CITY OFFICIAL NEWSPAPER.

PROGRESSIVE IDEAS have permeated the Republican camp. The decision of the national committee a few days ago to re-district the country for representation and to cut down the list of delegates that the South sends, shows the new tendency that has taken its hold upon the party.

The plans of the committee are worthy. Something is needed in the way of re-districting work through the country and the national committee has seen that need. It has taken a hold on the situation in a progressive way. It has seen the problems that have confronted the party and properly and decisively faced them.

For years the South has played a too important part in the action of the Republican committees and conventions. With only a few voters in comparison with the rest of the country who vote a straight party ticket, the South has been influential in turning the tide in favor of particular candidates or measures. The committee that has been at work on the matter has gone at it in a progressive way. It has cut down that representative and has given the determining vote in matters that effect the party to those states in which the party's vote is strong or predominate. The new turn of the committee shows the up-to-date spirit that has taken a firm hold on the leaders and that has awakened them into activities that will regain all of the advantages that were lost at the last election and bring back many of the voters into the fold.

INTO THAT GREAT ZONE of the Arctic from whose bourne so few travellers return has disappeared another great explorer of the unknown. Beyond that point where civilization has placed its scattering line of pickets, they have penetrated in the cause of science to discover the things that are in the unknown lands at the top of the world.

The great unknown within that mysterious circle of the Arctic has claimed within the years that explorers have attempted to penetrate and reveal its secrets the lives of some of most learned men of the profession. They have sacrificed in that cause their future prospects in each of their own professions and have given life that the world might know some of the secrets that are walled up within the circle of ice and perpetual snow.

Drifting along with the relentless ice packs and driven by the tempestuous storms of the frozen north is today the little staunch vessel in which these intrepid adventurers sailed in their attempted conquest of the land of mysteries.

More daring and romantic than the fearless attacks of the early navigators upon the unexplored deep beyond the narrow shore line is the history of the adventures into the realms of snow and ice. Of late years, the most notable sacrifice that has been made to the cause of science is that loss of Captain Scott on his fight to find the southern goal. His last moments filled with the thought of his men and the glory that would come to his country from his explorations, he fought through the terrific storms and braved the unhindered tempests that rage in their original fury around the axis of the world.

The annals of the northern explorations have been more filled with disasters by sea and ice than have those made in the effort to penetrate to that southern point. Since first the men of science yearned to know the secrets of the frozen north, the annals of history have been filled with the disasters of the ice. Hemmed in on all sides by the vast seas of unyielding packs, surrounded by the vengeful ice bergs, driven by the raging tempests, caught by the deadly undertow that flows with relentless fury around the edges of the great packs, the science and mind of man has been taxed to its utmost to overcome the innumerable and forces of blind power of nature.

But that hope of conquest, the love of the mystery of the unknown, the ambition to become of service to the world of science has lead these men to forfeit life, prospects, and domestic happiness on the altar of national glory.

Filipinos Not Ready For Independence

By ARTHUR F. ODLIN, Formerly Judge of the Court of First Instance Philippine Islands

I AM a friend of the Filipino people, with whom I was closely associated for almost six years.

For these masses I have profound sympathy united with a deep admiration for their patient struggling and a firm confidence in their future upliftment, always provided that the United States government will not ABANDON THEM TO THE SMALL GROUP OF "POLITICOS" who are doing all the shouting for independence.

I CONSIDER IT UNWISE AND UNSAFE TO ATTEMPT TO CONFER REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT UPON ANY PEOPLE—WHITE, BLACK OR BROWN—UNTIL A DECENT PERCENTAGE OF THEM ARE SUFFICIENTLY EDUCATED TO KNOW WHAT GOVERNMENT MEANS, WHAT REPRESENTATION MEANS AND ARE THEREFORE COMPETENT TO HANDLE THE GIFT WHEN CONFERRED.

The ambition to be the first to plant at the top of the world the flag of their native country has taken many of the explorers north and south. It has enabled them to brave the perils of unknown oceans, to face the powerful undertows of the northern seas, to suffer all of the hardships that the cold, bare, bleak northern lands of mystery can center on the heads of the explorers.

