CORVALLIS, OREGON,
FRIDAY EVENING MAY 4, 1906.

THE RETURNS.

The official canvass of the primary election returns was made by the secretary of state yesterday. For governor on the republican ticket, 43,096 votes were cast, of which Dr. Withycombe got a plurality over Geer of 263. Johns got 7,879 votes, Brown, 5,298 and Selhbredre, 1,832. Bourne's plurality over Cake was 625, Benson's over Gatch, 1,446. Hawley's plurality over Toozz was 883, his vote being 8,295. The vote of Huston, whom Benton gave such a handsome testimonial, even against a native born Benton county man, was only 4,712.

Laborers are in great demand at $2.50 per day for the construction of the Corvallis mountain water works, but in spite of that and many other inviting calls for his service, Outlaw Smith broke into a store at Troutdale to steal a few articles of minor value and killed three men and got killed as a sequel to the transaction. Half the energy he expended and the tribulation he passed through in his last days would by honest toil have bought most of the Troutdale store for Smith, and therein is a sermon in behalf of industry eloquent beyond compare.

It will be well worth anybody's time to hear Charles Galloway discuss political issues in Corvallis next Monday evening, or at Philomath at three o'clock the same afternoon. Mr. Galloway is a native Yamhiller, and one of the best all round speakers in the country. He delivered the principal address at the big meeting of pioneers at Champeog this week. He has fine intelligence and a most pleasing personality. To hear Mr. Galloway will be to spend a very pleasant hour, and perhaps a very profitable one.

THE BOTTOM OUT.
Of Cascara Market—Three Years' Supply of Bark on Hand.

The chittim-peeling season is on and there are inquiries as to prices. Present indications are not at all promising, is what a local dealer said today. Two and a half to three cents is the best price possible in Corvallis now, and that is the Portland price. There is a big surplus of the bark on hand, and until it is consumed in large part high figures will not again rule. The story of the situation is well told in the following from the Oregonian of Thursday:
Cascara bark is again being offered rather freely, but there is almost no market at all for it. The leading dealers quote prices nominally at two and two and a half cents for new and two and a half and three cents for old bark. The heavy unsold surplus is what depresses the market, as about three years' supply still remains on hand. Until this accumulation is worked off, there can be no material improvement in price, and the surplus is not going to be reduced as long as peeling continues. If no bark were peeled for two or three years it would not only give a chance for the market to advance again, but the bark would also be much heavier by that time.

—A Philomath correspondent says: A construction crew under the supervision of Assistant Engineer Bogue, is engaged in placing along Main street, the laterals and hydrants which have been provided by the city council to attach to the Corvallis water conduit. With four hydrants stationed at convenient intervals, and six hundred feet of hose to play a stream on the college, any business house, and at least half of the residences of the city can be reached with water in case of fire. It is doubtful if there is another town in Oregon that ever had a water system brought right to its streets without expending a dollar for subsidizing the project. The people of Philomath ought to appreciate the public spiritedness of the business men of Corvallis, who have at an enormous expense to their city projected and with dispatch brought to completion a public utility of which we are to be recipients for only a nominal expenditure.

TWO BIG LINES.

Of Telephone Added to Local System—Newport and Kings Valley.

Two new lines of telephone have been added to the local Independent system. One is the Kings Valley—Summit line, which was connected up with the local Independent office Tuesday evening. It is called the Summit Telephone Company. The rates for toll messages have not been fixed, and will not be until there is a meeting of stockholders, many of whom are Corvallis business men.

The other line is the Yaquina Bay Mutual Telephone and Improvement Company's commercial wire, which was brought to the city limits Tuesday evening and which is being connected up with the local Independent office today. It comes from Newport via Toledo, Elk City, Eddyville, Summit and Blodgett, following the Cardwell hill road to Corvallis. At various points the company has switchboards to connect local lines to the trunk line, giving direct service to remote districts, where telephone a few years ago was not dreamed of. The company was organized about a year ago in Lincoln county and its principal stockholders are Lincoln and Benton people. They are operating about 100 miles of line and are continually adding to lines and equipment. The completion of this line gives telephone service to Newport which will be a great convenience to the people of Corvallis and other valley towns during the summer season. A. T. Peterson, of Toledo, is secretary of the company.

