SNAKE BIT IT

AND MAN TRIED WHISKEY ON HIS DOG WITH SUCCESSFUL RESULTS.

Literature Sent Out by Democratic Congressional Committee Charges That Roosevelt is Playing Double With People and Trusts.

New Haven, Aug. 19.—When one of George N. Rich's coon dogs at East Hampton, encountered yesterday a red-eyed adder, one of the most poisonous snakes found hereabouts, and the snake fastened his fangs in the dog's leg, Rich mourned and thought his dog was done for. But having himself tried successfully the whiskey antidote for snakebites, Rich thought it might work with equal success on the dog. He rushed the wounded animal home and poured whiskey down him until the dog exhibited a lordly jag. The leg swelled to huge proportions, but Rich announced to day that the swelling had subsided and the favorite dog was on the road to recovery both from the jag and the snakebite.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The democratic Congressional campaign inaugurated tonight a vitriolic personal attack on the president of the United States that makes the philippic of Tillman in his wildest moments as tame as one of the Rollo stories by comparison. This attack investing the present contest for control of the 60th congress with a previously unthought-of bitterness was promulgated through what is probably one of the most remarkable pieces of literature ever emanating from a national political committee.

"A faker," "four flusher," "the deepest scheming politician in the country," "in collusion with the trusts." These are some of the qualities attributed to President Roosevelt by Charles A. Edwards, secretary of the democratic congressional committee during the last few campaigns and at present serving in the same capacity, in a statement issued this evening from the committee headquarters in this city. Mr. Edwards formerly was Washington correspondent for a Texas newspaper.

President Roosevelt's projection of himself into the congressional campaign by means of his letter to Representative James Watson, of Indiana, the republican whip of the House, has brought out the democratic attack upon him. The statement prepared and issued by Mr. Edwards follow in part:

"President Roosevelt is attempting to dominate this congressional fight. His letter to Congressman James E. Watson of Indiana has proved the assertion. He tells the country through this letter to Mr. Watson that the republicans must do in this campaign to win the House.

"The chief thing in the letter to Mr. Watson from the President of the United States is not that Mr. Watson amounts to a thing in the world, but his declaration that the tariff question must be relegated to the rear and await republican revision in their own time and opportunity, thus continuing to subsidize the interests of the tariffed monopolies that grow fat on the people's pocketbooks.

"The thing for which Mr. President Roosevelt is pluming himself most in this letter—for which he takes greatest credit—consists of octopus-chasing and trust-busting. There are two brands of trust-busting, the chasing of octopuses and the busting of trusts that are odious and the busting of trusts that are popular. As yet Mr. President Roosevelt has only undertaken the first of those; he has not yet assailed a popular monopoly.

"Now there is an octopus in this land of ours—the head devil of the whole layout, namely the tariff octopus. This is a very popular octopus. It can muster an immense majority in either wing of the 59th congress. It is the octopus Colonel Bryan is anxious to smite, hip and thigh, and it was narrated around that Colonel Roosevelt had a rod in pickle for it that was to be burst under the monster's belly in the closing hours of the late momentous season; but, like General Beauregard at Shiloh; the president appears to have argued that it was glory enough for one session, for the whole country was applauding his exploits in behalf of democratic policies. Not one thing has he recommended, and not one thing was done by his republican 59th congress, first session, that did not emanate from democratic brains or was not stolen from democratic platforms.

"Mr. President Roosevelt brags about the first session of the 59th congress passing a generous naval bill, carrying on the idea that there must be a big navy in order to maintain the Monroe doctrine and other things. It did. It passed a bill carrying an appropriation for millions of dollars in the interest of the armor-plate trust, a few days ago an independent, anti-trust armor plate company made bids for those steel vessels, and Mr. Roosevelt's secretary of the navy refused to give the contract to the lowest bidder (the anti-trust bidder), and compelled them to divide with the trusts.

"If there is any one thing that ought to convince the people of this country that the president of the United States, with his full knowledge of the transaction, is trying to play honest and consistent with them in the interest of an economical, just, conservative and decent government, that transaction ought to dissipate it. It shows him to be in collusion with every trust management in the United States.

