A young woman living in a suburban village turned her graceful talent for dancing to account by carrying on the instruction of the young folks in the neighborhood in that art. At the beginning of the term her class was attended by an awkward, overgrown girl who was much in need of such culture. She was the daughter of a local undertaker. After two lessons she discontinued attendance, and one of her acquaintances asked her why she had given up her lessons.
"Well," said she, "Miss Blank never patronizes my father, and so I won't patronize her school."—Philadelphia

SUMMONS.

A Feast of Horsemanship.
For the sake of a wager a remarkable feat of horsemanship was some years ago accomplished by a sporting nobleman in a certain London mansion. He made a bet with a friend that he would ride his pony from the ground floor of the house to the top and down again. His steed required a good deal of persuasion to attempt the task, but it was finally performed, though the damage done to the stair carpets and other things amounted to almost $1,000, which had to be paid by the winner.

His Reputation.
Upgardson—On the strength of your recommendation I lent Bilcombe $5 the other day, and now I find he's a confirmed defaulter that never pays his debts. You told me he was a man of established reputation.
Atom—So he is. That's the reputation he has established.

Maintaining the Proportion.
Mrs. Nagston—Why, my dear, the last time I heard you tell that story it was only $12 instead of $25 that you lost.
Mr. Nagston—Well, this crowd I'm telling it to is twice as big as that one was.

Up Against It.
"Don't go in there, children," cautioned the wife of the struggling poet, listening a moment to sounds as of a strong man in distress that came from the other room.
"Why not?" they asked.
"Your father is trying to find a rhyme for 'scrofulous.'"—Chicago Tribune.

His Costly Conversation.

HE NEEDS WHISKEY
REFUSES TO ACCEPT STRONG COFFEE AS A SUBSTITUTE.

Carpet Beating Specialist Requires a Stimulant and Proves a Trial to the Weary and Long Suffering Housewife.

With the coming of Summer, housekeepers are having joy and sorrow in getting help to assist them in cleaning house. While some of the people who do this kind of work are very reliable, others are not worth a damaged nickel.

The other day a lady of Oregon City secured the services of a well known "character" to take up and clean and put down again a parlor carpet on a certain Monday morning. Everything was arranged for the convenience of the carpet beating specialist, but he came not. On Tuesday he staggered into the house and said that he had been "sick" the day before, but that he thought if he had a little whiskey it might settle his stomach so that he could go to work. This naturally made the lady indignant, but as she wanted to get her room cleaned, she thought she would try and sober up the man with an offer of some strong coffee.

"Coffee," said he of the Cyrus Noble breath, "coffee never did me any good. When I gets this way what I wants is another drink of whiskey. I have so many friends that I can't help getting 'fall' now and then. Now lady, just let me go down town and get another drink and I'll fix that carpet."

As he staggered onto the front gate he turned around and waved an affectionate farewell to the lady who was standing helplessly on the front door step.
On Friday a thick voiced and limber person came back and put down the carpet but it didn't—well, no it didn't look well.

WRESTLING WITH RUSSIAN
The Traveler Wanted a Towel and Finally Got It.

A. H. Savage Lauder, in his book of travel, "Across Corveted Lands," relates an amusing railway incident that occurred in Russia while he was en route to Persia.
"Unable to get at my towels packed in my registered baggage and ignorant of the Russian language," he says, "I inquired of a polyglot fellow passenger what was the Russian word for towel so that I could ask the guard for one 'palatienski, palatienski, palatienski,' as to impress the word well upon my memory. Having enjoyed a good wash and a shampoo and dripping all over with water, I rang for the guard, and sure enough, when the man came I could not recollect the word. At last it dawned upon me that it was 'palatin ski,' and 'palatienski' I asked of the guard. To my surprise the guard smiled graciously, and, putting on a modest air, replied, 'Palatinski niet paruski' ('I do not speak Latin, I speak only Russian'), and the more I repeated 'palatienski,' putting the inflection now on one syllable, then on the other, to make him understand, the more flattered the man seemed to be, and modestly gave the same answer.
"This was incomprehensible to me until my polyglot fellow passenger came to my assistance. 'Do you know what you are asking the guard?' he said in convulsions of laughter. 'Yes, I am asking for a palatinski—a towel.' 'No, you are not' and he positively went into hysterics. 'Palatinski means 'Do you speak Latin?' How can you expect a Russian railway guard to speak Latin? Look how incensed the poor man is at being mistaken for a Latin scholar! Ask him for a palatienski, and he will run for a towel.'
"The man did run on the magic word being pronounced and duly returned with a nice clean palatienski, which, however, was of little use to me, for I had by this time got dry by the natural processes of dripping evaporation."

BILLIARDS FOR WOMEN.

