The total number of votes cast was 384, or about 30 votes less than in the regular city election in June.

The majority in favor of bonds is somewhat heavier than the friends of mountain water expected, though a vote of two to one was polls opened. A poll of the town made up the day before showed that mountain water had a sure majority with as many doubtful as Just across the fence stands an sure votes against bonds, and a chance for many of the doubtful to be captured for mountain water. This not only happened but great inroads were made in the ranks of those counted on by the opposition as certain. It is said that their poll showed 151 votes against mountain water. It is certain now that if there had been a week or ten more days allowed the voters in which to become familiar with the subject that the opposition would have been reduced to less perhaps than 50 votes. The testimony on all sides is that the anonymous sheet issued by the opposition was an actual detriment to the cause it professed to serve. The fact that the men behind it would not allow their names to be connected with the sheet and that they required their printer to observe such secrecy, was the first influence to discredit ese attacks if you will but they are the thing.
