

Corvallis Times

Official Paper of Benton County.

CORVALLIS, OREGON,
TUESDAY EVENING NOV. 7, 1905.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.

Hereafter the publication day of the Times will be Tuesday evening and Friday evening, instead of Wednesday and Saturday mornings. For 11 years the paper has been actually appearing in the evening, though the following morning was given out as publication day. The change now announced ought to have been made 11 years ago.

STRANGE ADVICE.

Certain Oregon newspapers defend the proposition that the indicted and convicted representatives from Oregon ought not to resign, and therein give token of a queer conception of public virtue. Strip-ped of all sentiment, the offense of these convicted officials is that they have violated the very laws they enacted for others to obey. They have given a staggering exemplification of what it is to be false to a sacred public duty. We may all regret the condition and out of personal friendship or kindly sympathy smother the indignation naturally elicited by this betrayal of a public trust, but there is no justification for urging that these men should continue to hold office and draw salaries. To defend such a contention is to tell the citizen,—the present and the future citizen, that there is no shame in the condemnatory verdict of a jury or in the sentence of a court. It is to tell them that when in office, it is just as well for a convicted man as for a man of rare probity to serve in public place. It is a proposition so diametrically at variance with the commonly accepted notion of decency, that it is astounding that public journals would defend it. Whatever may be the duty of Mr. Mitchell, Mr. Williamson and Mr. Hermann in the premises, there ought not to be one, in the light of the facts, to counsel them not to resign.

DROPPED DEAD.

L. N. Price, old Benton County Resident—Was Buried Saturday.

L. N. Price, a highly respected and old time resident of Benton county dropped dead at eight o'clock last Friday morning in a store in Portland, and was buried Saturday in the cemetery at Simpson's chapel, near the old home of the deceased in Southern Benton. His demise came among total strangers, and it was several hours before the affrighted Portland merchant and those about him, learned the identity of the dead. Mr. Price went four weeks ago to Portland and bought a lot in one of the suburbs of the city. He built a house which was rapidly rounding into completion, and with his wife, Mr. Price was preparing to occupy it. At the very hour of his passing his errand in town was the purchase of furniture and groceries with which to begin life in the new habitation. He had made a purchase in a store, and while the salesman was wrapping it up, Mr. Price fell dead on the floor. There was no warning, no signal of what was to happen. With his face ashen in death, he dropped to the floor and expired. The clerk hastened to his side, but only learned that his customer was beyond human aid. The next query became the one of who was the man before him. Inquiry along this line was prosecuted vigorously, but there was no one to answer. The coroner was summoned, but could not give the dead a name.

The bereaved wife, ignorant of the facts, was in another part of the big city, and had an engagement to meet her husband at a certain place. At the appointed hour, she went to the rendezvous, but he was not there,—he was dead.

Out at Sellwood, resided W. I. Price, a son. He went to Sellwood from Benton county, about a month ago, to reside. He could have told the crowd the identity of the dead man, if he could have been at the store, or later at the morgue.

It was noon, four hours after his death, before the body of Mr. Price was identified. The stub of a check in his pocket contained the name of the man from whom he had bought the lots. From him the name was secured of the man who built the house. He was found after much trouble, and at the morgue was able to identify the body. The day was nearly exhausted before relatives in the city had been informed of the tragic developments of the morning.

As the sun went down Saturday evening a large assembly of old neighbors stood in the country churchyard at Simpson's chapel, and saw the casket containing the body of L. N. Price lowered into the grave, and earth to earth, dust to dust.

The body with the funeral party reached Corvallis on the Westside at noon that day. Relatives and friends met them at the station and started at once for the cemetery. There was not time for the funeral in the chapel, because the day was far spent when the cemetery was reached, and it was in the cemetery as the sun was sinking in the West that old neighbors heard from Rev. M. M. Waltz the words that consigned their old neighbor back to the dust from which he came.

The deceased was a citizen well worth the high respect and esteem in which he was universally held. He was good in all the meaning of the word, and the heritage of abundant worldly goods that he leaves to a son and a daughter increased a name that in their parent stood for all that is honorable.

L. N. Price was born in Indiana, 70 years ago. He came to Oregon in 1853, and settled in Southern Oregon. He came to Benton county 31 years ago, and settled on the farm now occupied by his daughter, Mrs. A. W. Hawley, and her family. He knew that his debt of life might have to be paid at any time, and provided his son, W. I. Price with a document so that the son might if he desired, draw the money on deposit at various banks after the passing of the father. The surviving members of the family, are the widow, and the son and daughter, W. I. Price and Mrs. A. W. Hawley.

A BIG DAY.

In History of Corvallis Church Sunday.—The Occasion.

