CITY OFFICIAL NEWSPAPER,

HE WIFE OF A wealthy business man in the face of her husband's pessimism as to the outcome of the experiment, announces that she decided to become mother by adoption of fifteen children, each to represent a characteristic racial type. She wants none over a year old. She will leave the hotel in which she and her husband have been living and occupy a house in the outskirts of the city. She expects to be a mother of them all and bring them up like brothers and sisters of "an American family of moderate means." Waiving the question as to whether an American family of moderate means could support fifteen children, the experiment will be watched with considerable interest, futile as it may be in solution of race problems.

The chief value of her trial will be in demonstrating whether education and environment are more potent than heredity in forming character. The discussion of this subject has not been confined to country "literaries." To make a fair test the children should be carefully picked from the same classes. The difficulty of doing this is apparent. But at the outset there will be other insuperable difficulties. She intends to send the children to the public schools. While they may be treated with absolute equality at home it is too much to expect public school children to join the wealthy woman in her experiment. They will discriminate against some of the children. This will give rise to dissension among the heterogeneous household or else the members wll have to flock by themselves and thus miss one of the most valuable influences of the public school system.

But if she should succeed in getting these children to respect each other and become brothers and sisters in sentiment, what would be the value, except to show that if brought up together, under the same rules and conditions, members of different races might become amicable? How would we set about getting the different races to adopt a uniform system of education and a uniform set of social and moral regulations? And how can she be sure that her adopted children will be sincere in their supposed affection for each work. The drawing booth will repreother, there being such a premium on pretense? The experiment is attended with many uncertainties. Some people will hoot at it altogether, pointing out that real brothers and sisters often show the widest differences in character, ability and tastes. But nothing should be said to discourage the wom- eral playlets from the classics will be an. Her experiment will give a home and schooling to fifteen youngsters of different nationalities. Her friends say her family will be called an Ameri- Guest Returns Home. can zoo. Let us hope that vistors' days will be infrequent. It would be a pity to make mere exhibits out of the children.

77N A STUDY OF abnormalities in school children, by Dr. Arnold Gesell, published by the United States Bureau of Education, the statement is made that 12 in every 100 children who enter a kindergarten, or primary school, are not normal in some respect and need special treatment. Two of these twelve he says are above normal in intellectual activity, one of the two only superficially so and the other actually of a high degree of mentality and capable of making far greater progress in study than the remainder affair. of the class. The other ten are deficient in some respect. Some of them are defective in some physical matter which could be remedied by medical or surgical attention, and their normality restored. Others are more permanently defective, and require special and personal attention, which can not be given in the regular classes. Special classes or methods of handling for these abnormal ones Dr. Gesell declares is necessary.

One of the ten is feeble minded, and should be entriely separated from the others in a school conducted for the development of such cases. There are a number of priviate institutions in the country for such defectives, but all parents have not means of sending their children to them. One stutters. This also requires special attention, both medical and instructive. Stuttering

America Needs Many More Skilled Workers

By RALPH ADAMS CRAM, Architect, of New York

THE American architect is handicapped almost fatally by the LACK OF GOOD ARTIFICERS to work out the detail. Apart from the industrial arts in their relation to architecture, their importance in this country, where art manufactures or art products are so enormously in demand, is too obvious to need demonstration. NEARLY ALL OUR EXPERT LABOR IN THE ARTISTIC TRADES IS IMPORTED FROM EUROPE. WE PAY LARGE WAGES TO FOR-EIGN WORKMEN, BUT REFUSE TO EDUCATE OUR OWN PEOPLE SO THAT THIS FINANCIAL BENEFIT MAY ACCRUE TO THEM.

In other words, our prosperity results in benefiting the alien, and we allow our citizens to degenerate, furnishing no new employment for the rising generation, but fitting it only to those limited callings which already are overstocked and in which it can command but a minimum

ENTERPRISE can be cured by attention to the nervous system and instruction in self-control. Others are anaemic, or lisp, or are childish, or retarded in mental or moral development. If the entire twelve abnormal ones had exactly the same thing the matter with them, it would be easy to make a separate class for them, but with only one or two of the twelve requiring the same special attention. the matter becomes a serious problem in public education.

> There has been some effort to meet and solve this problem, but only in a tentative way. Medical examination has become an actual and practical thing in a few cities, and only a theoretical one in others. When systematically and fully done, and the needed medical and surgical aid given, many of these abnormal cases become normal. Others, however, especially the mental defectives, cannot be made normal by such means. Our public school system is defective to the degree that it does not thus diagnose children as they enter the kindergarten or primary grade, and separate the normal from the abnormal, giving the latter the attention necessary to create normality, or the special care and instruction needed because that can not be done. Any manufacturer who found 12 per cent of his raw material unsuited to his machinery would do something to render the two more adaptable. If he did not be would deserve to fail in business. That the public school system will make progress in this direction can not be doubted. The very investigation of the subject in this way by the bureau of education is sufficient evidence of the nah Penman, 10 acres in S. W. ¼ section 19, township 3, south range 2 beginning of wisdom. And with knowledge progress is sure to be made.
