CITY OFFICIAL NEWSPAPER

A FIT AND MISFIT Secretary of the Navy Daniels made a strange address at Indianaapolis in speaking there to the Indiana Press association. Putting it concisely, he laid down a law of lese majeste as to all our foreign relations.

Let us think, for a moment, to what this would lead. What appeals to the intelligence of one intelligent man appeals to the intelligence of other men of that sort. Supposing, for a moment, and for the sake of the argument, that editors seeing clearly a disastrous mistake about to be made in the conduct of our foreign relations should, as a matter of professional ethics, remain silent while the same danger, equally discerned by some member of house or senate should move to open expression in congress in criticism of the contemplated act.

The fact is that with a secretary of state burdened with many other than official cares, there is danger that, returning from a circuit of lectures, he might easily blunder into acts moving the country toward war as an inevitable result. Or, on the other hand, he might be open to acts, or to omissions of acts, which would lead to humiliations worse than war.

VOLUNTEER As another result of the wide difference in the position MILITIA taken by Secretary of War Garrison and the democratic house committee on military affairs, as shown at the last regular session, there is expressed from Washington hope that an advanced militia system will be established at the regular session.

The object sought is to create through the state troops a reserve volunteer army of considerable size, available for active service on demand and receiving a small regular pay for keeping in condition for service.

Man Who Has a Vote Should Make Use of It

By J. VAN VECHTEN OLCOTT, President of the Republican Club of New York City

THOSE men who are not willing to exercise the privilege of the franchise are usually the people who say that universal suffrage is a failure. Such men are usually found among the well to do. They say, "My vote DOES NOT COUNT because one vote more or less in the election district will not change the election."

BY REASON OF PETTY EXCUSES AND NEGLIGENCE MANY VOTES ARE LOST, AND IF AN OFFICER OF ANY OF THE ORGANIZATIONS VENTURES TO CRITICISE ONE FAILING TO VOTE HE IS MET WITH THE REMARK: "WHAT DIFFERENCE DOES IT MAKE? ONE VOTE DOESN'T COUNT."

The trouble is that men of this sort will NOT TAKE THE TROUBLE TO PERFORM THE MOST IMPORTANT CIVIC DUTY THEY HAVE. They should be vitally interested in elections, but sometimes when you confront them they act as if they were doing you a special and particular favor by voting at all.

the extent of their small pay, notwithstanding the constitution of the United States makes all militia federal militia. There is no such thing as state militia except as secondary to national militia, under the constitution, yet congress, particularly in democratic hands, balks at making the militia actually what the constitution makes it theoretically, a reliance for national defense.

The proposition is a simple one. We shall need at least 600,000 men in any war we may be called upon to make for national defense, and they should be trained men ready for immediate duty. We have not, and never shall have, unless conditions change radically in the future, a standing army of any such proportions. We must rely upon a volunteer reserve, or second line, and this must be a trained one.
