AFTER MANY YEARS.

Their Wedding Celebrated—Many Guests There.

"Hoping that you will see the silver years turn to gold," was one of the numerous messages received at Alpha Hall last Tuesday evening just twentyfive years ago, a young couple stood at hymen's altar in the presence of Bishop N. Castle, at Philomath chapel, near the bride's home; now, the same couple stood at the main entrance of the newly furnished hall to receive their hundred guests who had come to celebrate the silver wedding of Prof. and Mrs. J. B. Horner.

The evening was spent in delightful entertainment furnished by Turney's orchestra, while the guests met and mingled together for the first time this season. A center table in the main parlor was literally laden with presents in silver, as the following will attest:

Mr. and Mrs. Binger Hermann, French gray berry spoon. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Yates, Miss Mina and J. F. Yates, silver bread tray. Mrs. F. Berchtold, Mrs. Rose Selling, Mrs. Minnie Lee, Mrs. W. A. Wells, Mrs. John Simpson, Mrs. M. S. Woodcock, Miss Snell, Misses Bertha Davis, Sarah Jacobs and Pauline Kline, set of teaspoons in French gray.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Skipton, silver and gold tined lettuce fork. Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Woodcock, silver and gold bowl sugar shell.

Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Blackledge, silver and gold blade butter knife. Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Smith, silver and gold bowl olive spoon.

Dr. and Mrs. M. M. Davis, silver set of oyster forks. Mr. and Mrs. Hammel, silver and gold blade jelly knife.

Starr's Icecream Parlors, silver gravy ladle. Mr. and Mrs. A. Hodes, silver and gold bowl berry spoon.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Garrow, silver and gold bowl tomato server. Mr. and Mrs. Metzgar, silver salt and peppers.

Miss Olive Smith, silver gold bowl bonbon spoon. Mr. and Mrs. E. W. S. Pratt, combination olive gold bowl spoon and silver pickle fork.

Mr. and Mrs. John Steiwer, silver olive spoon gold bowl. Mr. and Mrs. E. Skipton, Vera and Pearl Horner, silver baking dish.

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Johnson, silver sugar tongs. Prof. and Mrs. McKellips, silver bonbon with silver bowl.

Miss Ella Johnson, set silver orange spoons. Mr. and Mrs. Miles Starr, Mr. and Mrs. C. Barnell, berry spoon in silver grav finish.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Skipton, silver berry spoon. Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead, silver pie knife.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Wills, set silver soup spoons. Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Irvine, silver bonbon dish.

Mr. and Mrs. James Taylor, silver olive spoon. Miss Helen Crawford and Prof. Bilyeu, silver cheese fork with gold tines.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Simpson, silver pickle fork. Rev. and Mrs. P. A. Moses and V. P. Moses, silver salad fork with gold tines.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cathey, silver sugar bowl. Mr. and Mrs. John Simpson, silver cream pitcher.

Mrs. B. W. Wilson and Mrs. H. Pernot, silver paper knife with French gray handle. Mr. and Mrs. Proebstel, silver spoon with French gray handle.

Mrs. Ella Rickard and Mrs. H. F. Fischer, silver salad fork with gold tines. Mr. and Mrs. Tartar, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Keady, Mr. and Mrs. Green, Prof. Johnson, Miss Mary Sutherland, Miss Ammee Leverett, silver sugar spoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Farra, Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Bush, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. Crawford, Dr. and Mrs. Harper, Mr. and Mrs. Lafferty, Mr. and Mrs. Nolan, Mr. and Mrs. Spangler, Prof. and Mrs. Cordley, Mrs. A. Jacobs, Mrs. Sarah Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Crees, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Irvine, Mrs. Emma Groves, Mr. and Mrs. Horning, Mrs. Inez Wilson, berry set, silver spoon, gold bowl and silver gold-tined forks.

Mrs. A. Schubert, silver napkin rings. Bishop and Mrs. N. Castle, silver butter dish.

After the spread, the guests retired at eleven to leave the hosts to meditations while the midnight toll struck out the years of silver, to give way to the years of gold.

FOUND HUGE BONE.

Of Prehistoric Mammal—Extinct Before Man's Time—Laid Centuries Buried.

