—The O. A. C. athletic field presents a lively scene this week. The men from the various classes are working hard to gain honors for their classes next Saturday. In fact, wherever there are two freshmen together, you may know that they are talking about athletics.

—Stories of all kinds are afloat with reference to things that are alleged to have happened in the Sunday morning shooting. Officers and men who risked their lives in an effort to maintain good order and fair fame of the community are made victims of these foundationless and irrational tales. The fabrications gather force and circumstance as they travel and are finally told with all the solemnity of sacred truth. Malignity is behind some of the fabrications. It is perhaps human nature for these inventions to be carried, and the only way for people to avoid being deceived is to believe nothing that reflects on the honor or reputation of those concerned for the sake of all were above and beyond criticism.

THEY HAVE ARRIVED.

The New Benton County Pamphlets—What They Contain.

The new Benton county pamphlets, of which 22,000 have been printed in San Francisco for distribution in the East, have arrived. They are perhaps the most attractive of all the advertising matter sent East by Oregon counties. In the size of the page they are identical with the original pamphlet issued by the Citizen's League. Of pages, there are nineteen, of which 11 are full page illustrations. The first cover page is the same as in the original pamphlet, and the back page is harvest scenes. The first inside page is pictures of the public school, court house and city hall, and the second is a birds eye view of the college campus. The fourth page is pictures of Corvallis churches and the fifth is descriptive of Benton county soil and climate. The sixth is views of college buildings and the seventh is pictures of fancy stock. The eighth treats of agriculture and stock raising and the ninth is a picture of fine live stock. The tenth is an article on horticulture and dairying and the 11th is a view of prune orchards in the county. The 12th describes poultry and manufacturing industry, and the 13th is a description of transportation facilities. Pages 14 and 15 are devoted to timber, markets, cities and schools, and 16 treats of morals and religion and fish and game. Page 17 illustrates more college buildings and the book concludes with a goat scene and prices of land and labor.

The book was prepared and printed by the Citizen's League at a cost of nearly $400.

WITH DEADLY REVOLVER

are able to give an intelligent narration of what occurred. Turner says that when Keady jumped back and raised his gun to fire, he himself ran back a distance of twenty feet, and that from where he stood he could not distinguish the men. Herman Breyer stood next to Keady on the sidewalk and was endeavoring to induce him to give up his revolver when the officers approached. Breyer's story of the affair is as follows: "When we saw two men coming from the direction of the Methodist church, Keady stepped off the sidewalk and said, 'Just watch me drop these two.' I asked Keady for Keady's sake not to shoot again, but to give himself up, and Turner said, 'Bis is right, Peg; he is giving you straight goods.' The officers were within a few feet of us before we recognized them. Sheriff Burnett, as they reached us, stepped forward and laying his hand on Keady's arm said, 'I want you, Keady.' The sheriff's movement was quick, but Keady broke away, and jumping back, quickly drew his revolver. He fired straight at Burnett, but missed his mark. At that moment Jim Dunn made a quick movement to get hold of Keady, and Keady turned his pistol on him. They were so close together that the muzzle of the pistol seemed to be against Dunn's body. He fired and Dunn sank to his knees. Almost at the same moment Sheriff Burnett fired his first and only shot. Keady staggered and fell to the ground. The sheriff's shot was followed by two or three others in quick succession by Dunn. After Keady fell, Burnett stood over him and said, 'Don't you move, Keady; don't you move.' Keady was lying with his head in a depression, with his feet much higher than his body. The shots came in rapid succession, and were all fired within the space of six or eight seconds of time. I think Dunn fired as he was sinking to his knees and fired again after he was down. I am satisfied that Dunn's first shot took effect as Keady fell.

"After the shooting, Telt said to Jim, 'How badly are you hurt, Jim?' Jim said he didn't know. He said, 'Maybe I ain't hurt at all; maybe I am just scared; but I feel as though I am badly hurt.' By that time people were coming from all directions, and soon there was a crowd on the spot. Chief Lane, Tommy Davis, Newt Adams and Fruit were the first to arrive. Then we went for doctors and when Farrar and Cathey got there, they lit a match and looked at Keady, and said there was no help for him. After that we got a stretcher and carried Jim Dunn to the hotel and Keady was taken to the morgue."

It is the opinion of Dr. Cathey that the shot by Sheriff Burnett did not kill Keady. It entered the face below and back of the cheek bone and passed out near the eye on the other side of the face. It did not touch the brain, but passed near the roof of the mouth, and was not necessarily a fatal injury. Dr. Cathey was the first to touch Keady after the shooting, and when he arrived, Keady was lying on his face with his arms under him. There was no pulse, but Keady was still breathing, indicating that heart action had stopped. A wound that entered near the anus and passed to a point above the navel is believed by Dr. Cathey to have been the shot that produced death. He thinks it cut the abdominal aorta and that death resulted from swift internal bleeding.

