SAUNDERS TO PLAY.

Big Fullback in Today's Game—Other Noted Players in Lineup.

Every indication is that this afternoon's game of football will be strenuous. In the string of names that makes up the roll of the Chemawa team, that of Reub Saunders, the giant fullback and one or two other players are alone familiar. Most of the others are strangers, and if some of the players were once on the Carlisle eleven, it need not be surprising. The players are, McCully, Moon, Williams, James, Green, Peazzoni, Sortor, Payde, Reddy, Poland, Shouchuk, Foster, Saunders, Wilson and Washoe. If "Peazzoni" and "Shouchuk" are as hard to handle as are their names it will be all day with little men on the O. A. C. team like Emily and Rinehart. A person writing to Corvallis from the Chemawa school about the game says "from the lineup, O. A. C. seems to have a mighty strong bunch, but they will find out they are in a game when the Chemawa lads begin hammering their line." The Chemawans have been in training longer than the O. A. C. men, and ought to be a hard crowd to handle. Some folks, in fact, predict that they will turn out a harder aggregation than the Pullman team which plays in Corvallis two weeks from today. Nobody expects it to be an easy game by any means, and for that reason there is much interest, and a large attendance may be expected.

One thing that will attract many old timers will be the re-appearance on college field of Reuben Saunders, the giant fullback of the team who was last seen here eight years ago. That was one of the hardest games ever seen on O. A. C. field, and it was only won for the college men by a scratch. During the game, Saunders and an O. A. C. player got to slugging and the latter had to be carried from the field as a result of the prowess of the tall redskin in what was then sometimes an important branch of the game. Saunders is a player whom it is always worth while to watch, for he is both a powerful man and a formidable player.

The Chemawans are to arrive on the 1.30 train from Albany and will take a light dinner at Hotel Corvallis immediately after arrival. The game is called for 2.30. The cadet band under the leadership of Harry Beard will appear for the first time.

AWARDS COMING HOME.

From Benton's Exhibit at Lewis and Clark Fair—What They are.

While there has been more or less criticism of Benton's exhibit at the Fair, and considerable complaint that in scope and quality the display did not do Benton justice, it is gratifying to know that by the Exposition judges the exhibit was considered worthy of notice in many respects. Wednesday there arrived from the manager of exhibits, H. E. Dosch, a list of the awards so far made in the Benton display:

H. L. French, gold medal, collective exhibit grains and grasses. Oregon Agricultural College, gold medal, collective exhibit grasses and grains.

E. E. Raber, gold medal, Surprise wheat in sheaf and in grain. Dick Kiger, gold medal, Defiance wheat in sheaf and grain.

H. S. French, silver medal, mohair and Cotswold wool.

F. R. Barnes, silver medal, Cotswold wool.

John Wyatt, silver medal, Cotswold wool.

W. J. Kent, gold medal, Bailey wheat in sheaf.

W. A. Bates, gold medal, white spring oats in grain.

August Fischer, bronze medal, rye in grain.

Roy Rickard, gold medal, Tracy wheat in straw.

FOUR HUNDRED NOW.

Hunter's License—Also Some Marriage License Incidents—Close Call for Johnson.

The number of hunter's licenses issued up to Thursday afternoon was an even 400. That means that $400 in cash has been paid out for the privilege of hunting in Benton. Most of the hunters who sit and wait at the county clerk's desk while the license is being filled out, drop a gentle hint to the effect that the license law is a graft. Whether $400 worth of benefit has accrued to Benton in protection to the game as a result of the law is a proposition on which others than hunters have well defined opinions. Perhaps nine people out of ten agree with the hunters.

Apparently all the licenses were in use on Sunday, which was the first day of the open season for pheasant shooting. It so happened that the day before was Portland day at the Fair, and a holiday with the clerk's office closed, which meant that no licenses were available. Several hunters had forgotten to obtain credentials and there was a great demand all day for Deputy Clerk Johnson who was obliging enough to do a curbstone stunt in licenses that helped belated hunters out of their difficulty. With nearly 400 licenses in use and probably some hunters abroad without licenses it might be figured out that if every man got the limit, which is likely, about 4,000 birds were slain Sunday. If the total dead and missing has since increased to 10,000 it need not be surprising. The chase has gone on with such assiduity that the frightened birds are driven from field to wood and from wood to field again. One frightened hen alighted in a corner of the athletic grounds at the college the other evening while the football men were at work. Another alighted on the window sill of the bay window at the residence of Mrs. M. Jacobs Sunday afternoon.

An Alsea lad sent in for a hunter's license, enclosing the fee, of course. The boys in the county clerk's office knew all about his case and after making out the hunter's license properly, they made out also a marriage license. It had his name in it, his best girl's name and everything else requisite, except the signature of the clerk. It was pinned over the hunter's license so that when the envelope should be opened gain the impression that the marriage license was the only enclosure. The news is that the scheme worked beautifully, and that for some moments after the opening of the envelope, the youth was first pale, then red and in many other respects the abused victim of a cruel, cruel joke.

Another point with reference to hunter's license is that Robert Johnson since he has officiated as an assistant over at the clerk's office has made frequent offers of a free marriage license to many bachelors about town. Among these was H. W. Kaupisch. "What's that?" ejaculated Kaupisch, after Robert had made him the bold offer. The next day Kaupisch led a bride to the altar, but it happened in Linn county. Bob remembers now that there was a dangerous look in the creameryman's eye at the time of the license proposition, and is dazed to discover how near he came to dropping $3 for the license.