A bone that, for the immensity of its size is amazing to all who have heard about it has been found in the bank of the Willamette this side of Ingram Island. It is supposed to be the hip bone of a mastodon or of a mammoth and accordingly to have lain in its present hiding place some thousands of years. It is ponderous in its measurements that the ordinary person is not prepared to believe the description of it until the great bone has been actually seen. The socket into which the immense thigh bone of this prehistoric quadruped fitted, is declared to be full two feet across, and possibly a few inches more than two feet. At the widest part the bone is six feet across. Its length is ten feet. No estimate of its weight was obtainable because a portion of the bone was still buried in the river bank and could not be seen. The size, of course, denotes the beast of which it was once a part to have been an animal of prodigious proportions such an one probably that were he to stalk abroad in the land these days would clean out the hop yards or depopulate the towns with one glance at his towering form or one snort from his mighty snorter.

The bone was found by a party of men who were engaged in rafting cord wood from Ingram's island to Corvallis. The caving of the river bank had uncovered several feet of it, which caught the eye of George Harrington. Its peculiar shape denoted that it might be a bone, and he and a companion in a boat rowed up to the spot and with an axe chipped out pieces of the fibre. It turned out to be a bone structure in excellent state of preservation, only the outer surface being discolored and slightly decayed with age. When the pieces had been chipped out and the character of the object discovered, Harrington and his companion rejoined the rafting gang, expecting to return to the spot later and remove their find.

The spot where the find was made is what was until recently the dry bed of the river. A long time ago it had been the chief channel, but with the lapse of time the river had passed into another channel, which has now become the main river. Last winter there was a considerable wash at the spot where the bone has rested so long, and the bank has repeatedly caved into the deep water below. The point where the bone rested, was twelve feet below the surface. The soil is a heavy clay. The indications are such that George Harrington believes the other bones of the great animal are buried at the same spot. The direction in which the big hip bone rested would seem to indicate that the bones of the forward portion of the body and the head yet remain in the bank beyond where the other bone rested. It is the purpose of Mr. Harrington to return to the spot and make excavations, which can be easily done by reason of the deep water just off the bank. If the other bones of the huge skeleton could be unearthed, the find would take on an extremely interesting character. Even without them, the prodigious size of the present bone makes an object of sufficient interest that everybody would like to see it.

An incident in connection with the find is that the bone has been surreptitiously removed, and its present whereabouts are not known. After making the discovery, Harrington told of it to several persons. The cook for the party was among those who listened to the tale. He resigned before the raft of cord wood reached Corvallis, and returned up the river. He told a man with whom he rode about the bone, and that he was going to dig it out. It has since been dugged out, but whether it was done by the cook or by someone else, is not known. An investigation is to be made by the finders. The future developments especially if there are further excavations, will be watched with much interest.

At one time mammoths and mastodons existed in abundance all over the earth. Both were of the elephant species, and the mastodon in particular, if not the mammoth was of larger size. The mammoth was an arctic animal and flourished particularly during the glacial period when what are now the temperate regions were a land of snows, ice and glaciers. Two coatings of hair, one short and wooly and the outer and longer coat furnished protection against the extreme cold of the time. The remains have been found in more abundance in northern Siberia than elsewhere. There a traffic in fossil mammoth tusks has been carried on ever since the 18th century. It is estimated that at times this traffic has reached a proportion where 100 pairs of mammoth tusks were put into commerce in the shape of combs and other articles every year. The tusks were of ivory and generally nine or ten feet in length.

The mastodon was a larger animal than the mammoth. It existed from what is known to geologists as the Miocene to the Pleistocene period. Its remains have been found in great abundance in America, three differing species having been discovered. A complete remains was found a year or two ago in Colorado, in which the contents of the stomach were fossilized and the character of the food taken by the animal determined by scientists. In the leaves that were in this prehistoric stomach there were fossilized lines that showed the foliage of the time to have been different from that of the present day. Like the mammoth the mastodon had great ivory tusks that must have made the great creatures objects of terrible mien. The dispatches about a year ago reported the finding in Alaska of the complete carcass of a mammoth which had been frozen in the ice ages ago, but which had been uncovered by the slow action of the glaciers or in some other way. In Siberia, there is a tradition that the mammoth lived by burrowing in the ground and that whenever it came to the surface it died. The legend is only one of many of the same kind that are current in the region, where skeletons of the ancient animals are so abundant.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent. of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by Graham & Wortham.

Do you shave yourself? Well just keep in mind that our Witch Hazel Extract is a distilled extract and does not contain one drop of wood alcohol. Price, bottle, 25. Graham & Wells.