The building of the line has been under the direction of John Hewitt, who has had a force of seven men most of the time. Construction operations began at Newport July 20th, last year and Summit was reached in September. Work was resumed at Summit March 20th, and the city limits of Corvallis was reached last Tuesday. The rates for toll have not been fixed.

APPRECIATES THE KINDNESS.

Letter from a Beneficiary of Corvallis Ladies' Aid.

In a letter to Mrs. M. A. Cannon, a sufferer from the San Francisco disaster acknowledged the relief afforded, in the way of clothing, by Corvallis ladies. The letter gives evidence of due appreciation of the kindness shown the San Franciscans in time of need, and is calculated to further stimulate the effort to relieve those who lost their all in the great disaster. The letter is as follows:

San Francisco, April 30.
Dear Mrs. Cannon;
I found your card among things that were sent to the S. F. sufferers, and as I am one of them I want to thank you for whatever you sent, whether it is the waiste on my back or something else. You have helped in our distress and may you never experience the distress and feeling that we have gone through. As this is the only card I found, I can only thank you, but you can extend our thanks to anyone else who was as kind. We were driven out by the fire, after which our house was blown up. On the hill we suffered intensely from pouring rain and the want of necessities. We had two shocks last night and we live in dread of others. We have been through it all. We are all so thankful to such as you. May God bless you and yours. Again thanking you, I am yours,
BELLE M. BUTTERS.

HOW THEY POISON.

Why Canned Goods Sometimes Kill People—Something to be Avoided.

The importance of not buying canned goods which have been reprocessed is a subject treated in detail in a recent bulletin on "Canning" by Prof. Pernot. The way to tell that the goods have been reprocessed is explained in the article.

The purpose of heating fruit to be canned is to kill the spores or germs, which if left undestroyed cause fermentation. A temperature of 240 degrees is usually resorted to for this purpose. Prof. Pernot has however, discovered and pointed out in his bulletin that more than one heating is necessary and that lower temperature may be used, which lower temperature prevents destruction of the fiber. He uses three applications of heat. If all the spores are not destroyed in the first heat, they grow and fermentation quickly begins. The canning people watch for this fermentation, the usual sign being a swelling of the can. It is then that a small hole is punched through the top of the can to ease the pressure from the inside. The buyer can always tell when this has been done, because a small drop of solder is applied to close the hole, and by watching for it, can always see it on the top of the can. Its presence there is a sure sign that after canning, the fruit has started to spoil, and that it has been re-processed.

That in turn means that there is danger inside the can, for fruit so re-processed is very liable to have developed ptomain poison, which poison is dangerous and many times fatal to human life. In the camp where E. E. Cooper remained for two days during the recent burning of San Francisco, 200 people were poisoned by eating canned goods, and several deaths ensued. It is for these reasons that canned goods with an extra drop of solder on the top of the can should be avoided. Prof. Pernot's bulletin, in which the above is only incidental has attracted wide attention. Among letters received from far and wide as a result of the bulletin was one the other day from a big can-making establishment at Rutland, Vermont, in which the writers state that the announcement only corroborates a surmise they have for a long time held.

AS TO BEEF.

Steers are High Priced now—Five Cents in Portland for top Stuff.

The present excellent prices for beef cattle are encouraging to stockmen. Top beef is worth five cents in Portland which would be equal to four and a half here. There is little or no such beef in this locality however, says a local grower, but the best steers of the vicinity ought to bring something like four and a quarter cents. A good animal at that figure ought to yield its owner very close to $50. A well known stockman who has such beef, and which he will turn off in about two weeks, bought his steers about this time last year at $20 per head. The contrast in price is very marked. Cattle have been very low for a couple of years, but it looks now as if the reactionary figure had set in. There is prospect that in a little while there would be a packing house in Portland, which ought to mean a steady market and an inexhaustible market for beef, pork and mutton for all time, after which the low prices of the past months ought to become unknown.
