SOLDIERS TO GUARD FAIR.

Major McDonnell Selected to Command Forces of Picked Men at Lewis and Clark Exposition.

Plans for the organization of the Lewis and Clark Exposition Guards are now completed, and men to form the guard are being enlisted. Major C. E. McDonnell of Portland has been chosen chief of the guards, and he will be assisted by three other officers.

The guard will consist of seventy-five men selected by the company commanders from the military companies of Oregon. A height of five feet, eight inches is required. The command will wear military uniforms and carry guns loaned by the state military authorities. The strictest military discipline will be maintained.

The band of seventy-five men will be divided into three shifts, each commanded by an officer, and each shift will serve eight hours, the schedule being from 8 A. M. to 4 P. M.; from 4 P. M. to midnight, and from midnight to 8 A. M. The soldiers will be paid $1.50 per day, with free board and lodging. They will live in tents outside the grounds, in a fashion somewhat similar to that adopted at summer encampments. The guards will begin their duties about the middle of March, and their terms of service will continue until the middle of November, a month after the close of the Exposition.

Tell It Straight.

Ray Acheson. manager of the Albany College basket ball team, went to Corvallis yesterday afternoon for the purpose of securing a game with the Corvallis girls. The Albany girls since defeating the Chemawa girls, claim the championship of the state and this is disputed by the Corvallis girls. The latter, however, refuse to come to Albany to play, but are willing to play in their own hall.—Albany Herald.

The fact about this matter is that the OAC girls offer to play at Albany if Albany will play a return game at Corvallis, which latter game, Ray Acheson, the Albany manager who doubtless gave the above information to the Herald refuses to play. A correction of the Herald's statement ought to appear in its own columns so that the facts may not be subverted. The Albany manager can quickly get a game by doing the fair thing and playing a game at Albany and another at Corvallis. If he don't want to do that, he is afraid, and won't be fair.

AT THE STATE HOUSE.

Things Done by Solons, Past and Present—Normal Schools and Mitchell Resolutions.

Salem, February 10. Senator Walter Pierce of Pendleton, is a newly appointed regent of the Agricultural College. He was named by Governor Chamberlain for the vacancy made by the death of J. M. Church. Senator Pierce is one of the best known men in Eastern Oregon, and incidentally is one of the brightest members of the Oregon senate. He conducts a farm of several thousand acres in Umatilla county, and has a law practice in Pendleton. He was once a country school teacher, and for a round dozen years was engaged in public school work, either as teacher or principal. He served several terms as county school superintendent, a term or two as county clerk and is now a hold over senator. He has accumulated a handsome competence, and at perhaps 45 is a success in life. He is affable and amiable, and is one of the most popular legislators now at the capital, as well as one of the most influential. Geographical reasons made an Eastern Oregon appointment necessary, and preeminent qualifications made the selection of Senator Pierce a happy one. The appointment was made while he was recommending other residents of his sectton for the place. Governor Chamberlain made the nomination in response to the request of Hon. B. G. Leedy, master of the state grange, who, with others, pressed the name of Senator Pierce for the place.

In its late resolutions of indorsement, the legislature gave Senator Mitchell all it had to give. In view of the facts, it gave the Senator a great, great deal. President Roosevelt is known to be behind the prosecutions that have resulted in the double indictment of Senator Mitchell. This same President Roosevelt once approved the dismissal from high position of an Oregon man, and the republicans of Oregon at once sent that man to congress. Binger Hermann's election under the circumstances was a hard slap at the administration. The administration, now that Mr. Hermann has been indicted by an Oregon grand jury, thinks Mr. Hitchcock and Mr. Roosevelt were right, and that the republicans of Oregon were wrong as to the late land commissioner. Now, however, when President Roosevelt's prosecutor, especially appointed to push the land fraud cases, and his grand jury return indictments against Senator Mitchell and the state legislature in unmistakable language heartily indorses Senator Mitchell, the question becomes, what does President Roosevelt think about it? State it as you please, dress up the language as you please, this one thing is true; in order to indorse the Senator, the president had to be slapped; and it is the secoud slap Mr. Roosevelt has received from Oregon republicans. He got one on the right cheek, and then he turned the left —— and they didn't do a thing but smite.