According to Shakespeare, Cleopatra Played the Game.
In France a gentleman is not ashamed to take his wife to see a professional billiard game. Frenchwomen are good billiard players and like to see all the fancy shots made by professionals as soon as they begin to attract attention. They read the billiard news in the daily papers and subscribe to journals published especially for billiardists. According to Shakespeare, women have played billiards from the time of Cleopatra. In 30 B. C. he makes the Egyptian queen summon Charman to billiards. Mary, queen of Scots, was passionately fond of the game. On the evening preceding her execution she wrote to the archbishop of Glasgow that her billiard table had been taken away from her as a preliminary step to her punishment. The Empress Josephine used to rouse Napoleon from his gloomy moods by a game of billiards. Adelina Patti became disgusted with her English table and had one made in New York for which she paid $2,500.
The efficacy of billiards as a health restorer is beyond dispute. The motions gone through will reach every part of the body and operate on the entire system. They completely dispel languor and "that tired feeling." The tension of the muscles is tested and the blood sent in swifter circulation through the veins.

WATER AS MEDICINE.

Said to Cure Dyspepsia if Taken in Sufficient Quantities.
A physician has called attention to the use of water not only as a remedial and therapeutic agent, but also as a mechanical agent, in the treatment of certain forms of dyspepsia, especially those forms characterized by a fullness in the left epigastric region, with frequent eructations of sour or acrid matter, accompanied by loss of appetite, insomnia and a mental condition closely allied to melancholia.

Let the patient drink from one to three pints of water one hour before each meal and then comfortably seat himself in an easy rocking chair and rock backward and forward for half an hour. The rocking will agitate the water in the stomach, wash the walls completely, detaching any mucus that may be adhering and dilute and mix the contents thoroughly. By this means absorption will be more rapid, and as a consequence the skin, kidneys and bowels will act more freely, eliminating from the blood uric acid and all effete and deleterious matter, while the stimulus of the water will cause the stomach to contract and gastric juice to be secreted in such quantity as to cause digestion to go on uninterrupted and painlessly.—Farm and Fireside.

A Historic Lemon.

Who ever thinks of connecting such a commonplace article of diet as the lemon with the romantic history of ill fated Anne Boleyn? Yet indirectly she was the cause of its first introduction into England and so into popular notice. Henry VIII gave such splendid feasts and presents in honor of the coronation of Anne and of their previous nuptials as had seldom been accorded to queens of the blood royal. These kingly entertainments were in turn followed by the great civic feasts of London, for which the whole world was searched for delicacies to add to the splendor.

At one such banquet, graced by the presence of the royal pair, a lemon was introduced as an elegant novelty. To an epicure such as Henry the acquisition of a castle in France would have proved less acceptable, and such was the importance attached to the discovery—so says an old biographer—that a special record was made of the fact that the cost of this precious lemon was six silver pennies!

Birdlike Reptiles.

The most birdlike reptiles in the world are the beautiful iguanas of tropical America. The smallest members of this family, belonging to the genus anolis, swarm in the bushes and trees of the West Indies and in many points resemble humming birds. Gosse in "A Naturalist's Sojourn in Jamaica" gives a vivid description of them. On a bright day hundreds of these brilliantly colored creatures may be seen on trees and fences, entertaining visitors by their gambols, leaping from branch to branch, fearlessly entering houses and even alighting on individuals. When irritated, they will suddenly change their brilliant colors for a dull, sooty brown.

Analogous to these, but not nearly so graceful, are the flying lizards of the old world. With hinder ribs prolonged to support a parachute-like expansion, these brightly marked reptiles are often mistaken for birds as they take flying leaps from tree to tree, for they are thoroughly arboreal.

Baldness Due to Indigestion.

"There seem to be fewer baldheaded men than there were years ago," said a physician. "Time was when four out of five men more than forty-five years old were baldheaded or fast approaching that stage. Nowadays the average has fallen nearer to two than to three.
"What's the cause? I suppose there are many reasons, but one certainly is to be found in the general increase of outdoor exercise. Nervous disorders result in the falling out of the hair and impaired digestion brings on nervous disorders. Exercise, as is well known, stimulates digestion, and there above all else is the secret of preserving the hair. Keep your digestion in good condition and your nerves will not trouble you. All the scalp diseases in the catalogue are not responsible for as many baldheads as indigestion."

A Story of Brignoli.

Praise went a long way with Brignoli. One evening at rehearsal in New York the orchestra laid down their instruments as one man and applauded his singing of a favorite song long and vigorously. He was much pleased and, advancing to the footlights with many a bow and smile of satisfaction, said: "Gentlemen, immediately after the rehearsal there will be a champagne supper at the Everett House. I hope I may have the honor to meet you all there."
It is needless to remark that they were there, every man of them. The supper cost Brignoli $500.

The Noble Character.

Here is Aristotle's definition of a noble character: He does not recollect injustice; for accurate recollection, especially of injuries, is not characteristic of the magnanimous man, but he rather overlooks them. He is not fond of talking of people, for he will neither speak of himself nor anybody else; for he does not care that he himself should be praised nor that others should be blamed.

Patience Rewarded.

Smith—I hear Short, the coal man, has come into a large fortune.
Jones—Well, he's entitled to it.
Smith—Oh, he is, eh?
Jones—Yes; he's been lying in wait for it a good many years.—Chicago News.

There is a pleasure in doing good which sufficiently pays itself.—Van-brugh.
