Heaters

Don't shiver through another winter with an old-fashioned heating stove that sends fully half the heat from the fuel out the chimney.

Buy a Hot Blast Heater. It will cut your coal bill exactly in half, for it extracts every bit of heat from the fuel you put into it, and throws it all out into the room.

If your home is a large one, heat it with a Hot Blast Heater, the difference in the cost of fuel will almost pay for it, and it will last for many years.

We have the latest designs, they are an ornament to the home and bring comfort and happiness, while the expense is trifling as compared with furnace costs.

CHICKENOLGY

(Editor, Enterprise, Sept. 22.)

I want to give the readers of the Enterprise two remedies which are simply invaluable to chicken-raisers.

Yesterday my neighbor remarked to me, "I told A— we simply must get at those chicken roosts." The rush of the summer work and hop picking had caused them to be neglected. I'm sure this is no isolated case. Probably in ninety-nine out of every hundred cases the chicken roosts need attention, being infested to a greater or less degree with mites, which are taking the life blood from the chickens, reducing their vitality and strength, which is especially needed just now to take them through the molt and prepare them to lay high priced eggs.

When I asked my neighbor what her remedy was she replied unhesitatingly, "coal oil."

I have found that temporarily effective; but the trouble is as soon as the coal oil evaporates the mites congregate as thick as ever on the roosts again. Wouldn't you like to find a remedy that you could apply once or twice a year and feel sure that the roosts were not affected with vermin? Here it is, given by O. W. Mapes, the henman, Middletown, N. Y.:

The great mite destroyer and preventive—tallow; simple, isn't it? Paint your roosts once or twice a year with melted tallow and be forever rid of those "peaky" mites!

To destroy the large lice on the chickens, here is my remedy. Prepare a good dust bath under shelter, where it will not get wet. It is a good thing to save several bags of dust now while the ground is dry before the winter rains come on, to replenish the dust bath as needed, for the hens carry away a great deal on their feathers. To the dust bath, add some sulphur, lime and lice powder which comes in cans also ashes and let the hens do the rest toward keeping themselves free from lice. They will spend hours of contentment in the dust bath, though at first they will be shy of it, if any of the lime, etc. is visible.

Now for the other remedy, which is for sick, or droopy chickens. This has been tried with simply wonderful results, both by my neighbors and myself, when a fowl happened to be ill. Two of my thoroughbred Silver Campines became droopy from some cause, but one dose of this simple remedy completely restored them. One teaspoon level full epsom salts; enough bran or meal or shorts to make a table spoonful in all; wet with coal-oil and feed it to the chicken. (The chicken will not eat it voluntarily.) This is a dose for a full-grown hen; less should be given a young chicken.

Let us give our chickens the same care we give other farm stock, and see if they don't thank us not only with their singing but also in high-priced eggs this winter.

News item says judge ordered two quarrelling women to stay in their respective back yards. Wouldn't it be better for them to stay in their respective houses?

It is an individual Adder, to be placed on one's desk, close to one's books and papers. To take the place of the central machine requiring skilled operators.

It is also intended for office and stores where costly machines are a luxury.

The price is due to utter simplicity, and to our enormous output. Seven keys do all the work.
