

THE CHADWICK WOMAN.

When a real live sensation is wanted, there must be a woman in it. The shooting of James Fisk Jr. by Edward Stokes was not sensational so much because it was Fisk that was shot, or that he was shot by Stokes, but because Josie Mansfield was behind the scenes. The feud between Henry Ward Beecher and Theodore Tilton was not sensational merely because it was a row between two remarkable men, but because there was a Mrs. Tilton. Much of the sensational in the land fraud cases at Portland is due to the incident that Marie Ware is a defendant and that she is described as dashing and pretty. If there is one thing in which women stand pre-eminent, it is in the ability, when they see fit, to paralyze the natives, and in this respect, Mrs. Chadwick is the main guy. Mr. Chadwick never would have been heard of, but for the fact that he is the husband of her. The president and cashier of the Citizen's National bank of Cleveland, Ohio, never heard of outside their own town a week ago, are familiar persons now to every man, woman and child in the United States, and all because of her.

The whole world is watching with keen interest the dramatic denouements in the career of this woman, who obtained loans of millions and spent the money as lavishly as she borrowed, who broke banks and bankers with a celerity and eclat unexampled, who had her origin in a humble home in Canada, but by her wits and witchery has lived for years in all the lavish luxury of an Oriental princess, and whose final pyrotechnics cap the climax of things sensational for all time. Living for a time on the alms of an indigent sister, deriving sustenance at other times as a clairvoyant, serving three years in a penitentiary for fraud, born with a penchant for forgery and false pretence developing her sphere until she made banks and bankers believe Andrew Carnegie, the richest of the rich, to have borrowed great sums of her—her last and dizziest dash in the sensational seems incredible, yet it is all true, as the defunct banks and disgraced bankers know too well.

Men have their powers, and bents, and fortes but when the task to be done is to be full of fireworks sky rockets and slambang, the big actor in it must be a woman.

AN ENDED CHAPTER.

All the Creffield Victims Restored, and all at Home—Hypnotism did it.

Mrs. Frank Hurt and Miss Attie Bray arrived Thursday from Salem and are now at the Hurt home in this city. All the members of the family are again at the fireside, fully restored in mind, and fast regaining bodily strength. Almost the unanimous testimony of each is that in the present reunion there is apparent wakening from a long nightmare, a fact that confirms the view that many have long held, that it was hypnotic influence that was responsible for manifestations of religious zeal during recent months. Those in best position to know are fully convinced this is the correct theory, and those who passed under its influence and suffered from it, were helpless under the will of a mind that in some way held control of their acts. Such things be in the world, and it is not of the remarkable that the influence suggested is responsible for all that has transpired.

Of those recently at Salem, Miss Hartley is the only one left at the hospital, and she is expected home before a very long time. All of the others are fully restored, and the end of the unfortunate chapter is here.
