EUROPEAN POTATOES.

Come to Corvallis-Are to be Planted on College Farm.

More than 1,000 pounds of mail came in on the Albany stage Thursday morning. When it was piled off on the pavement in front of the postoffice, it looked like a steamboat had unloaded there. There was 15 sacks in all. To the stage company they were the equivalent in avoirdupois, but not in dollars, of six healthy passengers. In the lot there were six sacks of potatoes that the mail clerks had to wrestle with. It looked a little extraordinary to see potatoes by the sackfull in the United States mail, but that is what the bystanders observed and talked about. Each of the sacks seemed to contain as much as two bushels of spuds, involving of course a weight of 120 pounds.

The potatoes are from the department of Agriculture at Washington and are for experimental purposes at the college. They include 49 varieties, all of them European po-tatoes. The purpose of the experimentation with them is to discover United States in connection with ers formerly used on the Astoria & the bureau of Plant Pathology.

TO RUN PULLMAN.

On C. & E. for Summer Travel-Overhauling all the Coaches.

The statement is that new conditions are to prevail on the C. & E. this summer. Additional rolling stock is to go on the line, and all the old coaches are going into the shops for complete overhauling before the summer travel begins. Most of the coaches are now in the round house being thoroughly overhauled and painted and when the entire string is given the new dress the people who formerly knew the trains on the road will hardly recognize the cars. In their new dress the coaches are as neat as a new mentation with them is to discover their discase feesth; power and they will be kept its attractive as a constant and they will be kept its attractive as a constan Seaside railroad, and this will be placed on the C. & E. in the coming season on the excursion trains. The The above claims will be audited thing was large enough to almost completly fill the jar. It had been taken from the heart of a cow that died at Loraine, Lane county. The cow had died under unusual circumstances, and the post mortem revealed the fact that her heart was unusually large. It weighed in fact more than sixty pounds. When the heart was opened the thing which the investigators thought to be an animal, was found inside. At first sight it struck the beholders as resembling in appearance a very large water dog. One of its rates, account convention of Woodtentacles extended far up the aorta, and was 32 inches in length.

The phenomenon was so unusual that the Grange of the vicinity voted to pay the expenses of a man to bring the strange object to the college for examination, and the plan was carried out. The speci-

A STORY OF OLD.

But Many a Time Re-told-A Feast, and a Fall of a King.

Belshazzar has ever been a popular character in history. - Just as the ill-fated Charles of England has been studied, and the present Nicholas of Russia is a subject of keen interest. The story of the dissipation, overthrow and utter loss makes the life of Belshazzar stand out in history as no other, with the possible exception of his great ancestor Nebuchadnezzar.

The scripture story of Belshazzar is found in the fitth chapter of the book of Daniel, and in this one chapter the sacred writer pens one of the most vivid and striking descriptions of dissipation, sacrilege and utter indifference to imminent danger that the world has ever seen. The opening sentence reminds one of Byron's "The Eve of Waterloo" "There was a sound of revelry by night and Belgium's capital had gathered there her beauty and her chivalry." So in Babylon of old, when Cyrus and his Medes were on all sides and had completed the great canal for the draining of the Euphrates, Belshazzar made a feast to a thousand of his lords. But in the midst of their revelry the hand of God penned the words of doom. Daniel, the only man who could interpret the signs of the times, read the message. Cyrus and his hosts were all ready entering the city. Belshazzar was captured and the empire given to the Medes and the Persians. Concerning this history we are not limited to the bible for our facts but find them corroborated elsewhere.

Xenophon tells us that Babylon was taken by night while the city was revelling. Among the most interesting Babylonian tablet inscriptions about Belshazzar are found several notes which he gave in the ordinary transaction of business. In these the date of making the security, and the time of payment are given. On mother tab-let he is mentioned as the firstborn of the king and hence was the prince regent in the absence of his father during war. His name means, "May Bel protect the king" Bel is the Babylonian for Baal and was the supreme tutsland god of Patricip Tandle in tablet of Belshazzar's ather for its son. It reads, "Do thou cause the adoration of thy great divinity to exist in his heart; may he not give way, to sin; may he not be satisfied with life's abundance." The father's prayer was unanswered by Bel. One of the strongest proofs of the accuracy of the Bible narrative is the fact that, though there are many tablets found concerning Belshazzar while he was a prince, not one has been found concerning his acts as king. This shows almost conclusively that he was cut off almost at the beginning of his reign. Perhaps this very feast was the one celebrating his accession to the throne. Because his father lost the battle of Seppar to Cyrus and was probably killed and the son at Babylon amid revelry acceded to the throne. But in his dissipation, negligence and sacri-lege he was cut off, and in history, song and story the world continues to take fresh lessons of warning from his felly.

plan was carried out. The specimen was turned over to the bacteriological department, where an investigation showed it to be a polypus. In its growth it had filled one of the ventricles completely and had extended to other parts of the heart, among other ramfications, sending a 32 inch tentacle far upiato the aorta.

A polypus is a tumorous growth sometimes found in the nose of human beings. Its presence in the heart of a cow is one of the new things to scientists.
