THINGS THEY SAY.

About the Football Teams at O. A. C. and Elsewhere—More Dates Fixed.

The first scrimmage work of the season occurred on college field Thursday evening, but four days after the opening of college. Never before have two teams bucked each other so early in the season at OAC. Twenty-seven men by actual count were out in suits. The second team carried the ball and was able to make yardage against the husky veterans of the first eleven. Scrimmage work will go on nightly now, usually with a good crowd of onlookers.

They are counting on the campus that Will Dunlap will be a bad man to tear up things in his neighborhood in the coming games. With his shoes on Will weighs an even 200 now, having lost a discouraging half pound in harvest, where he sewed and bucked sacks for a thrasher for an even 40 days.

Following is the expected line-up of the Willamette University football team which leaves next week to play the teams of the California universities. Coleman and Hinkle, ends; Kellar and Pollard, tackles; Marker and Philbrook, guards; Nelson, center; Rader, quarterback; Nace and Long, halfbacks; and Lounsberry, fullback.

A dozen U. of O. football men were out for light practice last evening. Coach Shorts will be here Friday or Saturday and hard drilling will begin Monday. The first game scheduled is that with the Alumni on Oct. 7th, and then comes the California games.—Thursday's Eugene Register.

Corvallis is having a strenuous time over the attempted enforcement of its prohibition law. The citizens of that town decided by majority vote that the business of liquor selling within its boundaries should be prohibited. So far as the open conduct of the business is concerned, the will of the Corvallis people has been complied with; but a number of the thirst-stricken citizens, not in sympathy with the local option manifesto, have resorted to the old subterfuge of running what is called a social club, where a jag of any brand can be acquired with the usual speed and facility. The municipal authorities are making war on this club, and while the townspeople appear to have the best of it, the issue is somewhat in doubt.

Whatever may be the view of decent, law-abiding citizens throughout the state on the question of local option there can be but little doubt but the sympathy of such is with the people of Corvallis. When the majority of voters in any municipality declare for or against a proposition of this character, in which there is legal provision for registering the public will, the verdict should stand. The people of Corvallis, if they are so inclined, have the right to declare the conduct of the liquor business within the precincts of the city unlawful. And no such cheap subterfuge as this of maintaining a "blind pig" under the disguise of a social club should prevail against such declaration. Corvallis is simply fighting for the supremacy of law that is legitimately established, as expressing the will of the majority. It is the wish of decent citizenship in Oregon that the people of Corvallis will win.

HOPS PAID MORTGAGE.

It had Encumbered the Farm for Twenty-five Years—A Farmer's Experience.

James Herron is hauling his hops to town now and storing them in the Marshall Miller warehouse. They have not been sold, and will not be until there is a better figure than the current price of 13 cents. Mr. Herron thinks, and most every body else thinks, buyers are purposely keeping the price down in order to pick up lots here and there at starvation figures. All accounts agree that there is no reason why the price should be lower than last year. Twenty cents is what nearly all local growers are looking forward to, and as a matter of fact, expect to realize.

Mr. Herron has above 18000 pounds of hops, the product of his 16-acre yard. His yield was something over 1,100 pounds per acre. His hops, he figures, have cost him $1,800. At twenty cents, they will bring $3,600.

Last year, Mr. Herron sold at 25 cent. He could by holding, have secured a better figure. There was a particular reason however, why he sold at 25. There was a mortgage of $2,500 on his farm. It is what is known as the Bundy place, and the mortgage had been there for 25 years. In that long time, it had neither grown larger or smaller, and with an offer in hand for his hops that would cancel the debt and blot out the mortgage, there was a terrible temptation to accept. After some hesitation, Mr. Herron concluded not to gamble on futures and sold, applying the money at once to the cancellation of the debt that had hung over the farm so long.