Once before Oregon republicans resoluted for Senator Mitchell. That was right after he was elected United States Senator for the first time. W. Lair Hill, in the Oregonian had just exposed the existence of the Pennsylvania family. Joseph Wilson, congressman from Oregon had died and a special election was to be held to fill the vacancy. The republican convention met at Albany, in the spring of 1872 to name a candidate. Friends of Senator Mitchell feared that an uncontradicted story of the Pennsylvania incident would prevent the Senator from returning to his seat at Washington. They demanded that certain commendatory resolutions be passed by the Albany convention. Others resisted, and there was a fight on the floor of the convention. Captain Apperson, Benton Killin, Harvey Scott and others were among the delegates. The Mitchellites won, and the platform carried with it a plank declaring that Oregon republicans in convention assembled did not believe the story about Senator Mitchell, and that they hereby renewed their confidence in his integrity, sobriety and virtue, or words to that effect. With the adoption of the platform a number of stalwarts bolted. When it came time to nominate, Dr. E. R. Geary, whom it was expected all along to be the nominee, declared on the floor of the convention that he would not accept the nomination on such a platform. Others were sought to accept the honor, but it was not until after much delay that Hiram Smith, a Harrisburg merchant finally announced that he would accept the nomination and make the race on that platform. He was named, but he was overwhelmingly beaten in the election by the late J. W. Nesmith. Old-time republicans at the Capitol tell over again the story of the old resolutions as they laugh about the new, which new pronunciamento went through under stress of being a rider to a motion for final adjournment.

The bill granting authority to Corvallis to issue bonds for construction of a water works and appointing a water commission to build and conduct the plant has passed both houses, and has probably been signed by the Governor. It passed the Senate a couple of weeks ago, and passed the House without change Wednesday at an evening session. The amendments to the city charter, which passed the Senate some time ago, also passed the House Wednesday evening.

Bills to eliminate Normal schools have a rocky road to travel. Dangers environ and assail such bills at every turn. So far an untimely fate has awaited every measure aimed at destruction of a Normal. Senator Miller's bill in the Senate proposed to abandon all but one of them, and it died a violent death. It was debated with great vigor and much ability at a special order Wednesday forenoon. The fight lasted two hours, with Senators Miller, Hodson and others for the bill, and Senators Pierce, Kuykendall, Coshow, Whealdon, and others against. Seventeen nays and twelvea yaes was the final vote, taken mid a breathless silence, for there was extreme interest in the outcome of the struggle.

The scene called to mind another legislative occurrence of a score of years ago, more or less. That other incident happened at a time when there was no Oregon State Normal school. A pending measure the House proposed the establishment of one. Friends of the measure were converting Christian College at Monmouth into a State Normal school. A plea was that little or no state support would be required. The figure then asked was perhaps $8,000 in all. Eight thousand dollars for the entire normal school work of Oregon for two years. That was not very many years ago. Several people in Oregon that sat Wednesday in the Senate lobby and listened to the debate on Miller's bill, sat also in the House lobby on that other occasion and heard the public promises that little or no state aid would be required for the normal work if the state would only accept the tendered college, and make of it the Oregon State Normal. The normal work for the next two years, if the legislature allows the amounts asked by the four Normal schools will be $217,000 or $211,000 more than in those halcyon days when the state first launched out in the Normal school business. What if the good work should go on at the same rate of increase, and if so what would be the Normal school item in the appropriation budget a dozen years hence?

They say Miller's bill would have passed the Senate if it had provided for abandonment of all but two of the Normals. That may be true. Talk in the lobby afterward was that a Normal at Ashland and another at Weston would be all right. Possibly such a measure might have passed the Senate. It would doubtless, have failed however in the House, where a Yamhill member's bill, providing for that very thing, never got past the committee. A great many people would have liked to see Miller's bill pass, and they say so. There is talk that such a bill may be taken up for passage by the initiative and referendum. That is one way in which the log rolling that perpetuates the Normals, would be impossible, and the abandonment of some of the Normal institutions be sure to be provided for.

The bill to abolish the Drain Normal was knocked out in the House today. The vote was 34 to 25. As originally introduced the bill provided for abandonment of two of the Normals. The committee amended it so as to provide for abandonment of the Drain school, reducing the whole number to three. Wise ones have guessed from the very first that even as amended the bill had no chance to survive, and its violent death today shows how hard it is to kill off even one little Normal.
