By CHARLES N. LURIE

THE LONG ARM.

From Russia to America, across thousands of leagues of land and sea, came Mrs. Sonie Sorin, a young widow.

She came not to make a home in this country. She remained among us only a few days. She has gone back to Russia. The young woman came here in obedience to an ancient Hebrew law which says that a woman may not remarry unless the nearest male relative of her deceased husband either marries her or gives her permission to marry another.

The law is very old. Orthodox Hebrew women still consider it binding on their consciences and on their courses of action.

So Mrs. Sorin traveled from a little town in the interior of Russia to Columbus, O., to get from her husband's brother a further release from the ties already partly severed by death.

Curious old custom? Yes, but it illustrates well the tenacity with which she and many of her coreligionists cling to their old orthodox beliefs.

Arriving in New York, Mrs. Sorin said: "From Russia to Ohio is a long journey. BUT FURTHER THAN THAT EXTENDS THE LAW."

Unknowingly she enunciated a great truth.

"Further than that extends the law?" She meant only her religious law, but is not her saying applicable to other laws?

Take the law of conscience, for example. How far do you think you would have to flee to reach a place where it could not overtake you? The peak of the highest mountain, the least frequented arctic solitude, the greatest depth yet sounded in the sea?

Further than that extends the law. Do you think a plunge into the whirl of work or pleasure or dissipation will drown out the voice that tells you of your own wrongdoing?

No, for "further than that extends the law."

More, material laws have long arms too. Every day we hear of men overtaken by evidences of crimes committed in years gone by. Not only murder will out, but so will lesser offenses against the criminal code. A man may flee from the scene of his crime, he may change his name, he may live for years in the atmosphere of respectability, but in many cases the law finds him out.

And if it does not?

Well, the law of conscience is more potent for punishment than any yet embodied in statute by man. It may be repented for a time by a man's mental powers sitting in judgment on his own case, but in the end it is enforced. Go as far as you like in time or distance from your misdeeds, but—

"Further than that extends the law."

AMERICAN VILLAGES.

Here is a Writer Who Claims They Are Positively Hideous.

No distinctively American style has arisen, and the average American home remains as ugly and as undistinguished as a Zulu kraal. In its essence it is simply a square box. And from that archetype it proceeds upward, but through degrees of beauty, but through degrees of hideousness. The more it is plastered with ornament the more vulgar and forbidding it becomes. The more it is adorned with color the more that color becomes a madness, a debauch, a public indecency.

Take a train ride through any American state and you will be sickened by the chaotic ugliness of the fitting villages—houses sprawling and shapeless, a huge advertising sign upon every flat wall, an intolerable effect of carelessness, ignorance, squalor, bad taste and downright viciousness.

But make the same sort of journey through France or Germany—say from Bremen to Munich or from Paris to Lyons—or through Austria or Italy or Switzerland, and you will be charmed by the beautiful harmony visible on all sides, the subordination of details to general effects, the instinctive feeling for color, the sound grouping, the constant presence of a tradition and a style. The design of the peasant houses changes twenty times between the Westphalian plain and the foothills of the Alps, but in every change there is a subtle reflection of the physical environment, an unmistakable expression of human aspiration, worldly estate and character.

I don't know any ugly village between Bremen and Munich, nor even a village without its distinction, its special beauty, its individual charm. But I don't know of a village between Washington and Chicago that is not frankly appalling.—Smart Set.

Going Astray at Sea.

It is no easy matter to keep a modern steamship on a straight course. The helmsman steers by the compass, and while a single degree of deviation appears very small on the compass card it would, if continued, carry a fast steamship four miles out of her course in a single day's run. Yet the compass gives the course more accurately than the ship can be steered. Owing to the deflecting power of the waves and the rolling of the ship, the course is continually shifted a little this way and that despite the helmsman's best efforts.—Harper's Weekly.

Fort Totten's mortar batteries guarding the entrance to New York harbor have been proved immensely effective. The only way a foreign foe can invade New York is to come disguised as a ready money.

