THE EXTRA SESSION

WHAT CHAMBERLAIN MIGHT DO IF NO EXTRA SESSION BE CALLED BY GEER.

Petitions Asking Governor Geer to Call the Session in Circulation and Generally Signed—Other News.

Salem, July 1.—The Capital Journal says: Much as the people generally distrust and fear a session of the legislature, they are rolling in the petitions for a special session.

While the organs of the politicians and grafters are opposing the proposition of enacting flat salaries, the people, regardless of party, are demanding this reform.

Petitions have been received since the last report from citizens of Wilhoit, Clackamas county; Fairfield and Scotts Mills, Marion county; forty citizens and business men of Independence, Polk county; citizens of Salem and Gervais; of Gervais, Maclay, Pratum, Marion and Suver.

The above have been transmitted to Governor Geer and placed on file, and new petitions are being circulated by scores of persons.

Salem, July 1.—The Capital Journal says: After making his campaign on the flat salary proposition, and winning his election on that proposition, Governor-elect Chamberlain will not drop the subject, if the republicans fail to meet and put the law into effect.

No one can doubt that he will make the failure prominent in his message, and will back up his message with action that will be very embarrassing to the party in power.

Refusal to hold a special session means to defer for four years what was promised in plain language in the republican platform. Chamberlain will do some plain speaking and plainer acting, in such a case of failure to perform a paramount duty.

He can veto all bills carrying appropriations for unconstitutional salaries, and the people will sustain him. He can sue to recover back to the state all the fees and perquisites that have been pocketed by state officials for the past four years, and the courts will have to sustain him.

Chamberlain can make the republicans no end of trouble and be only performing his plain duty under the constitution which he takes an oath to uphold and defend. And who can blame him and who will censure him?

We are not saying that he will do these things but the people will be very much disappointed if he does not after the campaign he made against unconstitutional fees and perquisites, and unlawful, roundabout payment of salaries to state officials.

Salem, July 1.—(To the Editor.)—On the strength that Tracy and Merrill had been severely whipped, some newspapers and correspondents have read very caustic lectures to the prison management.

As an answer to all of them, allow me to say that neither Tracy or Merrill was ever struck by a lash of any kind, whip or rod, not even by a Brockway spanker.

Other stories, quite as startling, but equally unfounded, are in circulation. The man who should attempt to review and refute them would find himself confronted by a Sisyphean task. I shall not attempt it. At the proper time a calm and complete vindication of our management can be presented to the public.

J. D. LEE, Superintendent O. S. P.

Oregon City, July 1.—Work of raising the steamer Gray Eagle, which ran on a rock above Clackamas Rapids last Wednesday evening and was beached on the west side of the river near this city, has been abandoned. It was found after repeated trials that it was almost impossible to raise her by means of pumps. The extent of the damage to her hull is considerable. It is now the intention of the Oregon City Transportation Company to do nothing until after the river falls sufficiently to repair the boat where she is beached.

St. Helens, July 1.—August Schieve, the murderer of Joseph Shulknowski, who is to be hanged at noon tomorrow, was somewhat nervous this afternoon, for the first time since he has received his sentence. However, he still makes an attempt to appear cheerful. Previous to this afternoon he had not shown the least indication of weakness, and has at times made jocose remarks about the coming execution. It is expected that the county authorities will take charge of the body after the execution and bury it in the pauper in the German Hill cemetery, as Schieve's relatives have not expressed any desire to attend to the interment of their convicted relative after death shall have taken place.

TRAIL OF BLOOD

Convict Tracy Kills two men and Wounds two More.

news of his appearance in town was conveyed by a butcher boy, who went to the house to deliver meat. The boy was met at the door by Mrs Van Horn who cautioned him to keep quiet. She whispered in his ear that Tracy was at that moment eating his dinner in a room adjoining the kitchen.

The boy tore from the premises posthaste, and drove in a dead run for Fremont. He stopped on the main thoroughfare and related the news. A number of men organized and armed themselves and started at once for the Van Horn home. Patrolman Breeze, Neil Rawley, a coal miner and J I Knight, a local insurance man, with Sheriff Cudihoe, fully armed, soon surrounded the Van Horn house. The guards were disposed at various places about the house.

Within a short time, Tracy appeared. He was walking between the two men whom he had impressed. They approached the horses near the gate. They passed within six feet of where one of the posse was crouching. By this time it was getting dark Breeze arose from his hiding place and cried out "Drop that gun Tracy." The answer was two shots in quick succession. Breeze reeled and fell to the ground. Another of the bullets entered the body of Rawley, inflicting a dangerous wound. Two shots were fired by one of the posse at the retreating convict, but neither took effect. As Tracy fled Sheriff Cudihoe jumped a fence which he had been stationed behind and fired two shots in quick succession, but neither took effect. Tracy fled into the brush along the road, and disappeared. Rawley was wounded in the right side. Breeze lay dead where he fell at the crack of the convicts deadly Winchester. The wildest excitement prevailed in the city since the appearance of Tracy in this vicinity. The governor has ordered out the militia, and has offered a reward of $2,500 for the capture of Tracy.