On another occasion, Robert offered Dr. A. C. Steckle a free marriage license, whereupon Lieut. Quinlan, who stood by, enquired if Robert was the advance agent of the census.

CORVALLIS SELECTED.

Annual Good Road's Convention to be Held in This Town.

One of the biggest things that has happened to Corvallis in a long time is the selection of the town for the next annual meeting of the State Good Roads convention. The convention is not to be a side show or a district affair, but the regular annual state convention, lasting three days, and bringing delegates galore from every part of the state. It will embody a programme of surpassing interest in which the subject of good roads will be considered from every standpoint. It will present information and statistics that will be of great value in forming sentiment favorable to betterment of public highways. It will be such a convention as will interest every home owner in the county and which ought to attract all such into attendance on its sessions. Its one and only theme of discussion will be the general welfare of the community as related to public roads, and since that vitality concerns every inhabitant, even thus far in advance there would seem to be a universal determination to make of the convention the reddest letter day in the history of the county. The days for the sessions are November 15th, 16th and 17th. Governors, senators, legislative members, county judges, and all manner of dignitaries always attend these conventions, and there is no probability that exception will be made to the rule in the case of Corvallis sessions.

Very much credit is due County Judge Watters for securing the convention for Benton county. He has during his term of office been a faithful attendant at every session of the Good Roads convention. That attendance finally gained him a place on the executive committee. The executive committee fixes each year the place for holding the convention, and that is how Corvallis got it over many other applicants. Forc's will be at work between now and the opening day that will make the convention a hummer.

BECKWITH—FLEMING.

One of the prettiest weddings seen in Corvallis for some time was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Clark on last Wednesday by their niece, Miss Lauriette B. Beckwith, was united in marriage to W. M. Fleming, of Salem.

Promptly at 10:30 o'clock the wedding party entered the parlor to the strains of a wedding march played by Mrs. E. F. Green. They took their places under an arch of Oregon grape, white sweet peas and white clematis, where Rev. E. F. Green performed the impressive ring ceremony.

The bride was gowned in white silk colliene appliqued in lace roses, and carried bride roses. Miss Sadie Dixon, as bridesmaid, wore pink silk mull and carried pink roses. The groom and his attendant, Vance Taylor, wore the conventional black.

The double parlors were decorated with ferns and roses and the dining room in asters. A most delicious wedding breakfast was served to twenty relatives and intimate friends after which the newly wedded pair took the train for Portland and will be at home to their friends in Salem after November 1st. The bride has been a resident of Corvallis for a year and a half and she has formed a large circle of friends. The groom is an exemplary young man and is a son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Fleming of this city.

R. R. and will be appreciated by the public as the last six weeks of the Fair will be the best part and see the largest crowd.

NO FIRE PROTECTION.

And he did not Come to Corvallis With his Factory and Employees.

Lack of fire protection was an influence that recently lost to Corvallis an important industry. The owner of a furniture factory looked over the situation—with a view of moving his plant to the town. Every environment and condition was favorable and he became intensely pleased with the prospect. His mind was apparently all made up to come. His plant employs a force of 12 to 30 men. Before making final arrangements, however, he discovered that he could get no insurance on his plant, or if so at such a high rate as to make it prohibitive, all because of lack of fire protection, and he reluctantly gave up the plan. That is one thing that the new water works means to Corvallis, and it will be a good day for the town when it is in operation with a fire protection that will make insurance possible where it is now impossible, and the rates lower, where they are now too high.

YOU OUGHT TO SEE IT.

The press all along the line is speaking in laudatory terms of the play and the players to be seen at the Opera House here next Wednesday night. The company is playing all this week in Portland and the following from Monday's Oregonian is a sufficient guarantee that Corvallis theatre goers have a treat in store for them:

"A real bridge over real water, a police patrol boat steaming through a raised drawbridge, a woman thrown bodily into the river, a sensational rescue, hunger, laughter and tears, until the audience is nearly breathless with excitement—such is one of the greatest scenic productions on the popular stage anywhere in the country—"On the Bridge at Midnight," the attraction this week at the Empire. It is a thriller to the end, and the scenery is far above the ordinary. The story told is an intense one, often lightened by welcome flashes of humor. Yesterday at both performances, the theatre was occupied to the last available seat, and the applause was like a park of young cannons getting busy in a battle.

"This picturesque $10,000 play has a plot full of interest and Mrs. Vera Hamilton plays the part of a blind mother whose child is stolen from her by a relative so that the latter could unlawfully divert money to himself, and the strange adventure of the child, who turns out to be a street arab forms the chance for Miss Katherine Crego to shine as Reddy, a convenient person who knocks the head villain's schemes awry every time.

"Humble virtue gets it in the neck," as Wallace Irwin says, with a vengeance, but also gets a warm supporter in Hermann Von Schulberg, a German youth, who gives Frank Weed any opportunity to display his talents. Mr. Weed ruses many a laugh. Eva Lewis, a woman with a past, is handsomely dressed in the last act, and takes part in a ludicrous love-making scenes with Mr. Weed."