If civilized armies show a tendency to slip back into barbarism when the newspaper correspondent's eye is kept away, it shows that there is something wrong with the kind of civilization generally used.

The Zeppelin company's engineers say that the new marine dirigible Zeppelin XII could "cross the Atlantic without undue risk."

Undue risk in this sense is obviously a term of considerable elasticity.

A New York judge has officially declared that three drinks a day do not give a chauffeur a reputation for inebriety. And yet three drinks a day taken together have been known to do a lot of tragic mischief.

IT'S a beautiful world to see

Or it's dismal in every zone.
The thing it must be
In its gloom or its glee
Depends on yourself alone.
—National Magazine.

MINE OWN.
WHERE art thou, my beloved?
Thou hast wandered far
I have searched through many lands, across the boundless sea
I seek for my beloved afar—and yet afar!
But vain my search and fruitless as pursuit of distant star.
Hope lights the way: I follow on, nor cease the weary quest.
Nor ever stop, nor turn aside, nor can I pause for rest.
My longing spurs me onward; there is never rest for me
Until my eyes are satisfied, beloved, with sight of thee.
For thou art mine, nor time, nor space, nor all eternity
Can bar my questing heart from thine.
Nor sunder me from thee
—Cora M. W. Greenleaf.

THE FATHER.

"HERE is a hall in every house
Behind whose wainscot gnaws the mouse.
Along whose sides are empty rooms,
Peopled with dreams and ancient dooms
When down this hall you take your light
And face alone the hollow night
Behold the child who goes to bed
Though faltering and half afraid
Of something crouching crookedly
In every corner he can see.
Remember him in times of gloom,
Yet goes on bravely to his room,
Knowing above him, watching there,
His father waits upon the stair.
—Madison Cawcutt.

CALVES ARE HIGHER; MARKET STAYS FIRM

The market for country killed calves is showing more strength and prices are further advanced. Sales are being made at higher prices for all offerings and the demand for the increase is quite good.

The general market for first class calves is firm and trade is taking all available offerings. Receipts of veals have been rather limited of late and this seems to have stimulated the call to a considerable degree.

QUIT MEAT IF YOUR KIDNEYS ACT BADLY

Take tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers—Drink lots of water.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in uric so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

same majority that prevailed in the election of the others, five to two—Councilman Horton and Tooze sticking together in their opposition to the whole plan.

Have Not Right.

After it was over, Councilman Tooze contended that the city council had not the right to make such changes, and, further, that there was no immediate need for a new water board as the plan had been placed in the hands of the fire and water committee. His objections were overruled by the rest of the council, however and the action taken.

Ernest Rands was suggested but his name was afterwards withdrawn. Councilman Beard moved that the recorder be instructed to notify the men that they had been chosen. It carried.

Mr. Lynch spoke in favor of the garbage ordinance that was introduced, but after discussion was held over to the next meeting to allow the council committee another opportunity to review it.

Improvements.

Four street improvement was accepted after the contractor agreed to place a bond that work would be satisfactory for one year. The Shay bid on High street and the bid of the Oregon Engineering & Construction company for Seventh street was accepted. The contract will be signed by the mayor and the city recorder within the next few days and involves $30,000 of which $13,000 will be paid by the city.

GRAY FADED HAIR OR BEAUTIFUL, DARK, ATTRACTIVE—CHOOSE, MADAM!

Says Sage Tea Mixed With Sulphur Restores Natural Color and Lustre

Grand, faded hair turned beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight. In a reality, if you'll take the trouble to mix sage tea and sulphur, but what's the use, you get a large bottle of the ready-to-use tonic, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," at drug stores here for about 10 cents. Millions of bottles of "Wyeth's" are sold annually, says a well-known druggist, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them because after just one application the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth; gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with the sage and sulphur tonight, and you'll be amazed at your youthful appearance and the real beauty and healthy condition of your hair within a few days. Many of our drug stores here shows that they all sell lots of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur," and the folks using it are enthusiastic.
