In twenty minutes after the first party arrived, the members were swallowing salads, ham, pickles, jellies, cake, ice cream, coffee and other edibles at the twenty tables. Numerous Lincoln and Benton afterwards all strolled or stood in buildings. On arrival, the second party was hurried to luncheon, canadian Bank of Commerce and thereafter taken to the Armory for the dedicatory ceremonies.

Most impressive were the dedi-Canada-Canadian Bank of Commerce catory exercises. The Armory platform was crowded with distinguished men. Governors' congressmen, senators, past, present and prospective were there in profusion. Side by side, sat President and President Gatch of the college. The college board of regents, under whose policy and economy in use of provided funds the new building was made possible, appeared in a body, President Weatherford at their head. The galleries and main floor of the big auditorium dents and others flocked thither as were a mass of humanity. Twelve hundred to 1400 people were there. GEORGE E. CHAMBERLAIN." It was after four o'clock when county people ate with them, and the exercises in the Armory were concluded. After the dediknots about the grounds or in the catory address, came an address by State Lecturer Buxton of the Grange, another by Congressman Tongue, and a speech by H B Miller. Congressman-elect Williamson wasalso to have been a speaker but the programme turned out to be so long, that not only was the latter's address eliminated, but Mr Miller's was cut to the brevity of a five minutes talk. The addresses were all of high character, and each Campbell of the State University pronounced in its praise of the college and its work.

Before their departure, a large number of the visitors took a look at football as exemplified by O A C men. The play was on the field, within a few yards of the Armory. Farmers, senators, university presisoon as the game was announced They filled the new grand stand to overflowing, and as the play went on they became heated with interest and enthusiasm. The noise was as real and as characteristic as though the place were filled with excited college students instead of staid old citizens. The game only touchdown, when the players were called from the field. Then the visitors diverted and pleased with the varied events of the afternoon railroad stations, and all of them earnest in commendation of what they had seen and heard.

No past event in the history of the college has been so calculated to quicken the pulse and give impetus to the advancement of OAC ceremony out on the hill, Wednesday afternoon.

SAW THE ECLIPSE

All Conditions Favorable and There Were Many Observers.

All Corvallis was out to see the eclipse of the moon Thursday night. The event transpired on schedule time as laid down by the astronomers, and was a howling success. The eclipse began to show itself on the east edge of the moon, and slowly advanced until it became total. Then it passed slowly off, exhibiting many interesting phenomena. When the totality was passing off, one enthusiastic female observer declared that the moon looked then like it had a big black log across it. After the eclipse another observer said the moon looked like it had blood on it In fact a very red hue was noticeable, due to refraction of rays of light in the earth's atmosphere, enabling the moon to be seen before it had really passed out of the shadow. Every condition was highly favorable for observing the phenomenon, and many old inhabitants declare the eclipse to have been the nearest up-to-date of anything they have ever seen. One young woman said it was lovely, and just as good an eclipse as we "used to have back in Bosting."

As everybody knows, the moon's eclipse is caused by the moon passing through the shadow of the earth, always thrown out through space on the opposite side from the sun. On account of the immensely earth, this shadow becomes smaller as the distance from the earth is increased. It is in fact a perfect cone in shape. Immediately at the earth, it is 8,000 miles in diameter Two hundred and forty thousand miles away, or at the moon, it is something like 4,000 miles in diameter. As the moon is something like 2,000 miles iu diameter, the earths shadow at the point where the moon passes through it is about twice the moon's diameter. As 4,000 miles of earth's shadow swept itself past the 2,000 miles of moons diameter, making 6,000 miles covered during the brief continuance of the eclipse, some idea is gained of the tremendous velocity at which are old earth and its puny inhabitants are rushing through space. No wonder our express trains and 'our young men are learning to be swift.
