RICHARDS

Richards seems to have been guilty, but the jury was not willing to say so. Richards called his house a "hotel", but as described in the court testimony, it seems in reality a resort for the high-toned "immoral" of Portland. When a cab drove up, invariably the lights in front of the house went out until the occupants had alighted and passed inside the building. Then the lights blazed up again. When persons were about to enter a carriage, the same darkening of the front transpired. When the raid was made all manner of folk from the first families were apparently there, if newspaper reports are to be believed. Estimated by the signs, there is probably more of real devilry at Richard's than in half a dozen of the less pretentious establishments of the same kind in Portland, the latter of which, of course, being possibly more amenable, because not a "hotel."

If justice slipped because, as they say, the jury was packed, the fact is to be deplored. It was bad enough for Richards and his "hotel" to flourish in Portland; it is far worse for a conspiracy to vindicate him, when if humbler folk had been his client and his caravansary humbler, conviction would have been certain. As it is, Richards has done so well that it is easy at this distance to believe that he may have planned and pulled off the whole show in order to better his "hotel" business by the free advertising he has secured.

If the jury in clearing Richards, held his place to be a "hotel," and Mr. Richards to be a "hotel keeper" what of the other hotels and landlords of Portland?

Does the refusal by vote of 34 to 1 of the republicans in the New York state senate to ask Senator Depew to resign, mean that the senator's $12,000 insurance salary for "senatorial influence" and his "high finance" in connection with the Equitable Life are permissible in United States senators? Thus backed up, Depew need not hesitate to do most anything on the calendar of crookedness.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live from One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill with cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says. "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by Graham & Wortham.

THE INDIAN WAIF.

And the Soldiers—Swore to Kill it but Didn't—Cob Blair's Story.

Colbert Powell Blair, the centurion, formerly of Corvallis, but now of Pendleton, was a soldier of the Rogue River Indian war, and also in the Black Hawk war. A favorite story of the aged man has reference to the latter campaign. Mr. Blair and a number of his fellow soldiers one day, like Hannibal of old, swore eternal enmity to all Indians, and agreed always to kill them or any of them on sight. After that Mr. Blair and his company were pursuing a band of redskins. As the latter became sorely pressed they began to throw away baggage, provisions or other impediments to flight. At length an Indian boy of about one summer was dropped in the brush, and it fell to the luck of Mr. Blair to be his discoverer. Under the terms of the vow, it was his duty to slay the dusky youngster. His companions reminded him of his agreement and told him it was his duty to strike. As the legend goes, the kindhearted soldier, eyed the smiling little Indian for a moment as it lay in the brush, and then with a remark that sounded something like "durn the promise," he took the babe in his arms and carried it to camp. Before night the fugitive band was overhauled and taken prisoner, and the waif of the bush was restored to its mother. Shortly afterward, peace was concluded, and were the story a romance instead of a fact, the assurance would be that it was because of the kindness to the abandoned Indian child that the Redskins laid down their arms.

BODY GOES EAST.

For Burial—Death and Funeral of Henry Holroyd.

A graveyard in the East is the destination of the body of Henry Holroyd, which left Corvallis via the Westside today. Mr. Holroyd died early Wednesday morning at the family home in the North-western part of town. His ailment was neuralgia of the heart, and his illness was of but a week's duration. The funeral occurred from the family residence, Rev. Bush of the Presbyterian church conducting the service. The interment will be at Olwain, Iowa. The body is accompanied East by Mrs. Holroyd and two children, and by J. Fred Yates, who goes as an attorney for the settlement of business matters in Iowa.

Mr. Holroyd was a member of the Iowa colony in this city. He came to Corvallis on a visit two or three years ago, and returned a year ago last autumn to reside. He bought lots and built a home in the block west of the Francisco property. The latter is one of five houses built in the same block last year. The deceased was about 70 years of age, and was an estimable citizen. The surviving members of the family are the widow, and two sons and a daughter in Corvallis, and two daughters in the East.

KILLED PHONE LINES.

Wrapped Them with Thin Wire—An Albany Bridge Incident.

The work of a miscreant made lots of trouble for the Independent telephone people the other day. All the Independent lines leading into Albany from Benton suddenly refused to be talkable. The condition is what phone people call "dead." When the condition was discovered, repairers were sent out. They spent a day in search and found nothing. A second day was devoted to the enterprise and by and by, on the Albany bridge, it was discovered that all the lines had been bound or connected together by a very fine wire, which effectually killed them all for talking purposes. The wire used was as fine as 60 or 70 thread, being utilized in the coil of a phone instrument. It was so fine that when first discovered it was taken for a spider web. The attempt of a lineman to brush it away exposed its true character, and at the same time betrayed the design of the person who put it there. Its removal restored the "dead" line to immediate and vigorous life.

WHEN WE VOTE AGAIN

We Take Double Dose—New Primary Election law and Corvallis.

Will Corvallis hold its annual city election under the primary election law? The town has now an official population of more than 2,000 as shown by the census made by Assessor Davis. The primary law provides that its terms shall be applied in the elections of all cities of 2,000 and over. If the election be not so held, will not the proceedings be illegal, the acts of the officers be illegal and the whole fabric of city government without the form and authority of law?

So far, nobody has examined into the question. There is not yet interest enough in the election and who the officers shall be to induce such an investigation. The one thing that is known is that the application of the primary law to city elections in towns like Corvallis will somewhat complicate what is now simple, and put at work complexity and more or less expense where there is now simplicity and little or no cost. The law on the subject is as follows:

"Section 6.—The nomination of candidates for municipal offices by the political parties subject to the provisions of this law, shall be governed by this law in all incorporated towns and cities of this state having a population of 2,000 and upward, as shown by the last preceding national or state census." A provision in another section is that the nominating election shall be held on the 30th day next preceding such municipal election. The candidates must circulate or have circulated petitions asking for their nomination and these petitions are filed with the police judge at least 15 days before the nominating election, at which time the said police judge makes up the official list of those to be voted for. Between that and the day for the nominating election a printed ballot is prepared for use in said nominating election. The nominees at this nominating election are afterward voted for in the same manner at the electing election.

AS TO HENS.

Certain Hens that Made Money for Their Owner in the Good old Winter Time.

Hens pay. Good hens, at least do. Thirtythree of that sort at the J. B. Irvine yard have produced 882 eggs in the last 80 days, an average of nearly 11 eggs per day. (Such a record in the dead of winter and in that peculiar period when hens ordinarily are not over fruitful, is fairly good, at least from the owner's standpoint. The egg product of the 80 days was 734 dozen. At the average price of 32 cents at which they were sold, the revenue was $23.52. The amount paid for feed during the period was $9, leaving a net proceed of $17.52. The hens were thoroughbred Brown Leghorns.

And still Oregon imports poultry products by the trainload from Iowa. Iowa meantime, is not by climatic conditions nearly so well adapted to the poultry business as is the Willamette valley. The Corvallis poultry fanciers are blazing the way in an industry that will ultimately be one of the chief sources of wealth in Willamette valley counties.

Resolutions.

Whereas, it has pleased Divine Providence to remove from our midst and from her home, our beloved comrade, Mrs. Elizabeth Buxton, whose qualities as a friend and comrade, placed her in the highest esteem of all,

Whereas, it is right and proper for us sympathizing comrades in this dark hour of trouble, to pay our highest tribute to the memory of our departed friend and comrade and therefore be it

Resolved, that we the members of the Order of Washington deeply feel the loss of her who has proven herself worthy of our respect and regard and extend our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved family and relatives; and be it further

Resolved, that these resolutions be placed on the records of our order and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, and to each of the Corvallis papers for publication.
