AMICITIANS WON.

But Jeffersonians got Decision From One Judge—Third Debate for Cup.

The Amicitians are winners of the third debate in the series for the Gatch cup, held in College chapel Friday night. The question was, "Resolved that the Tendency of trades unions is not detrimental to the government of the United States." The Jeffersonian literary society had the affirmative and the Amicitians the negative. The Jeffersonians urged that the trades unions had lifted the wage scale and bettered the condition, not only of the actual membership in the unions, but of the non-union men as well.

The Amicitians from the negative standpoint urged that the tendency of the unions is to make their interests paramount to the interests of all other classes of people and that such an attitude is hostile to the best interest of the community. The negative also insisted that bloodshed always attends strikes, that strikes are often without just cause, and that this is a detrimental feature. The affirmative denied this, and went extensively into the causes and conditions of various strikes to prove the contrary. The question was closely contested, one judge rendering a decision for the affirmative and two for the negative. The judges were B. W. Johnson, Prof. Knisely and Mrs. Skelton.

The fourth debate in the series occurs Friday night, and is between the Feronians and the Utopians. The Feronians are the present holders of the cup. The question is, "Resolved that inter-collegiate athletics do more good than harm." The Feronians have the affirmative.

To Whom it May Concern.

In putting up the telephone lines which are becoming so numerous along our public highways it is the custom to use trees instead of placing poles wherever this is convenient and we find that where this has been done that the branches, whether the tree is in the road or across the fence in someone's field, are throne and left in the road. It would be a small matter for each one who has been helping in this work to clear his share of it away and it is hereby requested that the brush piled up along the public highway be removed by the persons who placed it there, as it is a nuisance during road working time and would create unnecessary work and therefore unnecessary expense.

AFTER SEVENTEEN YEARS.

Logan Hays Goes to Portland to Accept Position in Banking House.

On the 15th inst, Logan Hays of this city is to go to Portland, to become assistant cashier of the Oregon Savings Bank, one of the big banking institutions of Portland. His position as manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company in this city goes to Er[illegible] Miller. The question of who become agent of Wells Fargo Company has not yet been determined. Mr. Hays resignation is to take effect on the fifteenth inst is in the hands of the company, and the selection of a successor will be settled shortly. The news of the coming changes created much surprise about town when announced Monday morning. Last Saturday Mr. Hays completed his seventeenth consecutive year in charge of the local Western Union and Wells Fargo office. Seventeen years is more than half the life of a generation of the human family and to have served so long in a single position is in itself a living testimonial of the good service that has been rendered. Many friends in Corvallis regret Mr. Hays' departure, but are glad of the opportunities that fall to him in the larger field. For the present his mother will remain in Corvallis, but later she expeets to join Mr. Hays in Portland.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

One Recalls the Other—A Snow Storm and a Death—Old Times.

A handsome new awning at Huston's hardware store recalls the last awning that occupied a position in front of the same building and of the manner of its going. It was in the last days of 1893, about Christmas time. All nature was overspread with a heavy snowfall, Rev. W. T. Ligon, a talented young preacher, was pastor of the M. E. church South, and at the time in question, stood on the sidewalk under an old wooden awning over the door of the Huston building. Without warning, the awning collapsed under the heavy weight of the snow, and Rev. Ligon was buried under the debris. The loud crash attracted attention and help was immediate. The victim was extricated from the ruins and carried across the street to the Hemphill house, where everything possible to save was done, but without avail. Young Mr. Logan died of his injuries shortly afterward, and his remains were shipped East to his home in the South for interment. The awning that after a dozen years takes the place of the old one is a canvas affair, such only as ought to have place on the main thoroughfare of the town.
