NATION'S CHIEF MAKES A BRIEF SPEECH AT DEPOT.

Big Crowd Gathered at Station and Cheered President Roosevelt, Who Says That He Likes Oregon and Her People.

Contrary to expectations, the President stopped at Oregon City on his visit to the West.

At 12 M. the people began to gather at the station in anticipation of seeing Binger Hermann and incidentally the President of these United States. The train arrived on schedule time and the crowd cheered when it saw the business like looking man who did things to the Spainards at San Juan Hill.

President Roosevelt's speech was brief and to the point.

"I am glad," he said, "to be able to visit your beautiful state and furthermore to speak to the citizens of this manufacturing city."

"A man, if he has the right stuff in him, will succeed and if he has not, he will fail."

"I like Oregon and I like the stock of the people and, judging from the babies, there is plenty of good stuff in the citizens of this state."

At this, a proud father held up his offspring, at which the President said: "It is a fine specimen, to be sure."

Two minutes the President was here but the people could have listened to him for two years. As the train was leaving, someone from the crowd threw a rose to the President, which he caught and as the train left the city, he smiled and waved the rose to the people while the crowd cheered again. Amid all this Binger Hermann smiled and waved his hat to the crowd in gratitude. Perhaps he "knew his father."
