

READY FOR FRAY

SOCIALISTS WILL HOLD MASS MEETING MARCH 14.

Third Party to Prepare For a Thorough Organization of the County and the Opening of the Congressional Campaign.

The perfect organization of the Republican party during the last campaign, which resulted in a complete sweep for the Republicans, has evidently been a lesson to the other parties. First the Democrats, who with the citizens mismanaged their campaign in several ways, met and arranged preliminary plans for the next campaign, and now comes the Socialists. They follow the policy of conducting a campaign of education and will circulate literature throughout the country. In the absence of Chairman Grout, of the central committee, W. W. Myers, one of the prominent Socialist leaders of the county, has issued the following bulletin:

ATTENTION SOCIALISTS!
COMRADES TO THE FRONT.

By request of many comrades, in the absence of our county chairman, I hereby call a mass meeting of all Socialists of Clackamas County to meet in Oregon City, Saturday, March 14, 1903 at 10 o'clock A. M. at Judge Stipp's Court room, to transact important business and to prepare for a thorough organization of the county and the opening of the congressional campaign.

Dhath of Mrs. Schram.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Schram died Tuesday night after a lingering illness of over a year, of cancer of stomach, aged 60 years, 9 months and 2 days. She was well known in this city where she had resided since 1859, in which year she came to the United States from Germany, where she was born June 1, 1842. Several years after her arrival here she was married to John Schram, who survives her. She leaves one sister, Mrs. Fred Vonderahe, of Carus, and the following children: Alexander H. Schram, of Portland; Mrs. Joseph Lynch, Charles Schram, of Oregon City. The funeral was held this afternoon from the family residence and the interment took place in the Masonic cemetery.

The foundation for the new warehouse of Ely and Carter is about completed and work on the structure will commence at once. The warehouse will be 52 x 70, adjoining the store and farming machinery and implements will be stored there.

Four deputy assessors started Monday to make the annual assessment and they will be occupied at least three months. J. E. Judd will cover range 2 east, John K. Morris range 1 west and 1 east, John C. Bradley range 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 east and J. W. McNulty will assess town property.

A gigantic production by home talent will be given in the Opera House next Friday and Saturday nights, March 13th and 14th. Mr. E. Collins who has charge of this entertainment under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Congregational Church is proving himself a master in his art at the rehearsals. He controls 100 boys and girls in a most surprising manner, as they perform their parts as fairies, gnomes, representatives of all nations, midgits, grasshoppers, frogs, beetles, etc. The choruses of 100 boys and girls will sing will be the finest ever heard by juvenile voices in Oregon City. The leading parts will be taken by some of the Oregon City's most popular young people. Popular prices 25 and 50 cents. All 50 cent tickets can be exchanged for reserved seats at Huntley's. Tickets can be secured from the older children taking part in the entertainment, from members of the Aid Society, or at Huntley's.

What Washington Looks.

There is no avenue in Washington which measures adequately up to the full demands of elvish beauty. Woodward avenue in Detroit, Euclid avenue in Cleveland, Peachtree avenue in Atlanta, Independence avenue in Kansas City and Summit avenue in St. Paul are all examples of handsome thoroughfares, where magnificent private residences are set in miniature parks. On a larger scale Brookline, near Boston, presents a charming picture of suburban development along picturesque and artistic lines. There is nothing of the kind in Washington.—Washington Post.

An Artist's Trials.

Brownly—Dauber certainly has his own troubles.
Pinder—Why, I thought he was doing splendidly.
Brownly—He was until he painted that last landscape. He painted the sun in too natural.
Pinder—How could that be?
Brownly—Well, it dries up the water in the pond so fast that he has to paint in new water every two or three days.—New York Times.

LOST IN HOTELS.

Queer Things That Absentminded Guests Forget to Take Away.

Every hotel in New York has a storeroom for articles left behind by guests. It is one of the important departments of the establishment and often earns the gratitude of travelers whose unfortunate habit of forgetting leads them to look for things that are missing. In hotels a book is kept in which are jotted down descriptions of articles forgotten. When a hotel does a large transient business, it is frequently with difficulty that lost articles are arranged for identification.

The integrity of servants must be relied upon to a large extent. The chambermaid takes immediate possession of a room upon the guest's departure. She picks up anything that appears to have been left unintentionally. A note describing the article and giving the name of the guest, the room number and the time of departure is taken to the clerk. The property is turned over to the housekeeper and by her to the "lost" department.

Said the clerk of one fashionable hotel: "I remember a singular case of a man who didn't respond at once to the hall boy's call for an early train. The result was that when he did get up he had to run. From the station we got a call on the telephone: 'Hurry to my room,' he shouted, 'and on the table you'll find a very valuable package. It's my eyes. Send them to the station.'"

"Sure enough, we found two glass eyes on the dressing table in a plush case. One was for daily use and the other for an emergency. Guests often forget their false teeth, but that was the only case I ever knew of a man leaving his eyes."

Rings and pins are often found on the washstand. Valuable pins are found everywhere, the window curtains being a favorite depository. Watches and revolvers bob out from under pillows. Of course when the owner's address is known and anything valuable is left he is notified and the article sent to him. If not called for in a few months, the forgotten article usually becomes the personal property of employees.—New York Times.

PRIMITIVE PUMPS.

The Mechanism Used in Ancient Egypt and in China.

A representative piece of mechanism occurs frequently on the sculptures of early Egypt. It has the appearance of and is generally believed to be that of a portable pump. The hydraulic screw is also attributed to this people, but their main reliance seems always to have been the shadoof, seen everywhere along the banks of the Nile, an invention so simple and so well adapted to their needs that it remains today substantially the same as it has been through all the centuries since history began.