The scene of the shooting is the same spot where within a month of ten years ago there was another pistol duel in which Ed Scott was a dramatic figure. No inquest was held over the remains of Keady, the facts being all apparent.

Salt Lake, Utah, April 22.—Frank Rose, the wife murderer, was shot to death in the jail yard here this morning.

In compliance of the laws of this state the condemned man was handcuffed, and with a small white target over his heart was told by the sheriff that death awaited him.

He begged to be allowed to walk unaided to the fatal chair which had been placed near the center of the jail yard. He objected to being strapped and was gruff to the deputies when they refused to grant his wish. He was boastful to the last and even when the bandages were placed over his eyes he repeated former stories he had told of revolting crimes that he had committed.

After being securely strapped to the chair in a sitting position, the sheriff gave the signal, and from a blue cloth in the jailyard five shots rang out simultaneously and the murderer's form quivered for a moment, his head fell on his breast and he was dead, with four bullet wounds in the region of the heart. One of the executioners' rifle, as is the custom, contained but a blank cartridge.

Before daylight this morning Rose was awake and called for breakfast, of which he ate heartily. He then resorted to a boastful harangue, in which he said that he had committed robberies and even murders since he was 14 years of age, the last being a murder in San Francisco, where he threw his victim's body in the bay. The condemned man's stories are not believed by the police, although Rose insisted that they are true to the very last.

The crime for which Rose suffered death this morning was one of the most horrifying ever committed in this state.

On last Christmas day he returned to his home at night and murdered his wife as she lay in bed with their 3-year-old child in her arms. The baby awakened before he left the room. As he went out he locked the door and for two days the living and the dead occupied the bloody bed.

When officers discovered the crime the little one was alive, but half-famished and was crying for its dead mother.

The murderer was soon apprehended and when placed in custody boasted of his fiendish act and said he wanted to be shot at once. He remained callous to the last.

Emperor Tells Students at Bonn That Presence of Empress at Komms Should Be Lifelong Inspiration.

At the commers of the Borussia student corps, which was held at Bonn, Emperor William, who was present referred in a speech to the empress of Germany, who witnessed the komms from the gallery of the building. Alluding to the presence of his wife, the emperor said:

"The chroniclers record that when our forefathers met in tournaments it was perfectly natural that a circle of illustrious ladies should witness their deeds, and with pride the victor received the wreath presented by a lovely hand. It was thus also at Wartburg, when they seized the harp and lyre and sang in competition.

"Never before, so long as the history of German universities has been written, has any university received such an honor as is conferred to-day upon that of Bonn. In company with the beauty of Bonn and surrounded by ladies of princely rank, her majesty, the empress, the first princess of the land, has appeared at a students' komms. This unprecedented honor has been accorded to the city of Bonn and to the Borussia student corps. I hope and expect that all the young members of the Borussia corps upon whom the eye of the empress has rested to-day have received an inspiration for the rest of their lives. I call for a strong salamander for her majesty; hurrah!"

PLANS CONSUMPTION TEST.

Dr. Garnault, the Paris Physician Who Inoculated Himself with Virus, Is Dissatisfied.

Dr. Garnault, the Paris physician who has inoculated himself with matter taken from a consumptive cow, in order to disprove Prof. Koch's theory that it is impossible for human beings to catch tuberculosis from cattle, is ready for a new experiment.

He does not propose that Dr. Theobald Smith, professor of comparative pathology at the medical school at Harvard university, shall treat him during the present experiment if tuberculosis declares itself. Should the experiment fail, however, then Dr. Garnault will place himself in communication with Dr. Smith and Prof. Baumgarten, of Tubingen, who, he says, "if they do not follow Koch completely, yet express doubts which might be on their grave obligations."

"I do not ask Dr. Smith or Prof. Baumgarten to imitate me," continues Dr. Garnault, "but if the experiment fails I ask them to assure, in concert with me, a new, decisive experiment, to be practiced on myself."

Dr. Garnault also says that he chooses Dr. Smith and Prof. Baumgarten because he is convinced of their scientific good faith, which he questions in Prof. Koch. The French physician is willing to go to Boston if necessary for the experiment.

Dragging Pains. 2825 Keeley St., Chicago, Ill., Oct., 2, 1902. I suffered with fallings and congestion of the womb, with severe pains through the groins. I suffered terribly at the time of menstruation, had blinding headaches and rushing of blood to the brain. What to try I knew not, for it seemed that I had tried all and failed, but I had never tried Wine of Cardui, that blessed remedy for sick women. I found it pleasant to take and soon knew that I had the right medicine. New blood seemed to course through my veins and after using eleven bottles I was a well woman. Mrs. Bush is now in perfect health because she took Wine of Cardui for menstrual disorders, bearing down pains and blinding headaches when all other remedies failed to bring her relief. Any sufferer may secure health by taking Wine of Cardui in her home. The first bottle convinces the patient she is on the road to health.
