WANT EXHIBITS.

Of Poultry—Is to be Held at Portland Fair October Fifth to Fifteenth.

California and Washington are making every endeavor possible to throw Oregon in the shade at the coming Lewis and Clark poultry show. This is a friendly rivalry and we want to get in and see that the honor of our grand old state does not become dimmed by the radiant splendor of our sister states. A man at home has many advantages that the visitor does not have and it is up to you to see that Oregon does her part in this show. The premiums are liberal, the specials are large and the entry fee is only one dollar per bird which includes feed and care and you doubtless have as good birds as has ever been hatched. We want you to show, and not be among the class who "have better ones at home." May we not depend upon you? Entries close September 10th. Address, C. D. Minten, Poultry Commissioner for Oregon, Salem, Ore.

THE CITY DEFICIT

Council Holds Another Meeting Tonight—Settlement Considered Certain.

An adjourned meeting of the city council Saturday night considered the Grefoz shortage. Judge H. H. Hewitt of Albany was present to represent the relatives who propose if possible to arrange for a complete settlement of the balance due the city. Judge Hewitt stated that it was the desire of his clients to make the shortage good, provided satisfactory arrangements of a financial character could be made. It is understood that it is the proposition of Mr. Grefoz himself to turn in the home in which his family resides as a part of the restitution, and on a valuation of about $1,000, leaving only about $1,000 in cash to be advanced.

In response to Judge Hewitt's request, an adjournment was taken in order to give him time for further consultation with the Misses Grefoz who are supplying the money to make good the balance of the deficit. An adjourned meeting is to be held this, Wednesday evening.

RAIDED A CLUB.

At Lebanon—It is a Social and Athletic Club—Officers in Charge

Now.

Lebanon has a Social and Athletic Club. The Corvallis Social and Athletic Club is said to have been fashioned after it. The Lebanon club was raided by the sheriff of Linn county Saturday night. The story of the affair is thus told by the Albany Herald:

"Sheriff R. L. White and Deputy Sheriff Q. E. Propst went to Lebanon last night and raided the Lebanon Social and Athletic club recently organized there, capturing Andrew Jennings, the man in charge of the bar, and over a dozen men, members of the club, who were present, some of them drinking at the bar when the raid was made. The work was done under the local option law, the charge being that the men arrested were keepers of a place wherein devices are resorted to to prevent detection of violation of the local option law.

The complaint was made against the club by Dr. W. H. Booth, and was signed before Deputy District Attorney Gale S. Hill several days ago. He consulted with the sheriff and under his instructions the sheriff and his deputy left this city at 7:30 last evening, quietly drove to Lebanon, and after Deputy Propst had been posted at the front door, of the place occupied by the club, and which was formerly used as a saloon, Sheriff White went to the rear door and knocked for admission. Andrew Jennings in charge of the place, came to the door and opened it, when the sheriff forced his way into the place and formally placed all the men present under arrest.

He found three men in front of the bar drinking, glasses were on the bar, on side tables stood several glasses of beer, and cards and chips were scattered about on the tables. On the back bar were bottles of whiskey and other liquors, and in an ice chest a keg of beer was found, from which some of the contents had been drawn. A number of men occupied the room, some sitting at tables with liquor in front of them.

Sheriff White took the names of all the men present, declared them his prisoners and released them on $100 bail each to appear before Justice W. S. Risley in this city at 11 o'clock Monday morning, three of their number, men of influence and financial responsibility, standing good for the appearance of the men at the time specified.

The club was recently organized and the members are all supplied with keys. The club rooms are in the building recently occupied by the Jennings Brothers as a saloon, opposite the St. Charles Hotel. It is fitted up for a saloon, and when the officers except those of the ordinary bar was there. The Jennings Brothers were put out of business by the passage of local option in Lebanon, and since that time have been out of business until the club started. Andrew Jennings, one of the men arrested last night, was recently arrested and fined for selling liquor without a license, and if he is again convicted he will have a jail sentence staring him in the face for under the local option law a second conviction is not finable.

The case will come up before Justice Risley tomorrow and will doubtless attract considerable attention for the matter will be in the nature of a test case as to the rights of a club, organized as was the one at Lebanon, to supply its members with intoxicants.

Before leaving Lebanon last night Sheriff White appointed Grant Lindley of that city to take charge of the club, ordering him to leave everything just as it was found and to allow no one to enter the place. He also instructed the deputy to arrest every one attempting to enter the place and lock him up, and the officer will comply with the orders given him.

Many of the people of Lebanon have long asked for the suppression of the club, and they will back the officers in the attempt to enforce the law.

THEY BAKED CLAMS.

And Made Speeches—A Thousand People Participated—Sunday

at Newport.

One thousand people were carried by the Corvallis & Eastern into Newport in three days recently, to wit: Last Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Two hundred and eighty seven went in Sunday morning. Three hundred came out on the excursion train Sunday night and as many more returned to business and the bumps of the world Monday morning.

