AS TO THE CHURCH.

The church, as a society, is not to be blamed for the individual acts of its members. Ministers of the gospel sometimes go astray, but that is not the fault of the church. Even John Calvin tolerated the burning of a so-called heretic, but that is in no sense an arraignment of Presbyterianism or Presbyterians. Members of the congregation fall out and fight, but they are not taught to do so by the spirit of Jesus Christ.

It is mortal to err, and even the uplifting influence of the church cannot make strong every human weakness. Though they may sometimes harm the fair repute of the church, the frailties of human kind cannot change or damage the eternal principles or lessen the magnificent influence for good, the church exerts on human society. The wickedest man, does not, cannot desire to blot christianity from the world. A hundred thousand human heads, severed from bleeding bodies and piled up before the gates of a city,—this was an achievement of mankind before the church spread a bettering influence over earth and men. The church is the civilizer, the restrainer of passion, the moulder of higher and better thought, and no shortcomings of a frail membership, here and there, can be laid at the door of christian teachings. These remarks apply, in particular, to an article by Mr. Ingle, in another column, and probably are not in conflict with his ideas.

BULLET AND MANS HEAD.

One Nearly Struck the Other—Boys and Target Rifles.

Corvallis boys are over-reckless with target guns. A bullet from a 22 rifle struck a board just above the head of an Easterner at Sam Moore's place in the Western part of town Thursday evening. He had been looking at a piece of property shown by a real estate man. The bullet buried itself deeply in the board, showing enough force to have killed the stranger had it struck him in the head. It was not a good introduction for a man who was looking for a new home. The next shot from the same gun may kill somebody. Residents of the neighborhood say the use of these guns in the vicinity has made many cases bordering on a bad accident. The ping of a bullet as it strikes somebody's barn or house is not an infrequent noise in the neighborhood. A better news item than this will be the outcome of the practice, if it is not stopped.

LANDINGHAM—FAWCETT.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. George N. Fawcett, 761 First street, Portland, was the scene of a pretty but quiet wedding Sunday afternoon, September 25th, when their eldest daughter, Sarah Florence, was united in marriage to Mr. Harris Virgil Ladingham, a prominent young business man of Bellfountain, Rev. J. R. T. Lathrop, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church officiating.

The house was tastefully decorated with autumn leaves, roses and astors. The bride was neatly and becomingly gowned in a traveling suit.

After visiting relatives in Salem and Corvallis, Mr. and Mrs. Ladingham will return to Bellfountain where they will be at home to their friends after October 10th.

Notice to Taxpayers

Notice is hereby given to all concerned that taxes will become delinquent on the first Monday in October and that all property on which such taxes are not paid at that date will be liable to be advertised and sold. Also a penalty of 10 per cent and 12 per cent interest for six months will be charged against all taxes not paid on or before that date. The addition of penalty and interest is required by law, and I shall have no other alternative than to collect it in case of delinquencies.

TO HAVE SIX COMPANIES.

Of Cadets in the OAC Battalion—
Never but Four Before—Over
Five Hundred.

A few years ago, there were but two companies of cadets at the college, and there were scarcely enough students to keep the ranks properly filled. This year there will be six companies in the battalion. There has never been but four before. The largest number of cadets in the battalion in the past was about 290. That was at the end of November last year, when the maximum was reached. Now there are already 360 and a prospect of enough to swell the total long before the end of November to over 400. The instance shows something of the increase in the number of students at the college.

Another instance is the chapel exercise, shortly before nine o'clock each morning. Once, a few years ago, there were only enough students to about half fill the seats in the chapel. That was seven years ago, when the total enrollment for the year was 217. At chapel yesterday the benches on the floor were crowded and jammed with students. There were chairs in every possible niche and nook, and each accommodated a student. There were students standing in the rear, and an overflow of students standing in the corridors. On the platform besides the faculty, the senior class was seated. Behind them and clear around the room there was a row of chairs, and a student on each. The faculty chairs were so crowded forward, that the limbs of some of the occupants almost hung over the edge of the platform. And with all this crowding there were scores of students not able to enter the chapel at all.

