PORTLAND PIANO BUSINESS.

To a Corvallis Lady it Showed up Awfully Lively.

A Corvallis lady who went to Portland last week to purchase a piano and returned without an instrument tells how she was struck with the difference in the piano house's methods of doing business.

"Do you sell many of them?" "More than any other style," replied the clerk. Just then there was another telephone call, and it proved to be an order for the last one of the lady's favorite instrument.

It is needless to say that the lady became braced up by the time she arrived at the next piano house. At the time she entered there didn't seem to be much doing, but as soon as she introduced herself, business began to improve.

"I notice, said the prospective buyer," that you do business on a basis different from your competitors across the way. They sell almost entirely by telephone, while you sell, seemingly, for cash only."

"Yes," responded the attendant, "but—"

Here the lady broke in with this information: "I had hoped to secure an instrument on the installment plan, but since it appears to be your rule to sell for cash I shall go elsewhere."

"The lady would be glad to supplement the Portland board of trade's inquiry as to the scarcity of freight cars, if the Portland piano dealers each ship in 500 pianos per day, as their alleged sales indicate, what becomes of the empty cars?"

FATHER AND DAUGHTER.

Died on the Same Day—Buried Together at Independence—A Tragedy Recalled.

Robert L. Feagles well known Benton County, died in Independence on Saturday of heart failure. A strange and sad coincidence connected with his death. daughter Clara who a few ye ago married a Mr. White, and w resided in Portland died the sa day; the daughter dying at 7 o'clo in the morning, and the father at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The age of Mr. Feagles was 65 and that of his daughter 26. Her body was brought to Independence and a double funeral was held there conducted by Dr. Thompson. The burial occurred Monday afternoon at the Odd Fellows cemetery of that place.

Mr. Feagles came to Benton County from California in 1868, and for a long time resided in the Big Elk country. There he was married to Miss Lillard a daughter of the late Morgan Lillard. The wife died many years ago, leaving three children, Clara, Florence and John. Florence is now the wife of a man named Weatherford and resides in Portland. John Feagles is employed on the farm of Joseph Smith in the north end of Benton. Mr. Feagles spent last winter in Corvallis, and during the summer was out prospecting. Many years ago he discovered a cinnabar ledge in the Cascades, and since the metal became more valuable Mr Feagles has spent much time in a search for the lost ledge. The hope of finding it and the wealth that he expected to result was the fond dream of his declining years.

During the hop season he was a picker at the Independence yards, and after that was at the home of Joseph Smith. Two or three weeks ago he went to Independence, where death overtook him. He was born in Ohio, in 1835, and emigrated from that state to California in 1857. His death recalls a Benton county tragedy, in which Morgan Lillard, the father-in-law met death at the hands of Mr. Feagles. The trouble occurred in the Big Elk country, and was over the question of where a certain county road should pass. Both principals resorted to firearms and a jury found that Mr. Feagles acted in self defense.
