CORVALLIS, OREGON.
FRIDAY EVENING FEB. 9, 1906.

AS PORTLAND DOES IT.

It is possible that people in the country have old fashioned and outworn notions of what the moral standards in city life ought to be. It is possible too, that these old fashioned folk may have false and superficial conceptions of what ought to be the civic standards of statesmen who serve the municipal council of a city, and for that reason, what seems to them the swift pace set by the statesmen of the Portland city council may be wholly inaccurate.

Here for instance is the Richards establishment, a place of lascivious debauchery, characterized as a "hotel." It is the admission of all the Portland papers that it is the high-toned resort of libertines, a voluptuous dive where young girls are enticed and ruined, and an assembling ground of the fashionable lewd. According to the testimony of a policeman whose beat borders the establishment, one young girl with hair dishevelled escaped the place, pursued by her would be destroyer, and by a heroic defense, saved her honor from the cowardly libertine who pursued her. It was testimony that the street light over the door always went out when a carriage arrived, and blazed again when the occupants had passed inside. In short, all Oregon and all Portland knows the place to be a big assignation house, more disreputable because essaying the robes of respectability.

In the face however, of all this, eight municipal statesmen, stood on the floor of the Portland council and voted down a report of a committee, revoking not the privilege of the rotten establishment to do business in Portland, but simply withdrawing a license to sell liquor. Even, after the contumely the place has brought on the name of Portland these councilmen refused to have Richards rebuked by even so small a penalty as simple revocation of his license to sell liquor. What is vastly more to their shame, however, is that they did not in manliness come out openly in defense of Richards and low morals but resorted to subterfuge by saying that not enough evidence had been adduced. They claim not to know, what all the Pacific Northwest knows, and that is the damnable character of Richards and his place. What they do know is that no young woman who has been ruined at Richards can be induced to go on a witness stand and acknowledge the fact, and simple folk out in country towns cannot help but believe these Portland councilmen thought that subterfuge a good way to save Richards and his business.

In the country now the wonder is, do Portland councilmen correctly reflect the moral standards of the City of Portland. As is the source so usually is the stream. If, as would naturally be suspected, the council is an accurate reflection of Portland's moral ideas, why rob the city in roses when underneath there is such uncleanness. In no country town in Oregon, would the Richards place be allowed to exist for a moment, much less would there be men to appear in the council of a country town as its apologist and subterfugist as did Councilman Sheppard in Portland Wednesday. Perhaps though, country people do not understand the proprieties and ethics of modern city life, especially as given to the world by Count Boni de Castellane in Paris and Mr. Richards, in Portland, Oregon.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent. of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by Graham & Wortham.

FRUIT FROM AFAR.

Came From Islands of the Pacific to Corvallis—Is for Canning.

A big crate of pineapples, all the way from Honolulu, was a curious shipment that arrived in Corvallis the other day, and thereby hangs a story of some interest. The pineapples are of immense size, and luscious beyond compare. In comparison with those from California, sometimes seen in the markets they are as giant to pigmy.

The shipment came to Prof. Pernot at the college. They are sent here to be canned under the new process promulgated from the bacteriological department of which Prof. Pernot is the head. The process was the subject of a bulletin, and also of many newspaper articles. A complete description of the method, particularly in connection with sweet cider appeared in the TIMES. Very wide attention has been attracted to the college by the process, as the incident of the pineapple will illustrate.

Recently a letter came to the head of the department from Honolulu. It was from H. Grant, the head of a large canning establishment at Honolulu. The writer related that he had seen in the Saturday Evening Post, published at Philadelphia, a description of the new canning process evolved at the Oregon State College, and requested permission to send to the college crate of pineapples for experimental purposes. The receipt here the other day of the crate of luscious fruit is the result of the correspondence that ensued. Prof. Pernot has canned the fruit, and will later on send half of it to Honolulu to test the feasibility of his process for shipping and climatic tests. The other half will be kept at the college, to be opened at stated periods.

By the Pernot process the fruit is canned under a low temperature in which the fibre is not destroyed, and what we call the meat of the fruit is not cooked but preserved in its natural shape and state. Cider so preserved a year and a half ago, is as sweet as the day it was bottled. All kinds of vegetables have been similarly preserved in the department.

IN THE WRECK.

Benton County boy in Train Collision at Bridal Veil—Was Injured.

A Benton county boy figured in the late train wreck at Bridal Veil, in which the Pacific Express crashed into the Spokane Flyer in a rear end collision. He is Vernon Jones who resides near Willamette Grange Hall. He arrived in Corvallis Wednesday, enroute home from The Dalles, where he has been for some time on a business visit.

The collision took place Tuesday morning. The young man was in the smoking car of the wrecked train and at the time of the wreck he was in the act of leaving his seat when the runaway engine struck the standing train, the shock threw him over the backs of three coach seats and he fell on his head and shoulders between two seats in such a manner as to sustain serious injuries. His head and face were badly scratched, and his neck was so badly injured that he was unable to wear a collar.

Asked as to his injuries, he stated that he had seen a physician at the scene of the wreck and was informed that he was not seriously hurt. Mr. Jones boarded the wrecked train at The Dalles. His trunk which was in the baggage car of the train on which he came down was badly scarred up as a result of the wreck.
