BUSINESS Nowadays advertising has become as much of a science as ADVERTISING many of the other problems of modern business.

The man with big business has one to handle nothing but the stories that he wants the people to read about his business affairs.

Many advertisers are so original in their ways of doing business that they stir an interest among the readers of certain magazines and papers "just to see what they will say next."

It, among other things, shows that he can tell what he has to say and that he is not afraid to say it.

If a newspaper has a story that, from a news standpoint is especially interesting to its readers, it plays that story for everything that it is worth.

As a result, people read it. Why? Because the newspaper plays that story to the fullest and tells them as loudly as it can that "here is a story for YOU."

People seldom go into hysterics over a newspaper that has a ladylike way of doing things and that wouldn't let you know that it had a story for fear you might discover it.

It's the same way in advertising. Some business men write copy that only fills space. It gets them nowhere. It sells them little if anything.

BULL RUN The Enterprise has all along been an ardent advocate of WATER RENT Bull Run water as a source of supply for this city.

With the agitation for another source and the possibilities that the south fork of our own Clackamas have to offer, together with the exorbitant rental that Portland has fixed as a condition for the service, the Enterprise believes that the city's interests would be best served by passing by the Bull Run water and constructing its own line to its own source and its own reserve.

Portland is like the man "who charged me too much for them beans." It has placed a price on its water that this city could not be expected to pay.

I AM greatly disturbed by present conditions in the American home. Men have CEASED TO READ THE BIBLE and put it on the same plane with Shakespeare.

Every man who has the best interest of his country at heart must be saved. HOMES ARE NOT WHAT THEY WERE IN THE OLDEN TIMES.

line to those sources is built and the bonds have been met, the mains will belong to this city alone and it will become a merchant with goods to sell rather than a buyer seeking the lowest market.

Clackamas water comes from the same source as does the Bull Run. It arises in the same mountains, flows through the same reserve. Its source is just as free from contamination and possible filth.

Figuring it from Oregon City's standpoint, the rental of $98.74 a day or $39,040.10 annually besides the interest on the bonded debt incurred by the construction of the pipe line and, further taking into the consideration the fact that Portland may, at its discretion, revoke the permit that it would give and take away the source of supply at its pleasure, there is not much that is encouraging to this side of the fence.

But, fortunately, there is. Instead of constructing a line to the reservoir at Mount Tabor that might at any time become so much wasted pipe and money, this city can construct its own main to its own point of intake and have its own water running through its own pipe into its own reservoir and through its own mains.

The cost of the line to Mount Tabor would be at least $100,000. The cost of the pipe laid in the ground to the junction point of the Clackamas and its south fork would be about $150,000.

Oregon City is not particularly interested in paying off the bonded debt of Portland and cares little whether that debt is ever paid or not. Surely, it does not want to help pay that debt.

From a financial standpoint, Portland's rates are too high. They get us nowhere. We are in the same boat that we were before.

FORUM OF THE PEOPLE

OREGON CITY, Ore., Oct. 14, 1913. (The Editor of The Enterprise)—In reading the various articles that have appeared in the papers in regard to a source of pure water supply for Oregon City the south fork of the Clackamas has been mentioned by different correspondents and is now being investigated by a committee backed by the Live Wires and others, and it is made to appear that this source is a new discovery.

Mr. R. D. Wilson, who was a member of the board at that time, first suggested the south fork of the Clackamas as being the nearest mountain stream that would fill the requirements, as he was well acquainted with the stream, having fished in it many times where it entered the main Clackamas river.

All these reports are a matter of record in the files of the water commission. As it was clearly evident, at that time, that the probable cost to get water from the south fork would in all probability cost near $250,000.00, as all large undertakings of this kind exceed their estimates, and as the interest charge along would exceed double the revenues then derived from the water consumers it was decided that the filter system was the only relief for a water supply until such time as the growth of the city would require a larger water supply and the income be adequate to provide the interest on a bond issue and the expenses of operation.

It is more important that a woman should be a good gossip and tell pleasantly and smartly of common friends and the thousand and one nothings of the day and hour than that she should speak with the tongue of men and angels, for awhile together by the fire happens more frequently in marriage than the presence of a distinguished foreigner to dinner.

Women and Gossip. It is more important that a woman should be a good gossip and tell pleasantly and smartly of common friends and the thousand and one nothings of the day and hour than that she should speak with the tongue of men and angels, for awhile together by the fire happens more frequently in marriage than the presence of a distinguished foreigner to dinner.

No doubt the board will be glad to have the problem solved for them as any expenditures for a water supply must be made through the offices of the board, as required by our city charter.