TRACY COMPELLED FOUR MEN TO FERRY HIM OVER PUGET SOUND.

Has Parted from Merrill—Says He Killed His Companion—Has Gone to Seattle—A Story of Boldness that Outdoes Fiction.

Olympia, Wash., July 2.—Tracy and Merrill, the escaped Oregon convicts, have separated, and Tracy is out on Puget Sound in a gasoline launch after a series of escapades that would put fiction writers to blush. Yesterday afternoon Tracy robbed the house of an aged, Scottish man named Alexander Laird, who lives about four miles southwest of Olympia, left Laird bound hand and foot on the bed, stole a horse from another rancher named McLeod, and a saddle and bridle from a neighbor named Johnson. Tracy passed through Olympia at 1:30 this morning and reached the upper end of South Bay at 5 a. m. On the way he broke the leg of the horse, abandoned it and stole another.

At South Bay, the Capitol City Oyster Company, of this city, has four men at work seeding oyster beds. Two of the men were in a small cottage, and when they arose at 5 this morning Tracy was at the door with his rifle, demanding breakfast. When the two other men, who were staying in the boat house, arrived for breakfast they were also lined up. Anchored in the bay was the large gasoline launch N. & S., chartered by the oyster company to tow oyster scows from big Skokum Inlet. On board were Captain Clark and his son, who also were lined up when they arrived for breakfast.

When breakfast was over, two of the men, Will Langrige and Will Adair, were left tied in the cabin, and at the point of the rifle the other two men, with the captain and son, were driven on board the launch and the party sailed away. Langrige and Adair were left with their hands tied behind them and their legs doubled back and tied to the hands. Tracy had a bed brought down from the cabin and lay on it. They succeeded in breaking their bonds at 11 o'clock this morning, but did not reach Olympia until late this afternoon. The two men taken with Captain Clark and his son were John Munro and Frank Scott, of this city.

The fact that four men were taken was due to the demands of the captain, who claimed that number was necessary to run the boat. Will Langrige, who brought the news to this county, is a son of a leading farmer of this county, and is thoroughly reliable. He tells a very straight forward story, in which there is no shadow of doubt. He says that Tracy talked incessantly. He told his captives that he had killed Merrill because he discovered the latter had played him false and because Merrill was careless and made too much noise in the woods.

Tracy said he was going to Tacoma, where he said he had friends, and he took the best clothes he could find in the cabin, in order, he said, to disguise himself. Both stories are believed to be false here. Merrill is believed to be on his way to Mason county. Tracy told of driving through one town in a buggy in daylight, and of traveling part of the way on the train. Langrige said he was suffering from loss of sleep, and talked like a crazy man. Tracy said he would have no compunction in killing to effect his escape; that he was never so cool as when fighting, and gloried in it.

Word of Tracy's escapades was brought to town this morning by Johnson, McLeod and Laird. Tracy appeared at Laird's house at 1 o'clock yesterday and cooked a meal after he had tied the aged rancher securely. He was in the house until 5 o'clock, and when he left carried a note from Laird, which he promised to nail to Johnson's fence. The note asked Johnson to release Laird, but the latter succeeded in extricating himself about 7 that evening. He was afraid to go out last evening, but this morning notified Johnson and another neighbor named McLeod, and the three came to town together. The note was found tacked to fence, as Tracy promised. Tracy was armed with a rifle and had 200 rounds of ammunition. He exchanged his underclothes for a suit of Laird's, left his shoes and took a pair of rubber boots, and a reddish-brown coat for a black one. He told Laird that Merrill was two or three miles away.

On learning of Tracy's presence, the posse, which was at work near the town of Roy, was called in and was put at work guarding the roads leading to Mason county.

Seattle, Wash., July 2.—Tracy the escaped Oregon convict, is in Seattle. He landed tonight at Meadow Point, 2½ miles north of Ballard. The last seen of him he was headed for Seattle with the express intention of holding up a policeman in order to secure his revolver. He came here in the gasoline launch "N. & S." A posse was organized by the local police, and is now in pursuit of the daring criminal.

Shortly the board of naval construction will take up for consideration the subject of increasing the number of submarine torpedo boats. There is likely to be a division of opinion on the matter. It is said that Rear Admiral O'Neil, chief of ordnance, and Chief Constructor Hiebhorn are in favor of building more boats of that type, while Rear Admiral Melville, engineer in chief, and Chief of the Equipment Bureau Bradford are not disposed to favor the idea. Secretary Long will probably be guided largely by the advice of his experts in making recommendations to congress on the subject.

There are some flattering reports relating to the Holland, which is beginning to see practical service. The boat, naval officers say, has contributed a new and menacing element to naval operations and has presented new problems which must be met. Capt. Folger, commanding the Kearsarge, already anticipated this when he suggested a provision of light torpedo boats to guard against the invasion by submarine boats.

It has evidently become necessary, say the naval strategists, to add small picket boats to the cargo of a big ship in order to offset the effect of the submarine boat. The seven boats of the latter type now under contract will provide a liberal strength in this respect, but some of the naval officers believe we should continue the work. Others believe we should await the result of the trials of the boats now under contract and take advantage of any improvements which may be suggested.
