the history of the movement.

For more than 20 years, the gospel of road improvement has been taught in all of the commercial clubs and public spirited organizations every where but the question has been neglected from time to time because of the expense that is involved, the ultimate saving both to the city and to the county having been lost sight of in face of the original cost.

But, today, conditions have materially changed. Everywhere over the state, the people are awakening to a realization that only by the construction of better roads and by the improvement of those that they have can they reduce the cost of transportation to the city markets and cut down the expense to the farmer with a resulting increase in the size of his bank account.

Jackson county has been one of the leaders of the state in the matter of good roads. A pavement highway that will later form one of the links in the great Pacific Highway stretching up and down the coast will be constructed under the direction of Major Bowlby, state highway engineer, at a cost of $500,000.

Last Tuesday, the people of that county voted the bonds that would make that unit in the state government one long line of highway creditable not only to the county that builds it but to the state in which it lies. For good roads do not only reflect credit upon the builder of them but they spread the contagion through neighboring and adjoining counties and districts and inspire in other governmental units the ambition to show themselves as energetic and progressive as those that have them.

Good roads are more contagious than smallpox. They spread the fever rapidly through communities and counties and increase in virulence as they spread. There is nothing better than a good road to enforce the logic of road improvement and there is no more wholesome force for the betterment of the public highways than the existence, either in this county or adjoining ones, of thoroughfares that are completely up to date in the matter of scientific construction and engineering.

For the improvement of the highways of the state, Jackson county has taken a step in the right direction. Its heavy vote for the construction of the new highway indicates the progressiveness of the voting strength of that unit in the state government. It shows that the farmers there realize the importance of a good road in the question of transportation of products to the markets and that this importance has been impressed upon the people of the cities in the county until they have supported heavily and enthusiastically the demand of those farmers for better road work and more road work through the districts.

Such a step on the part of Jackson county will have a wholesome effect upon the other units of the state in the matter of road improvement. It will show other counties how a good permanent highway can be built at a cost that is in nowise prohibitive. It will prove, beyond the possibility of question, that a good highway cuts the transportation cost, that it adds money to the farmer's bank deposit, that it means an annual saving in that county alone of nearly enough in one single year to pay for the construction work.

There is nothing succeeds like success and there is nothing that gives a greater impetus to the most up to date road building than the actual construction of a road by capable engineers and the results that are gained the first year after its completion.

Clackamas county has also taken an important step forward in the matter of better roads when the commissioners let a contract the other day

Unskilled Labor Is a Waste That Could Be Rectified

By OWEN R. LOVEJOY, General Secretary of the National Child Labor Committee

THERE IS NO TASK WHICH CAN BE AS WELL PERFORMED BY THE UNINTELLIGENT AS BY THE INTELLIGENT WORKER, AND IT IS AS TRUE THAT NO WORK EVER WILL EXIST WHICH IS SO SIMPLE THAT THE TRAINED WORKER CANNOT DO IT BETTER THAN THE UNTRAINED WORKER.

The minimum wage must be advanced and will be as the average of trained intelligence is raised.

The theory that there should be, for the good of the community, a large class so unskilled that they are glad to get any work to do at any wage has been a STUMBLING BLOCK IN THE PATH OF PROGRESS for, lo, many years. We are now beginning to become CONVERSANT WITH ITS FALSITY.

In the United States there is no such thing as any industry demanding UNSKILLED labor. The presence of such labor is A NATIONAL HANICAP. We have it plentifully. We have thousands of unskilled workers who can do any rough old job you put them at—and do it wrong.

But no kind of work which ever has been done by any human being, from the painting of a picture to the gathering of garbage, CAN BE DONE AS WELL BY UNSKILLED AS BY SKILLED WORK-PEOPLE. We must, as soon as may be, remove the wrong impression from our minds. It has been the base of much of our industrial trouble.

for one mile of macadam on the River road running near Milwaukie. The court has also planned the construction of several bridges through the county that shorten the haul and add materially to the reduction in the transportation cost. Shorter hauls and easier hauls are the results that are to be gained from road improvement everywhere and they can be as easily gained in Clackamas County as they have been in thousands of other places through the state and nation.

The first step has been taken. The county court has let its first bid for a permanent road—one good long mile of it. There is no reason why more miles should not be added to that important highway in the county or why miles of road elsewhere should not be built where they will form main trunk lines for a permanent system of road construction—adding to the bank roll of the farmer and facilitating the ease of haul into the markets of the city.

HOME STUDY IN SCHOOL TEACHING Individual study is the key note of a teacher's success and upon the extent to which he applies that investigation of the peculiar characteristics of each child before him in his classes, together with the home life that surrounds that child out of school, depends that teacher's results in the class room and the standing of that child in his daily work.

Superintendent L. R. Alderman of the Portland schools in an address delivered before 1000 of his teachers drove home the force of that logic at a meeting the other day in his high school auditorium and impressed upon the faculty mind of that gathering the importance that each individual case bears to the general average of success in school work.

No truth is so strong in educational work as that which the new superintendent emphasized at the meeting—that the teacher's work is not done when the gong has sounded for the end of the session nor is all of the work to be done in the class room when the child is in school. Outside of the school room, there are influences at work that may counteract all of the efforts that teacher has put forth during that day and that are enough to discourage the best professional man or woman on the faculty of any public institution.

Years ago, children failed to pass their examinations, dropped behind in their classes, showed no interest in their work in spite of all that the teacher could do or say that would stimulate in them the interest that was lacking. Investigations revealed the fact that some of these children were suffering from maladies of various kinds, that they were not physically fit to be in a school room, and that their diseases were such that they could not concentrate their mind upon the work in hand.

These discoveries resulted in the campaign that has now spread over the whole country for free examinations for every child who attends the city schools and for medical investigations into the cause of every delinquency that exists in class work.

The results of these campaigns have been astonishing. They have shown an improvement in the work of 90 per cent of the children who were, before, unable to handle their class work or who showed that they could not hold their minds to their studies.

A thorough study of his home life surrounding each child in the city schools will reveal things to the teacher of which he had not dreamed and will give him pointers on the methods that should be used in the developing of an interest in the work of the school and in the average of success in the class of which he is a part.

THE GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT.

Gratifying Progress Shown in Road Construction Everywhere.

That there are upward of $400,000,000 of good roads bonds issued and outstanding is indicated by the Good Roads Year Book of the United States, the 1913 edition of which has just been issued, containing a resume of the whole road situation. It is evident that, whatever may be the faults in methods of construction and maintenance, money is being spent in sufficient amount to bring about a vast improvement in the public roads. The year book shows $137,000,000 of state and road bonds authorized and $156,000,000 of county bonds outstanding on Jan. 1, 1913, making a total of $293,500,000. As this is based on reports from about 75 per cent of the counties in the United States and as a large number of the individual townships have not reported, it is estimated that the amounts not reported would run the aggregate up to probably $350,000,000, to which should be added ten or fifteen million dollars of the bonds voted in 1912, which have not yet been issued.

Gratifying progress in road construction during the past few years is indicated by the statement in the year book that, while the percentage of all road improvement in the United States at the close of 1909 was 8.06 per cent, the revised statistics to Dec. 31, 1911, show an improved mileage of 10.1 per cent, or a net gain of 1.44 per cent. This does not sound so impressive in terms of percentage, but it means that in the two year period more than 34,000 miles of improved roads were constructed, or 10,000 miles more than the entire mileage of national roads in France.—Scientific American.
