PARENTAL If Solomon were to visit terrestrial scenes again in these days ABDICATION of parental abdication, he would doubtless object strenuously to the prevention of his proverb about the rod to read: 'Spare the rod and spoil the teacher,' nor would he indorse the substitution of a broomstick for the traditional willow. The effort we see being made on all sides to punish the teacher for punishing pupils, who should have had enough parental rod applications to make them obedient to authority, is one of the evidences, of which there are too many others, that the modern parent has abdicated the throne of authority and is leaving the child to train himself. When an irate woman berates a teacher with her tongue and belabors him with her broomstick, for trying to instill a little of that respect for authority and good behavior which the parents should have instilled, and other unruly pupils give evidence of the same lack of home training by hooting and throwing mud and sticks, it is plain enough that Solomon has been misunderstood in the homes of those children. It was the child, and not the teacher, Solomon advised as the recipient of the correctional rod.

Not long ago the pupils of an entire Pittsburgh school went on a strike to compel discharge of the principal. Like occurrences are reported from time to time from other states. Even in the nation's great army school at West Point, where obedience and manhood are supposed to be fundamental, there is complaint of discipline administered to cadets who violated the orders against hazing. Hazing is also the cause for the difficulty. For hazing there is nothing good that can be said. It is claimed for it that it develops manliness. If it is manly to use superior strength and numbers to compel another to do disagreeable things or to inflict physical punishment on him, then it is manly, but not otherwise. And manly development of those hazed is not revealed when they in turn become hazers, and then whine about their punishment or rebel against it.

We do not so much need a new Solomon as a harking back to the precepts of the old one. We need a general and marked stiffening of the parental backbone. We need home discipline for children, from infancy to adult age. They can not get it of school alone is counted upon for giving it, especially if a promiscuous is to be applied vigorously to any teacher attempting it. Physical punishment is a support of discipline and an adjunct of juvenile training of enough if it were not so much eliminated from the homes. Moderate physical punishment is a support of discipline and an adjunct of juvenile training of the twig to include upward, which the experience of the ages has endorsed. Solomon did not create the idea, but voiced the conclusions of centuries of parents. There has been no change since in the need of parental discipline, but there does appear to have taken place a sad departure from its administration.

COMPENSATION FOR INJURED WORKMEN To the people of Oregon on the election of November 4, will be submitted a bill that gives the worker the first chance that he has had in years to recover what is due him for injuries without long and exhausting suits at law.

To the man who works in a factory or in any hazardous occupation, it is a boon. It means that he and his family will be properly cared for during the time that he is prevented from work by injuries that he has received in the discharge of his duties. It means that he will be paid just the amount that his injuries are properly worth as judged by his earning capacity at the time that he was hurt.

The law goes into the subject thoroughly. It leaves little unsaid. It starts out with an explanation of its purpose and it recognizes the fact that many laborers are not properly remunerated for their injuries because wealthy corporations have a way of beating the cases when they come to trial.

These litigations have always been a source of annoyance to those who stand by the courts as at present constituted and contend that they give the rich and the poor equal and fair justice—for they don't. The legislature of the state itself admits it in the preamble to the law. It declares emphatically that the law is passed for the benefit of the worker and recognizes that he does not get the square deal when it comes to a suit at the bar.

To give the worker what the courts do not give him, the law was passed. It provides for a state industrial commission that has powers enough and money enough to provide for every case that properly comes before it, and that is justified in the claims that it makes. A man injured in the discharge of his duties in any of the hazardous undertakings that are mentioned and most of them are—may apply to that commission for his proportion of the funds that have been set aside. He may make that application with the assurance that, if his claims are true and proper, they will receive the proper attention from that commission and that he will receive what is due to him for the hurts that he has.

The commission has the power to bring to its court all of the witnesses and evidence that it may want. It is given funds enough to have all of the employees that are necessary to a prompt dispatch of the business in hand. It is created on a non-partisan basis and is given a term of years that removes it from the influence of party or of party factions.

The fund that it has at its disposal is raised partly by the state, by the employers, and by the workmen. Each of the three parties interested have contributed. Each has an interest in that fund. Its disposal is at the discretion of the commission. The state is made a party to all actions because the state is interested in the welfare of its workmen.

To us, it seems that the purpose of the act is accomplished by its provisions. It gives the employe a chance to get what is due for injuries sustained in the regular discharge of his duties. It takes away by specific enactment the right of defense on the ground of contributory negligence which has always been a stumbling block in the way of the employe to collect what he should have had. It gives him the chance to get his dues without having to fight the case through the courts, to become entangled in endless litigation or lose half of his demands through court costs and other attendant expenses.

From start to finish, the law is a good one. It is one that will benefit many workmen during the year. It will prove a boon in the elimination of suits for damages as the result of injuries sustained. It means much, in short, to the workmen of the state and is a statute that should be placed on the statute books by the people at the ballots next month.

Desert Sands. There is a popular idea that deserts like the Sahara are the bottoms of ancient seas which have been lifted above their original elevation by geological forces. This notion is an erroneous one. Authorities contend that the sands of all the great deserts have been formed on the spot by the distillation of the solid rocks on which

School Will Raise Physical Standard

By Dr. LOUIS DUFESTEL, Medical Inspector of Paris Schools It is my belief that here in the American crucible a startlingly fine metal is in process of formation. Several generations may yet pass before it takes a form which may be considered even likely to be PERMANENT, but enough has already been evidenced to convince thinkers in all countries that ITS WORTH IS SURE. NOTHING COULD BE MORE IMPORTANT TO RIGHT RACIAL DEVELOPMENT THAN GENERAL ATTENTION TO SCHOOL HYGIENE. ALL SCHOOLS SHOULD DO SOMETHING MORE THAN TRAIN THE MIND. In these days we all recognize the fact that the superiority of mind over body does not extend far enough to permit a fine mind to achieve its best development in a sickly and imperfect body. That some of our best intellects have been housed in weak, even in imperfect, bodies DOES NOT PROVE THE CONTRARY. It only indicates that MIND IS MIGHTY AND MAY WIN GREAT VICTORIES and makes us wonder what those supreme intellects might not have accomplished had their vigor and genius been supplemented by bodily strength and vitality.