Though diminished in numbers now, the crowd at the seaside is still very large. But few of the cottages have been closed for the season. It will be the first week in September before there will be a general homeward-bound movement among the cottagers. At the hotels there is not an abundance of room. People were turned away at the Abbey House in considerable numbers Saturday evening, because of no place for them to sleep. Every room that the well known house could muster, was occupied. A number of people after the arrival of the evening boat, walked from Newport up to Olsenville and took quarters at the Grand Pacific, which in the furnishings and spacious character of its rooms surpasses anything on the Bay.

Newport has been the storm center of Oregon politics for several weeks past. Numbers of the men whose names are frequently coupled with prominent state and district offices have been at the beach. There is no doubt, too, that some of them have talked politics. It has been mainly in a joking way, but under lots of it there was a serious aspect. For instance at the clam bake Sunday Mr. Huston of Hillsboro, who is just now a republican, but who was recently a democrat, made a speech of welcome. It was entirely innocent in its generality but the sentences sounded so much like those of Binger Hermann on similar occasions at Newport, that numbers present involuntarily shoved their hands deep in their pockets in order to avoid the expected hand-shake. It was a speech that said that Newport is the greatest seaside resort in the world, that the Newporters are the noblest, most industrious and most honest people on the face of the earth, and that they all belonged to that great middle class, known as the common people, of which it was the speaker's proudest boast that he himself is a member. He told them that the agates found on the Newport beach were such agates as had been found nowhere else in the world and such agates as it was puzzling the scientists to explain. There was a mellifluous rhythm in the speaker's voice as he shot soft soap dope into the Newporters. A twang of fulsome, soothing, dreamy, purring loveliness as though Mr. Huston could scarcely restrain a heartfelt emotion to leap from the dry goods box on which he was mounted and press every Newporter to his bosom. It was a touching scene when the speaker pointed to Yaquina Bay lying just over his left shoulder and declared with a swift impassioned gesture that it was one of the greatest harbors on the face of God's green earth, and by his tone of voice indicated that it was a crime for it to lie there unappreciated and unimproved.

Some of the Newporters grinned and swallowed the clever Mr. Huston's dose of dope, paying little heed to the recency of the speaker's political conversion and the cherished dream in his inwards for the time when he can write his name as a congressman from Oregon. Mr. Huston is a pleasant speaker, and a pleasant gentleman, which of course he had to be when a few years ago, as a democrat, he skinned the late Thomas Tongue for the state senatorship from Washington county.

Mr. Huston was not the only congressional timber that made a speech. Charley Moores, brilliant as a writer and a speaker, and widely popular, wherever known, was called out from among the 1,000 people grouped about on the sandy beach, and made to mount the dry goods box that had served the other speakers. Mr. Moores was hardly old enough to wear knee pants when he struck Oregon after a trip across the plains from Illinois in '49 or '50. He grew to manhood at Salem, graduated from Willamette University with honors, studied law at a Michigan law school and about 1878 was admitted to practice in the Oregon courts. Though an able practitioner he disliked the practice, and after a few years withdrew from it to engage in other pursuits. The year of the Dolph fight, he was elected to the legislature and became speaker of the house. He was a Dolph supporter in the beginning, and so remained for a part of the session. When, however, it became apparent that Mr. Dolph could not be elected, Speaker Moores joined the minority, offering however, at any time to rejoin the Dolph forces whenever his vote would result in an election. The fight resulted in the election of Senator McBride in the last minute of the session amid scenes as spectacular as ever transpired in the state capitol.

In his speech at Sunday's clam-bake Mr. Moores steered clear of fulsome flattery that has so often been dosed out to Newporters by men who afterwards went off and laughed about it, and proceeded vigorously to give the residents of that section a bit of good, level-headed advice. He told them that if they wanted to make their resort all it ought to be, they should forget petty differences, and stand together for the common weal. He told them that a community that divides into factions, with one clan kicking against the plans and purposes of the other, could never succeed.

The clam-bake was a complete success. A thousand people gathered about the improvised tables on the sandy beach and partook of the delicacies. An expert in the clam-baking business from Portland was master of the ceremonies. It is stated that he was paid $75 for his hand in the affair. A huge bed of heated rocks was the means for the baking. Over these a layer of clams in the shell were placed. Then came in alternation, layers of crabs, corn, sweet potatoes, salmon, Irish potatoes, and other delicacies. Overspreading these was a thick canvas, and over all a heavy layer of seaweed. The effect was that in due time all the edibles were evenly and scientifically baked. They were spread for the multitude at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, too soon after the regular hotel dinner for the visitors to have serious appetites.

In the preparation of the feast there were used, 40 bushels of clams, 320 crabs, 2000 ears of green corn, 25 salmon weighing from seven to ten pounds each, 2,000 pounds of sweet potatoes, five bushels of spuds, with uncounted loaves of bread and many boxes of soda crackers.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent. of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by Graham & Wortham.

Do you shave yourself? Well just keep in mind that our Witch Hazel Extract is a distilled extract and does not contain one drop of wood alcohol. Price, bottle, 25. Graham & Wells.
