SUNDAY CLOSING OF FAIR.

The ministerial association, of Portland, has declared most emphatically against the Sunday opening of the 1903 Fair. Their idea of the purposes of Sunday corresponds with that of our Pilgrim Fathers, but the Sabbath of today is essentially a day of rest, and is recognized, not so much by reason of divine command, but more from the mere fact that man is so constituted physically that he needs to rest as often as one day out of seven. Public necessity demands that the same day be observed by all people.

The manner of enjoying this day of rest, however, is a matter of individual choice. It is far from recreation, in the minds of many persons, to sit and listen to the cant and dogmas, reiterated for the thousandth time, of some shallow divine's favorite creed. These persons might find rest for body and mind in wandering through the groves and picturesque places of beautifully planned exposition grounds. Then let them enjoy this privilege.

If there are departments that can be conveniently closed on Sunday, and if their operation breaks into the quiet of the day, there would probably be a general sentiment in favor of their closing.

But while it is urged that employees of the Fair should have a rest once a week, there will be few whose tasks will be burdensome, and it must be remembered that the convenience of the many demands from a few the sacrifice of their day of rest.

We believe the resolutions of the ministerial association will not be supported by public opinion.

THE McLOUGHLIN FAMILY.

At the ripe old age of eighty-two, David McLoughlin has passed away. He has lived to see the state of Oregon grow from a wilderness, traversed by winding Indian trails, into a great commonwealth, dotted with beautiful cities and ornamented by the handiwork of an ingenious people.

Quietly the last survivor of the family of John McLoughlin has slipped out of sight. This son, David, was little known here, and many were not aware, when they looked upon the humble monument in the little churchyard corner, that marks the resting place of John McLoughlin, that a member of his immediate family still lived.

The founder of our city, his dusky wife and children, live now in history alone, but an imperishable monument will hold in the memory of succeeding generations, the family name. This monument is the title deed by which we hold our home in the city, built on the Oregon City claim of John McLoughlin.

SHALL WE CELEBRATE.

An undertaking, the success of which depends very much on the early preparations, is the celebration of the 4th of July. We would like to take it as a matter of course that Oregon City will celebrate. Every town the size of Oregon City should every year commemorate the signing of the Declaration of independence, if not at great expense at least modestly and with appropriate exercises. Ours is a liberty loving, patriotic people, but as our independence becomes older there will be a tendency to forget the "Spirit of '76." Therefore, on the days that are anniversaries of events that form the cornerstones of our country's history, it is proper that we gather together in a spirit of rejoicing and patriotism.

There is also a business side to the matter. We have a neighbor that is the bane of the Oregon City business men. It is by no means a business policy for us all to shut up shop on the National holiday, and go to Portland to spend our money. Let us stay at home, make it pleasant for the country folk to come to town for the day, and have a pleasant time, which does not necessarily require a great expenditure.

Will the Board of Trade call a meeting, appoint committees, and start the ball rolling?

A complaint was filed by 25 neighbors of Henry Brant and Henry Ginter stating that these two gentlemen had appropriated to their use a portion of the street. This was referred to the councilmen from the third ward.

Several liquor licenses were granted and the council adjourned to meet next Tuesday, when the Ryan elevator franchise ordinance will be considered.

MOUNTAINS COVERED WITH SNOW.

DOVER ORCHARDS ARE WEIGHTED DOWN WITH FRUIT BLOSSOMS.

DOVER, May 6.—(Special.)—The mountains are still covered with snow. Plenty of warm sunshine, good pasture on the range for the stock and good water everywhere. This is the place for your home, where there is good fresh air.

The orchards are weighted down with blossoms. If one-fourth of the blossoms stay on, there will be an abundance of all kinds of fruit. Crops look well and the people are busy planting corn and beans and vegetables of all kinds. This is the finest place to live in Oregon.

Mr. Rusk has sold his farm. It is understood there will be two families come to live on it. The more the better.

CO. A. INSPECTION.

Major Chynoweth, U. S. Army Puts the Men Through Their Paces.

Company A, O. N. G., was inspected last night by Major Edward Chynoweth, W. S. A., and General Jackson, the regular National Guard Inspector.

The Company was in heavy marching order and each man was equipped with campaign hat, leggings, blankets, overcoat, haversack and mess kit.

The men presented a very creditable appearance and went through a hard drill in a very satisfactory manner, although they were carrying a weight of about 50 pounds around with them. There was a fair crowd to see the inspection and judging from the number of girls at the Armory last night, every man in the Company must have a sweetheart.

Mamma—No, dear, you may not.

Tommy—Darn grammar, anyway!—Lippincott's.

Too Attractive.

"And here," said the salesman, "is a very fine umbrella. The handle, you will observe, is especially attractive."

"That's just what I want to avoid. Every umbrella I ever owned has been entirely too attractive."

One Reason Why.

"She is very bright for one who has just lost her husband."

"That's so; but you must remember that she is in the honeymoon of her widowhood."

After crosses and losses men grow humbler and wiser.—Franklin.