The same may be said regarding the chain pump in China, an invention the origin of which antedates the Christian era. This simple machine, which seems never to have been improved upon, is in such common use that every agricultural laborer is in possession of one. Where irrigation is conducted on a larger scale the chain pump is made proportionately larger and moved by a very simple tread wheel, and still larger ones are operated by yoking a buffalo or other animal to a suitable driving machine. The application of steam to raising water is of uncertain origin. Long before the Christian era certain applications of fire to vessels containing water, by which effects were produced calculated to astonish ignorant worshippers, were practiced by the priests of Egypt, Greece and Rome, but their knowledge seems never to have been turned into any channel of secular usefulness.

Repulsed by Bees.

A striking incident of the relief of Cawnpore was the rout of the Ninth lancers by a swarm of bees. A village in the line of march was found to be defended by a hastily improvised stockade, on the top of which a number of hives were stuck. Into one of these a young officer jabbed his sword, with a result that in far less time than it takes to tell it the whole advance guard was racing for dear life to the rear, and Sir Hope Grant hastily formed line of battle, believing it repulsed by the mutineers in force.

Rice Stuffing.

Rice stuffing for roast chicken or turkey is considered preferable to the usual breadcrumb. To prepare it brown one chopped onion in a tablespoonful of butter and mix with it four cupfuls of cold boiled rice and one cupful of breadcrumbs that have been moistened in one cupful of milk. Season with sage, parsley or other sweet herbs, as desired. Add half a pound of sausage meat or finely chopped salt pork and salt and pepper to taste.

Probably True.

Wabash—I wonder what makes old Gotrox dress so shabbily?
Monroe—His pride, my boy.
Wabash—Why, how's that?
Monroe—He's afraid his customers will mistake him for one of his clerks.—Chicago News.

A Tiresome Person.

"No," said Mr. Bliggins; "I haven't any use for philosophers."
"Why not?"
"My idea of a philosopher is a man who pretends he enjoys hard luck."—Washington Star.

For some reason or other we often read that some man or other has "disappeared suddenly." It would be remarkable to read of one who disappeared gradually.—Washington Times.

A WEAK HEART.

Will Climbing or Stair Mounting Will Strengthen the Organ.

It is not many years ago that the belief prevailed that a sufferer from heart disease was in constant peril whenever he moved and that the nearer he approached absolute rest the better it was for his heart. This is still true in respect to certain forms of heart disease—those due to actual disease or degeneration of the heart muscles—but when the disease is in the valves, as it is in the majority of cases, the modern teaching is that properly regulated exercise is beneficial. This is founded upon the common sense view that the heart is like other muscles in that it can be strengthened by exercise to meet increased calls upon it.

When the valves of a pump get out of order, it requires greater force to move a given quantity of water. If this force can be applied, it will make up for the defect in the valves. The same principle holds good in the case of the diseased heart; the valvular defect must be made good—"compensation" is the medical term for this process—by increased strength in the heart muscle.

The heart must be able not only to meet the ordinary, everyday extra strain—this it does automatically, as it were, by the unaltered efforts of nature—but it must be stronger than necessary, just as it is in health, to meet some extra strain caused by illness, a sudden nervous shock or some absolutely necessary exertion. It is evident, therefore, that a diseased heart must be strengthened beyond the requirements of a quiet life.

This is accomplished in various ways, but none is better for the purpose than hill climbing or stair climbing, the former for pleasant days, the latter for bad weather. The exercise should, of course, be taken under the direction of a physician, for it can easily be overdone, in which case one of the bad conditions against which it is the object of the exercise to provide will be artificially produced and the heart will be overtaxed before it is strong enough to withstand the extra strain.—Youth's Companion.

NATURAL HISTORY.

All animals ruminate which have horns and cloven feet.

The offspring of two rabbits might in ten years number 70,000,000.

Flying fish have been known to jump ten feet above the surface of the sea.

The puffin is the most punctual of birds in the matter of its annual migration.

The moose deer has the largest horns of any animal. They often weigh from fifty to sixty pounds.

The boa and python have the largest number of ribs of any animals, the number being 320 pairs.

Some few birds, notably the blue-throat, accomplish the whole of their migratory journey in one stupendous effort.

The reindeer can endure more than any other draft animal except the camel. A reindeer has been known to pull 200 pounds at ten miles an hour for twelve hours.

Secondhand Book Habit.

One of the novel habits of the present day is one that takes one to secondhand bookstores, says the Philadelphia North American. Dealers in dissipated libraries call it aptly enough the "secondhand book habit."

A clerk whose duty it is to stand at the front of the secondhand bookstore and watch out for possible purchasers is the one who first made note of this queer habit. He noticed that the same men and women were wont to stop and cursorily inspect the same dusty volumes day after day, year in and year out. They come every day—the same old faces—and they look over the same old books, and they never say anything, and they never buy anything, and after awhile, when their time is up, they go away as silently as they came.

An Embarrassing Answer.

A man sent a note to a rich neighbor with whom he was on friendly terms to know if he could borrow an ass for a few hours. The worthy old man was no scholar, and happened to have a guest sitting with him at the time, to whom he did not wish to expose his ignorance. Opening the note and pretending to read it, he reflected a moment and turned to the servant. "Very good," said he. "Tell your master I'll come myself presently."

The Inventor's Triumph.

"You say that Arbeiter's inventions have made several men millionaires, but did he ever make anything out of them?"
"Oh, yes. He was singularly successful with his devices in that respect. He made enough to perfect all of them."—Indianapolis News.

All in Vain.

Clara—I suppose I shall have to give Mr. Pickleback the next dance.
Maud—Why don't you sit it out with him?