The number of students now is 507. It passed the 500 mark last Tuesday afternoon. It is more than a hundred more young people than were in attendance at the same time last year. It will be 650 or more before the swallows come again. The count does not include pupils in vocal music, instrumental music and other side-issues, but is confined exclusively to bona fide students in the regular college courses. The number is more than double that in the college courses of any other educational institution in Oregon. More than sixty students applied for quarters at Cauthorn Hall and had to be turned away for lack of room.

BEGINS TUESDAY.

New Morning and Evening Train
Service on the C & E to Albany.

A new morning and evening train between Corvallis and Albany giving facilities for a Corvallisite to make the round trip to Portland and return in a single day, is to go into effect on the Corvallis and Eastern next Tuesday. The new train will leave Corvallis at 6 o'clock a. m., connecting at Albany with the 7 o'clock local which arrives in Portland at 10 a. m. The arrival at Corvallis in the evening will be at about 7:45, making close connections at Albany with the evening Southern Pacific train which leaves Portland at 4 o'clock. The arrangement will give Corvallisites opportunity to start at Corvallis at 6 in the morning and reach Portland at 10, to stay there six hours for business purposes and then make Corvallis again before eight o'clock in the evening. Or, the round trip can be made to Salem, with a return either at 1:30 in the afternoon or 7:45 in the evening. It changes the old worn-out arrangement by which, in order to do an hour's business in Portland, a Corvallisite had to waste the better part of three days, and gives an up-to-date facility which places Corvallis in a long deserved touch with the outside world.

It is the Cascade train that is to be utilized for the new service. A growth of transfer business from the Westside over the C & E to the Eastside, has much to do with the new arrangement. This business is so increased that 60 to 80 cars a week are regularly transferred. All the Westside traffic in carloads, destined for Southern and Eastern points, instead of crossing the steel bridge at Portland, comes this way, as does a large portion of through Portland business, destined for the same points. The occasion for use of this route is that the transfer over the C & E at Corvallis is less expensive than is the toll for loaded cars across the Portland steel bridge. The switching of the cars in this traffic and its transfer has largely fallen upon the regular Yaquina passenger. On many occasions however, special C & E trains have been called into requisition to help handle the business, until at last it has been determined by the C & E management, in order to meet these freight requirements, and also to give the Corvallis traveling public a better service, to put on the new train. It is expected that it will be permanent.

A service of the kind was once in vogue on the C & E, but the passenger business failed to pay expenses, and it was taken off. After that, Corvallis people petitioned the S. P. to put on a morning and evening train over the Westside. This train service came near materializing at one time, but a change in the high officials of the company when the plan was on the point of being adopted, caused a change in the programme.

Fair Postponed.

The committee in charge of the fair to have been held at Willamette grange hall on October 8th, have postponed the event until October 22.

REGISTERED TRADE MARK
RADIUM Silk
NAME ON FOLLOWING

Is the most versatile fabric of modern loomings

A BETTER silk for greater uses—at a lesser price.

It's soft and lustrous enough for an evening waist or strong enough for a petticoat material—all in one. The fabric itself best substantiates these claims. Radium Silk is about half the price you'd expect to pay for so wearful a silk.

DAY AND NIGHT.

And a Big Force of Men—Sawmill and its Saw Logs.

A midnight blast of the well known whistle of the Corvallis saw mill has been a source of wonder to many who have heard it, of late. The mill is running day and night now, and the midnight whistle is the call of the mill hands from labor to refreshment. Save an hour in the morning, another at noon and another hour in the evening, the machinery of the establishment is now in operation throughout the 24 hours. The increased activity is to saw the hardwood logs in the boom, so that logs may be reached for making fir lumber, for which there is now a stiff local demand. It is also a precaution against the damage floods of the coming winter may do in carrying away some of the many logs Mr. Strong has now in the stream. The names of 52 men are now on the mill's pay roll.
