OME FINE DISTINCTIONS are of necessity made in court decisions, yet it frequently happens, even the lay mind can comprehend their justice. At the same time, an extension of the principle involved in judicial ruling will sometimes raise further interesting questions. For instance, the supreme court of South Carolina holds that the piazza is not such a part of a dwelling house as to make it a subject of burglary under the common law, which defines burglary as the breaking and entering of a dwelling house of another in the night time with intent to commit a felony.

In the case at issue, the defendant was charged with breaking and entering with intent to commit a felony. The evidence showed that he, on a dark and rainy night, was found under suspicious circumstances on the piazza of the house in question. The piazza was one with a balustrade two and a half feet high, and had low picket gates to keep out dogs and chickens. The defendant did not enter the dwelling house proper, and there was no evidence that he stole anything or made any overt move to commit a felony. He was convicted in the lower court, but the supreme court reverses the conviction on the ground that his acts did not constitute burglary. The court says: "The entry of a piazza attached to a dwelling house, outside of the house, the place where collectors are accustomed to wait until some one in the house responded to a ring or knock, or to enter and sit on the piazza to get out of the rain or sun, or to rest, may be a trespass or bad taste, but it is quite different from opening the closed doors of a house and intruding on the sanctity of the dwelling."

The logic and justice of this reasoning is quite evident. On the other hand, on the general proposition that the piazza is outside the pale of the law against burglary, what would be the status in South Carolina of one who might remain on guard on the piazza while his confederate should enter the house Would he be held equally guilty of burglary with his confederate, or would he be let off more easily as an accessory, or would be go Scot-free on the ground that the piazza is excluded from the application of the law against breaking and entering

TT IS COMING to be recognized that frame houses in the suburbs of growing cities form a serious addition to the fire risk. The situation is growing worse instead of better because wooden buildings are huddled together in practically solid blocks, where once were detached dwellings with garden plots between them. Boston is surrounded by inflammable suburbs. The fire which swept Chelsea, a typical Boston suburb, a few years ago,

American Girl Considers

As an Investment When She Marries a Title

By FREDERICK TOWNSEND MARTIN, Society

SOMETIMES pity the girl who is subjected to the endless routine supposed to fit her for the position in American society or to QUALIFY HER FOR THE BRITISH PEERAGE.

There are daily lessons in riding, driving and all kinds of physical culture. From morning until evening she is kept busy learning something physically or mentally new. It is a STRENUOUS LIFE, not unlike the royal education, and only the pupil's natural vivacity prevents her from becoming artificial.

These daughters of liberty are generous. They spend money lavishly, but with discrimination, and if their manner of doing so is occasionally a little blatant surely much can be forgiven those who give much. They BELIEVE IN THE VALUE OF ADVERTISEMENT, they like to see society paragraphs about their jewels and gowns.

TO THEM MARRYING A TITLE REPRESENTS BUSINESS, NOT SNOBBISHNESS. THEY REGARD THEIR POSITION IN THE PEER-AGE AS AN INVESTMENT, FOR IN BOTH CASES THE IDEA IS THAT THEY WILL BECOME PAYING CONCERNS.

The late King Edward used to tell Miss Alice de Rothschild that, although American women were charming, they passed judgment upon ach other too sharply. "Whenever I ask Consuelo, Duchess of Marlborabout an American lady," said his majesty, "I am invariably told: 'Oh, sir; she has NO POSITION AT HOME! Out there she be just dirt under our feet."

MORNING ENTERPRISE proves the danger and folly of permitting such construction, in comparatively congested districts. The Boston Evening Transcript in speaking of fire prevention says: "The fire record is still climbing merrily upward and Boston continues to fatten by it. Last month the losses in the United States and Canada from this cause were within a few thousand of fiteen millions, a mil-E. E. BRODIE - - - - - Editor and Publisher lion and aquarter above those of last year and a million more than in October, 1911. It has been a fiery year all over the country and our own department has been kept very busy. It will probably be kept still busier until we have authority to revise our building code in such a manner that kindling wood structures will be prohibited and a reasonable standard of non-inbammability established. What we need is attention to the fundamentals of safety, not a desultory brushing up one day in the year."

> The New York Commercial calls attention to the fact that in many towns and cities situated in timber country in the United States and Canada most of the buildings are of brick and stone. The people in such districts seem to realze the danger of frame construction and pay the slight extra cost of safety, which those living where lumber is dearer and brick is cheaper take chances. Brick is the best material for resisting fire that is known, though of course, concrete and stone are as good for all practical purposes. Concrete is growing in favor as improved methods of handling it are being developed. The point is to do away with frame buildings in towns and cities as fast as possible and to put a stop to their erection at once.

ASTERN WOMEN have taken the right track in fighting the egg trust and the cold storage combine. They have determined that the members of the various clubs will use no more eggs in their households until after the prices have dropped to 32 cents a dozen.

Past years have shown the strength of the women to force prices down to reasonable figure in matters that effect the household wants. For a time, the women waged a successful fight against meat trust of the east and boycotted the markets until the producers and cold storage men were forced to place their product on the market at a fair price or find no sale for it at all.

When dealing with thieves, one must use the methods of a thief. If the rust proposes to rob the housewife, she should take some stand to rob the trust of his illegitimate profits. For several years, there have been complaints that the storage companies were holding back the supplies in the effort to boost the prices and they have continued to do so unmolested by the government or the state authorities. Only the women have fought against the high prices but in almost every instance they have been successful to a large extent. If the housewife refuse to buy his product, what good does it do the storage man to hold the goods hoping, by monoply, to raise the prices to prohibitive figure. For the past few weeks, eggs have been steadily rising in price. Almost every changed quotation showed a fluctuation in eggs.

The government has received notice of the stand that the club women have taken in the matter and it has spurred the officials to the point where investigations will be made into the price of the eggs on the market and the supplies that are in cold storage. The man who buys eggs when the market is down and holds them until it goes up is entitled to a fair margin of profit. But he is not entitled to such a prohibitive price as he has been demanding the past few weeks. The investigations of the women and the government ought to result in some definite good for the country at large.
