—A. L. McFadden left Monday after an over Sunday visit in Corvallis. He was recently employed in the construction of a huge smelter in northern California. A feature of the establishment is that ore from the mine is transported to the smelter, a distance of two and a half miles on a cable in mid air. Huge buckets, holding 750 pounds of ore are attached to the cable 150 feet apart. The weight of the loaded buckets, down the steep declivity from mine to smelter is what keeps the cable moving and carries the empty buckets back. A brake has to be applied to keep the cable from so increasing in speed as to move too swiftly.

The latter official has 10 days in which to prepare it for the further use of the sheriff, to whom it is then delivered for final collection of taxes. Ten per cent penalty and 12 per cent interest has now to be paid on all outstanding taxes. The amount unpaid on the roll is only $2, 220.97. —A dispatch from Pullman, Washington, to Sunday's Oregonian states that the rush line of the Washington State College eleven weighs an average of 192 pounds to the man, and the backs, 174 per man, making an average weight of 183. The center of the line of giants stands six feet four, and the guards on each side of him, six feet two. One tackle weighs 208 and the other 185. "Go if you want to; I ain't," said he enthusiastically; "it's bully; it's bully go in there boys; go to 'em; eat 'em up; eat 'em up," said he, waving his hat and hurrying over to where the second teamers were delivering another line rush. She and the children went off alone.

—A story that went the rounds on the street yesterday is that internal changes are in process at Kline, Hooligan & Co's place of business. The bar and the booze have been taken out of the front room and instead there has been installed a horizontal bar, rings and other athletic devices. The floor is covered with sawdust and the place made to look like a real athletic resort. In the room adjoining on the west a couple of safes, a cook stove and other appliances have been placed, and the floor covered with linoleum. Where they put the booze and bar, nobody else was able to say. One man remarked that they had abolished the booze and another said that sure was the beginning of the end of the establishment.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent. of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars.
