Wide sidewalks have been built from the corners. the depot to the football grounds and leading to all the reserved sections in the bleachers, that the big crowd will be protected from the dampness. The Oregon supporters will have the north side of the field and the O. A. C. contingent will occupy the south bleachers. Both colleges will be represented by their own bands, and each will attempt to outdo the other between quarters with "serpentines" and other stunts.

The game will be the hardest fought battle ever waged between the two old rival colleges. Oregon would seem to have a shade the better of the argument, judging from the work of the two elevents during the past season. but Corvallis men are ready to put up the battle of their lives and on a heavy field will have a decided advantage, as the hope of the Oregon eleven lies largely in the speed of its backfield trio, Halfback Parsons. whose work last year was largely re-sponsible for O. WASHINGTON PREPARES FOR UNIVERSITY OF OREGON

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 5,-Nine days of light practice will be through by the University of Washington football team, then, on November 15, the state university gridiron warriors will battle with all their pent-up vigor and enthusiasm to triumph over the University of Oregon eleven, for victory in that struggle means a sixth consecutive northwest intercollegiate championship for the purple and gold. The fourthcoming clash on the gridiron in Portland promises to be one of the hardest fought of the season and in view of the keen rivalry be-draw a record-breaking crowd. High government department officlais won't jump and run in a great hurry even when asked to do something by a pretty talented and tactful American, but not in the world's private secretary to a governor.

MIGHT MOVE THE WORLD.

If "it belongs to human nature to hate those whom one has injured," as Tacitus says, do we love those whom we have benefited?

Undoubtedly, but how about those who have benefited and are benefiting us? If you have a debt of gratitude to pay meet the obligation squarely and manfully. Do not cancel the obligation in a grudging, niggardly, mean spirited manner that leaves your benefactor with a sense of injury.

Possibly the rarest of all the graces is the ability to express gratitude easily. How haltingly the words of thanks come from the tongue! How we hate to tell our fellow man who has done something for us that we feel ourselves under an obligation to him! It was always thus. A century and a half ago Dr. Johnson wrote: "There are minds so impatient of inferiority that their gratitude is a species of revenge, and they return benefits not because recompense is a pleas ure, but because obligation is a pain."

Let not obligation be a thorn in your side. If you ARE obliged to a fellow man-and all of us are at one time or another-when it comes to saving so-Say so without affectation, without hesitation, without "impatience of inferiority."

Did it ever occur to you that save for the labor and patience of others we should all perish of want? We are dependent and interdependent, not in-For you and for me the cooly labors

Are they not, in virtue of our dependence on them and our gratitude to them, our brothers? Were the world fully aroused to the sense of the interdependence of man wars would cease. Man to man, the world over, would feel that all are members of one big family. And the gratitude that we should pay freely for all that is done for us -granted even that it is done in each case with a selfish motive-would be the force that should lift mankind to a higher, better plane

"THAT IS NO GOOD AT ALL." What It Meant When Used by the Italian Postal Official.

"A postoffice order was awaiting me in the postoffice of a small Italian village," writes a correspondent of the Cologne Gazette. "I could see the pleasant little document lying on the counter, so I gave my name and asked for the money.

"The official, however, remarked that that wouldn't do. 'Ah,' thought I, 'he wants some proof of identity,' so I rummaged among my papers and fetched out my military service paper.

"'That is no good at all,' said the official, 'because'- But after the 'because' he stuck. The words refused to come out, and he merely assumed an icy official demeanor. 'Ah,' thought I, 'he can't read the German of my service paper,' so I went away and dragged in my innkeeper, and he swore with a mighty oath that I was so and so.

" "That is no good at all," was all the man behind the counter vouchsafed. though he said it with a smile. So I burried back to the inn and fetched further proofs of my identity-a passport, an authenticated copy of a certificate of nationality and finally even a letter from an Italian relative. Surely the postoffice man would be able to read them.

"That is no good at all,' he said, with another of his pleasant smiles, after he had read them, adding that he was very, very sorry. Naturally I got angry at this and abused him as well as a limited acquaintance with foreign terms of abuse would permit.

"That is no good at all,' he said, with another of his smiles, as he rattied the shutter across the pigeon hole, Next morning I returned to the charge only to see the shutter fly across again. The day after the same thing happened. But on the third day I brought the burgomaster with me. I came prepared to have it out with the Italian postoffice. What was my astonishment when I saw the clerk waiting for me behind the open shutter, with a handful of small coins, which he counted out to me, winding up with a fascinating smile as he said, 'Don't you see, yesterday and the day before I hadn't enough money."

MYSTERY OF LEPROSY.

And the Treatment Its Victims Received In the Middle Ages.

Why leprosy occurs in certain places and not in others is one of the mysteries of medicine. In the early centuries of the Christian era it spread all over Europe. Every city had its leper house. For no cause that any one can assign it began to disappear early in the sixteenth century, and Europe soon numbered its empty lazaretios by thousands. Climate has no influence on the disease, for when it left the most of Europe it persisted in Norway, Iceland, Spain and the islands of the Mediterranean. In Asia it is to be found from India to Siberia, and no part of Africa is free from it.

That leprosy can be planted in new territory is shown most pointedly in the terrible experience of Hawati, which was free from the disease until about 1850, when the Chinese brought it there. Now Molokai is a name to make men shudder.

In the middle ages it was the custom to consider a man dead whenever he was found to have leprosy. His heirs divided his property, a funeral service was said for him and a shovelful of earth thrown after him as he walked to his living grave in the leper house. The world is kinder now, but knows no treatment for this scourge which is much more effective.-St. Louis Republic.

Captain Inch, Hero of Volturno Disaster, and Faithful Dog

Photo copyright, 1913, by American Press Association

APTAIN FRANCIS INCH, who was the principal hero of the steamer Volturno, which burned at sea, was the last to leave the burning ship He was taken off by the Kroonland, with his pet fox terrier Jack. The faithful dog had stuck to the captain's heels through much of the battle waged against the fire. This picture of the captain and his dog was taken on the Kroonland, which landed Inch and seventy-seven other rescued passengers and officers at New York. In recognition of Captain Inch's bravery during that dire time of peril the Uranium line announced that it would provide the commander with another ship, contrary to the rule of the sea that when a captain loses his vessel he is never given another.

DROPS INTO OPEN ELEVATOR SHAFT

George McCarver, steward of the Commercial club, fell through the elevator shaft of the Masonic building Wednesday. Three cuts on his head and severe bruises on his body testified to the fact that he had dropped about 15 feet down the shaft to the oumpers below.

He was waiting for the elevator to descend to the first floor and, apparently, looked up the shaft to see where the platform had stopped. He lost his balance and dropped down to the machinery of the shaft. Employes around the building came to his rescue end got him out. Had the elevator descended while he was in his position, it is more than possible The commission's pruning shears that his injuries would have been ser-

PANAMA AND CANAL IN PICTURE EDUCATES WELL AS ENTERTAINS

Willis J. Abbott, the author of this book, takes you in at the front door of Panama, tells you the time when Columbus searched for a natural waterway to the Pacific Ocean, brings you up through the centuries of revolution and warfare, and on through to the realization of the greatest achievement of this day and age. He tells you of the people and the country, of the past as well as the present, and even dips into the promises for the future. The great story is inspiring—filled to the full with local color and human interest—a story that will live as long as the great canal itself.
