ARMIES OF CATERPILLARS.

How They Stripped a Prune Orchard— And How They get Stripped.

What to do with the caterpillars is a question of the hour in various districts of Benton. It is an uppermost question in fact in Corvallis. The pests infest rosebushes, crawl over the flowers and inhabit the ornamental trees. Housewives in the midst of house cleaning are compelled to stop frequently to vent spleen and a horrible death on stray pillars that have crawled from house vine into the pantry. A prune orchard out at Norton's on the C. & E. is said to have been completely stripped of every green leaf. An Alsea correspondent recently related that the pests were prevalent in that section in marching armies.

In Corvallis, home owners are fighting them with fire and poison. A pole with a blazing rag saturated with coal oil and set afire at one end and a fierce and furious woman at the other end, is one of the chief perils that beset the pillars. Sometimes there is danger by this method to the house, but the story is that an angry woman after a caterpillar is oblivious to the little things like a burned home or an imperilled family. Another method of attack is with a spray of Paris Green. The poison is terribly fatal to the pillars, and as it puts them through about as agonizing a death as does the hell-fire plan, it is quite as satisfactory to the average lady, and less dangerous because after its use the house is likely to be standing intact.

COZAD'S DOG AND PONY SHOW.

Will Soon Exhibit Here—Stendid Collection of Performing Pets,

When Cozad's California dog, pony, monkey and goat circus makes its appearance here Monday it will be found that this class of entertainment has made great strides towards improvements. The show opens with a beautiful fifty miniature horse act. Ponies march and drill; a number of ponies have bells fastened to their heads and at the word of command play various tunes by shaking the chimes. It is the sort of entertainment that makes a child happy and at the same time instructs him in the nature of our dumb companions.

MAY NOT WAIT.

For Albany Evening Local—That Would Mean no More Round Trips to Portland in one day.

Jack Mayo, the well known railroad man and former Corvallisite was in town for an hour Thursday. In addition to his duties as traffic manager of the Astoria railroad, he has recently been made general freight and passenger agent of the Corvallis & Eastern, and Thursday stopped over enroute on a business trip from Yaquina to Portland.

The proposed change of time on the Albany local, referred to elsewhere, may interfere seriously with the Corvallis train facilities. The local is scheduled to leave Portland at six in the evening, arriving in Albany so late that the C. & E. evening train cannot wait for it. The consequence would be that the round trip to Portland in a day could no longer be made, and that at a time when it is most desirable, viz.—during the fair. It would also put the Portland evening papers in this city out of business in a large measure, as they would not reach Corvallis until the morning Albany mail.

The only way to obviate the difficulty would be for the evening train to wait the arrival of the Albany local from Portland at nine o'clock, but that, Mr. Mayo says it is not likely to be done because it would involve an extra railroad crew, which would not pay. All in all, the prospect for the evening train service, at the moment, is not favorable.

SOLD HIS WOOL.

At Twenty Eight Cents—Something About a Small Boy's Transaction.

Eighteen dollars and twenty cents was what a fourteen year old boy, who hails from the north of town sold his wool for Thursday. His name is Wilson, and his $18.20 was the wool product form only five sheep. It is a big story, but it is a fact,—this $18.20 for the wool from only five sheep. The average per head was $3.64. This is nearly four times what some sheep sold for last fall, and yet it is only what the wool went at, and the youngster has the sheep left. The average fleece was 13 pounds, and the price was 28 cents per pound. The five sheep were pets that the boy rescued as orphans a year ago and has since cared for on his father's farm. It is probably one of the best sold wool clips of the year, and one of the best handled flocks of sheep, and it was all done by a boy.

On the same day wool was delivered in town that was contracted months ago that went at only 20 cents per pound. The price rose Wednesday to 28 cents and it stood at that figure Thursday, and had not yet fallen yesterday, though a drop was expected. Only small lots scattered here and there, like that of the thrifty lad from the direction of Soap Creek, remain unsold. The wool price is the highest touched in Oregon in 30 or 40 years.
