—Bishop Castle, of the U. B. church of Philomath, accompanied by his wife and son, departed for the East Monday. While absent they will visit Indiana, Kansas and Iowa, and Bishop Castle will be present at the dedication of a number of churches of his denomination at different points.

—It is expected that in a little time there will be telephone connections between Waldport and Corvallis. The Alseans now have a line to the head of tide on the Alsea Bay, only 10 miles from Waldport. The statement is that the people of the latter place will shortly complete the extension to their own town.

—Though inhabited for nigh on to 40 years, there has never been a road from the head of tide on Alsea Bay to Waldport. Much travel passes that way, even in spite of the tedious and difficult method of flat boating up and down the 10 mile stretch between the two points. After all these years, the construction of a wagon road to join the two places is in progress, and will soon be completed.

—George Herbert Root is not to spend the spring term at O. A. C. Loss of time will make no difference in his final graduation, and on that account he is to spend the spring months at his home near Wasco, Eastern Oregon, for which he left Sunday. Burns who gathered up the evidence that has brought so many fraudulent transactions to light, are both in the eadle again. There is a surmise that this week may see some important indictments returned. Senator Mitchell is to be the first of the defendants to be tried. His case will come on early and will be followed by the trial of Hermann and Williamson. Neither Williamson nor Mitchell have occupied their seats in congress since they were indicted.

—Friday night occurs the big athletic entertainment in the Armory. The chief feature is an indoor game of base ball, in which college and down town nines will contest for supremacy. The college team has Bert Pilkington for catcher, Claude Swann for pitcher, Grover Cate for first base, Fred Stimson 2d base and Bilyeu and Garrow for short stops. There has been hard practice for the event for several weeks. Other features of the evening will be wrestling and boxing bouts by the best men in that line in the college.

In Memoriam.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead, who never to himself hath said, "My trade of late is getting bad; I'll try another ten-inch ad." If such there be, go mark him well, for such no bank account shall swell; no angel watch the golden stair, to welcome home a millionaire. The man who never asks for trade, by ad or local lines displayed, cares more for rest than worldly gain, and patronage gives him but pain. Tread lightly, friends let no rude sound disturb his solitude profound. Here let him live in calm repose, unsought except by men he owes. And when he dies go plant him deep, that naught may break his dreamless sleep; where no rude clamor may dispel, the quiet that he loves so well. And that the world may know its loss, place on his grave a wreath of moss, and on a stone above: "Here lies a chump who wouldn't advertise."—Exchange.

TRAGIC IN ITS BREVITY.

The Story of the Duel Between Hamilton and Burr.

The story of the Hamilton-Burr duel is tragic in its brevity. The little party of five—the principals, their seconds and the surgeon—was on the ground not long after sunrise. The preliminaries were soon arranged. As Pendleton, Hamilton's second, gave him his pistol, he asked, "Will you have the hairspring set?" "Not this time," was the significant reply, and then the men faced each other.

According to the best authorities upon a disputed subject, Burr fired at the word. At the report, Hamilton started forward with a convulsive movement, reeled, involuntarily discharging his pistol into the foliage above him, and fell headlong. Burr, with an expression of pain upon his face, sprang toward him, but Van Ness, his second, seized him by the arm and hurried him down the bank and into their boat.

Hamilton, being lifted up, revived for a moment and gasped, "This is a mortal wound, doctor!" Relapsing again into unconsciousness he was again revived by the fresh air of the river. "Pendleton knows," he said, trying to turn toward his friends, "that I did not intend to fire at him." At 2 the afternoon following he had breathed his last.

Monster Bowl of Punch.

In 1604 Admiral Edward Russell, commander of the English Mediterranean fleet, entertained 6,000 people in a large garden in Alicante, where he served the largest bowl of punch ever brewed. It contained twenty gallons of lime juice, four hogsheds of brandy, one pipe of Malaga wine, twenty-five hundred lemons, thirteen hundred-weight of fine white sugar, three packages of toasted biscuits, fifty-one pounds of grated nutmegs and eight hogsheds of water.

The whole was prevented from dilution in case of rain by a large canopy, which spread over a marble fountain bowl which held the punch. The punch was served by a boy, who rowed about the basin of the fountain in a boat built for the purpose and refilled the empty cups.

Two Scotch Stories.

A Scotch schoolmaster in Banffshire years ago had strong views on the subject of dress. In the day when crinoline was the rage a girl came to school with a very extensive one, which much exceeded the space between the desk and the form on which she had to sit. The teacher, seeing this, said to her, "Gang awa' home and tak' o'f thae girds (hoops) and come back to the school as God made ye."

Another rough and ready domineer was examining his boys in a catechism and asked if God had a beginning. "No," said the boy. "Will he have an end?" "Yes," he replied. This was followed instantly by a buffet on the side of the head. "Will he have an end now?" "No," said the boy, and the master was satisfied.
