THE BACCALAUREATE

The Exercise Occurred Sunday Morning in the Armory—Many There.

The baccalaureate is always a popular feature of Commencement at the Agricultural College.

The sermon was by Dr. John H. Coleman, the new president of Willamette University.

The address was original and interesting. The speaker said many good things, some of which sent an audible ripple of laughter through the audience.

There could be no more profitable occupation for thoughtful persons who wish to treat their eyes to some of the great sights of astronomy than by looking at Jupiter with a telescope.

Jupiter is a world now about that stage in existence which is dimly hinted at in the opening verses of Genesis.

The big auditorium presented a fine view to the eye, during the baccalaureate hour.

Other features of the exercise were, Mendelssohn's St. Paul by the chorus, hymn by congregation, invocation, Baldwin's Te Deum, by the chorus, scripture lesson, prayer, response, Lord's Prayer, sung by the chorus; Kipling's Recessional, by the chorus; hymn by the congregation and benediction.

WATCHING JUPITER

That is What Young Folks do Now—Some Old Ones do, too.

It is popular in town now to watch Jupiter. The big planet is for the first time in several years, in apposition with the earth.

Young folks about town spend much time watching the star now. It seems to have a fascination for them.

Jupiter is a world now about that stage in existence which is dimly hinted at in the opening verses of Genesis.

The imagination is appalled while looking upon a planet so enormously greater than ours.

It would be a good thing for some of our blowers of trust bubbles to look at and think about Jupiter as he gleams lazily and gigantically through the misty summer air.

He would teach them how small they and their works are after all. Or perhaps he would stimulate their ambition to attempt the cornering of a bigger world.

Jupiter will be in a more favorable position for telescopic observation this summer than he was during his last apposition.

In short Jupiter is the scene of the play of energies, so immense and varied that one must be prepared for a surprise every time he comes back into the range of vision.

WORKMEN GALORE

Seven Hundred Came—They Stopped Half an Hour in Corvallis.

Seven hundred workmen from various parts of the United States and Canada, visited Corvallis Monday.

They were met at the station by several hundred townspeople. A committee from the local lodges of A. O. U. W. and Degree of Honor was there, and so were nearly all the members of those lodges in town.

All the visitors were delighted with the Willamette Valley. One of them from the sunny South: "I am to old too come to Oregon myself; but I have two boys and a girl, and I am going to give them the best education I can, and then tell them to come out West."

After a stop of half an hour they took the train over the westside for Portland. It came out of Portland on the eastside, and stopped for two hours at Salem.

About $40 was lost by a Corvallis business man in the cashing of a forged check last week.

The method by which the check was cashed is new, and there is no surprise that it worked.

All this happened on Tuesday of last week. The check was laid away with others. Nothing more was thought of the incident until last Saturday, four days after the transaction.