Such men as these have contributed something to science and to history. The tales of hardship and bravery that the northern seas can tell contains the everlasting names of those great adventurers who were lured, not as the Spanish explorers by the love of gold or the fascination of the Fountain of Eternal Youth, but by that ambition to add to the national glory by first planting the flag at the world's top and contributing something to the world's knowledge of the conditions on that undrawn part of the map.

THE MEXICAN CONGRESS, as was expected, has nullified the presidential election held in October, on the ground that not enough voters participated. It was stated that returns were received from only 797 out of 14,225 places where ballots should have been cast.

The decision of the members present was unanimous, though it was noted that the so-called "Catholic" Deputies did not attend. The upshot is that General Huerta remains in control of affairs at the Mexican capital and wherever his military forces are able to hold their ground against the so-called "Constitutionalists."

On the face of the situation President Wilson's "moral boycott," as we may term it, does not seem to be effectuating very much. We have daily rumors of Huerta's fall. Nevertheless he holds on. We have daily tales by way of the Rio Grande of "Constitutionalist" victories. Yet they do not seem to rid Mexico of Dictator Huerta.

However, Mexican politics is peculiar, as every reader of Mexican history knows. More than once a Mexican President or dictator whose position looked more secure than Huerta's has found himself deposed overnight. Undoubtedly seven-tenths of Huerta's supporters who are most fervid in their professions of loyalty are on their toes ready to jump whichever way the cat jumps. That is Mexican politics.

Yet if General Huerta should succeed in beating down or buying off the most of his opponents the position of the United States would be peculiar and somewhat embarrassing. For President Wilson has publicly declared that we cannot do international business with General Huerta on any terms.

Sooner or later we shall have to do international business in Mexico with somebody. Perception of that fact may tend to renew conviction of the value of the recognition of the accomplished fact instead of trying to do international business according to "moral" standards which are neither accepted nor even understood in such countries as Mexico.

Time is money and one should be saved as well as the other.

Heart to Heart Talks

WOMAN'S PATIENCE.

When the world wants to express its appreciation of patience under trials and difficulties it turns for example—to a man!

It speaks of Job, the man of Uz, who had boils and was visited by certain holy men.

It tells of St. Simon Stylites, who stood on the pillars for thirty-seven years.

It recites with fine appreciation the patience of Lincoln during the trying days of the great war or repeats the tale of Washington's endurance in the winter of Valley Forge.

Wrong, all wrong!

In the lives of the wives and mothers of men and of their maiden sisters are to be found in everyday occurrence better examples of patience than any man can show. Man's bearing of the burden is shown in the great affairs of life that are comparatively easy to sustain. Woman's comes into play in the little, nagging trifles which, added up, amount in the aggregate to great sums.

Take, for example, this case of a woman in Chicago who was deserted by her husband forty-seven times. Forty-six times she forgave him and took up anew the load of living with him.

Forty-six times! Then her spirit rebelled and she haled him to court.

"She waited too long," you say. Agreed. But think of the patience of the woman and then take out the markers from the books wherein are recorded the patient deeds of men.

"He only lived with me a day or two at a time," said the brave Chicago woman, who has worked hard for the support of her little ones. "We have three children, and they hardly know him. In the six years we have been married he left me forty-seven times. I don't want to see him any more. He never gives me a cent for support."

The man in the case admitted the record. He was sent to jail when he told the judge he would not contribute to the support of his wife and children.

How many men, do you think, would continue to love and forgive women who had deserted them forty-six times? Not many!

Only a woman's loving kindness, strong to bear and suffer for the sake of her children, could do it.

If In Doubt, Give Her a Smart Bag

Many are the ways that small pieces of leftover lace can be utilized in the making of holiday gifts, useful and at the same time ornamental. They are things that will delight the heart of the most fastidious woman. The bag

HANDSOME BAG OF LACE.

Pictured is one of those dainty concoctions that lend themselves to any kind of rather heavy lace. Silk cord is used for drawing up the bag, and it is pretty when lined with either rose or pale green thin silk, but it is safest perhaps to use a white china silk lining.