After a week of unusual interest made so by the presence of prominent speakers from abroad, the reopening week exercises at the Methodist Episcopal church came to a close Sunday night. Friday night concluded the series of sermons. Dr. John Coleman, president of Willamette University, delivering the address. In a polished yet powerful discourse, he sought to prove that belief in God, and development in Christian religion is educative, and that unbelief is just the opposite. It takes no effort of the brain declared the speaker, to say I don't believe, but searching out the truths of God broadens the mind, sharpens the intellect and leads into paths that are educative and helpful.

A general church reception followed Dr. Coleman's address, several hundred being present. Lemonade and wafers were served by the young people of the church. Strangers were welcomed and a good time enjoyed by all.

The service Sunday began with a love feast at 9:45, followed at 10:30 by a sermon by Dr. Rader of Portland.

At the conclusion of the address the congregation was given opportunity to contribute towards the payment of the debt that has been incurred in remodeling the church. For the purpose, printed contracts were passed around and those desiring signed for as many shares or fractions of shares as they wished to pay. Each share represented the payment of one dollar per month for a period of three years.

There was a children's rally at 3 p. m. with an excellent talk on habits by Dr. Rader, and the sermon at night was by Rev. G. H. Feese. Contributions were also solicited in the concluding minutes of the evening services, and the total amount of money pledged during Sunday was about $3300.

To complete the entire project and put the edifice in firstclass shape, $4,700 is required and this it is stated, be provided, and the work finished immediately.

Dr. Rader declares that the church when completed will be one of the best equipped in the valley.

BEGIN THURSDAY.

Construction Operations on Mountain Water System for Corvallis.

Thursday morning work will begin on the new gravity system of water works for the city of Corvallis. H. Mitchell, the construction contractor arrived Saturday, and since that time has been busily engaged in securing a force of men, in establishing a camp and in getting his outfit to the front. By tomorrow evening all the preliminaries are expected to be arranged, so that active operations can begin the following morning. The clearing of the right of way from the intake on Rock Creek valleyward, and the actual work of digging the trench for the pipe line are to begin simultaneously. On the latter department of the work, a force of 25 men will be employed, and in all, including the clearing operations, about 40 men will be required. Mr. Mitchell is hiring his help almost exclusively in this vicinity. The camp is to be located in the vicinity of Mr. Hecker's, the second or third place below the intake on Rock Creek, and the conveniences will be sufficient to accommodate 40 men. At the same time the construction operations begin, a gang of engineers under Engineer Miller will begin the work of finally locating the route for the pipe line. Members of the party go into camp tomorrow night, and will take the field Thursday morning.

Final arrangements are perfecting for issue of bonds. A representative of the buyers has been in town and has examined the proceedings of the Water Board, and all steps leading up to the issue.

Juniors Walked Away with Eugene in Annual Second Team Game.

The annual game of football between the Junior elevens of OAC and the State University was won by the strong lads of the OAC team on College field last Friday afternoon. The game was watched by a large crowd of spectators, and was very interesting. The OAC team was stronger in every way, the score scarcely representing their real superiority over the visitors.

In the first half, there was no score. Eugene had an opportunity to do so when an OAC player muffed the kickoff and a University man fell on the ball on OAC's 25 yard line. Her men however, were not strong enough to shove the Collegians back and the latter soon worked the ball back up the field and out of a position of peril.

Early in the second half, starting from Eugene's 45 yard line, the Collegians rushed the oval the balance of the way for the only touchdown of the game. Later on they again drove the visitors to the latter's own 50 yard line, and was apparently headed for a touchdown when a penalization for offside caused them to lose the ball on downs. During the game Eugene rushed the ball 74 yards and OAC men carried it 134 yards. Porterfield at one time got away for a 15 yard quarterback run, but was called back on some technicality. The longest run of the day was 20 yards by a Eugene halfback.

The most significant feature of the game was the flashes of football genius seen in the play of some of the new OAC men. Porterfield, a freshman quarterback, and Darby at tackle, playing football for his first year, are men sure to play brilliant ball in another season, and to make excellent men to take the places of some of veterans the team is to lose. The same is true of Cherry at center and McKinnon at guard, while there is lots of promise in many of the other men. Captain Ray Walker played star ball, and Sweek worked to an excellent advantage. The lineup of the two teams was:

"A Broken Heart."

On the evening of Monday Nov. 13th the people of this city are to have an opportunity of witnessing Miss Esther Rujaro's beautiful story of love in the Rocky Mountains. All who have sat under the spell of this deeply interesting story of plain and mostly honest people will surely avail themselves of seeing it again. The play is well equipped, magnificently staged and is produced by a splendid company of artists. No effort has been spared by the management to make the production as nearly perfect as possible.

"A Broken Heart" is now playing its second season of unqualified success. The reason of its great popularity is not difficult to understand. "I write from the heart out," says James Whitcomb Riley, and there is no surer way of writing to the heart than the method of the famous Hoosier poet. Miss Rujaro has evidently caught the idea and the result is a play that will live long after many of the plays of the day are forgotten. "People don't want good plays," growl unsuccessful managers and actors, but "A Broken Heart" is a most convincing argument to the contrary.