"President Roosevelt already has got the republican buck gone concerning the complexion of the next House of representatives. He is simply a badly scared man, and he knows what a democratic House means for him and his rotten administration. That's why he is getting so busy in this fight for the House. He would rather have a republican House that would pass the same old resolutions refusing to investigate the postoffice department and the other departments of the government than tell the truth and have a congress that would investigate and let the country have the truth. The people of the country—democrats and republicans alike—seem to have got it stuck in their crop that Mr. Roosevelt is infallible and can do no wrong; that he is working honestly and consistently in their interests, when the real truth is that he is a fakir and four-flusher and the deepest scheming politician in all the country."

St. Petersburg, Aug. 25.—Four revolutionists arrived at M. Stolypin's villa on Aptkarsky Island at 3:20 p. m. today in a coach. Two of them were dressed in the uniform of gendarmes, the third was dressed as a driver and was on the box of the coach and the fourth man was in private clothes.

Two of the men entered the villa under the pretext of making an important report to the premier, but were not permitted to enter his office. Then one of the men threw a bomb into the reception room and a terrible explosion followed. The house was nearly destroyed. The man who threw the bomb was killed, but the premier who was in his office was uninjured. His daughter is said to have had both her legs broken and the premier's 3-year-old son was severely wounded.

Firemen who arrived on the scene immediately after the explosion found a horrible scene. Many mutilated corpses and a large number of wounded and lacerated persons were lying around the plot where the bomb exploded.

Among those killed were General Zameatin, who during the war with Japan was chief of communication.

Syracuse, Aug. 18.—Thomas Maloney, a clerk in a drugstore, was so surprised today at the appearance in the store of his sister, whom he believed to have been killed in the San Francisco earthquake and fire, that he grabbed up a tumbler of benzine and gulped down its contents. A doctor used a stomach pump, and in a couple of hours Maloney was able to welcome his sister.

MULE FOUND IT

A GOLD MINE; SO AT LEAST A COURT DECISION DECLARES.

Notable Attention Shown Bryan at Paris—Murder Relics Sold in a Church—Girl Threw Chemicals in Rival's Eyes.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 23.—The death of O. O. Peck, a millionaire mine owner, in this city recalls the fact that a donkey was declared by Judge Norman Buck, of the Supreme court of Idaho, to have shared in the discovery of the $15,000,000 Bunker Hill and Sullivan mine and thereby secured for its owner a one-third interest in this famous property.

"From the evidence of witnesses," the court's opinion reads, "this court is of the opinion that the Bunker Hill mine was discovered by Peck's jackass, Phil O'Rourke and N. S. Kellogg. As plaintiff owns the jackass he is entitled to one-third interest in the Bunker Hill claim and a one-fourth interest in the Sullivan."

There is much more to the opinion, but this shows that the learned jurist credited the donkey with a full share in the discovery. Furthermore, Peck thereby obtained a title which he subsequently sold for a fortune that enabled him to spend the remainder of his days in affluence.

Stranger than any story in the annals of mining is that of the discovery of the famous mine in the heart of the Coeur d'Alene mountains in Central Idaho. Kellogg was a prospector, who had been grubstaked by Cooper and Peck, of this city. One day he visited the latter and exhibited a specimen of ore that he had found in the vicinity of what now constitutes the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mine. Peck pronounced the ore worthless and declined to continue the partnership. Kellogg fell in with O'Rourke, a Colorado miner, who pronounced the ore valuable and joined Kellogg in a second expedition. This time Harry Baer and Jacob Goetz, of Spokane, grubstaked the pair.

The two men charred upon the Burro, which was owned by Peck, but had been turned out to forage for itself until its owner had further need of its services. Kellogg and O'Rourke impressed it into service as a pack animal, without notifying Peck. Within a month they had discovered the greatest mine the Coeur d'Alene has ever revealed.

When Peck discovered that his burro had formed one of the party he brought suit to have his interest established and the court sustained his contention.

Paris, Aug. 23.—Mr. Bryan has come and gone. No American who has been in Paris attracted so much attention, or occasioned more comment. The interest that the French population took in his visit was remarkable. Although he had telegraphed a week before for rooms at the Hotel Continental, the only accommodations available for him were three little rooms on the third floor, wholly inadequate for a party of six.

"This is like camping out," said Mr. Bryan to his secretary. The distinguished traveler was obliged to have his bedroom transformed into a study and reception room, where he passed much time dictating telegrams and receiving visitors, while Mrs. Bryan drove about the city and visited the great stores.

When Mr. Bryan's presence became known all visiting and resident America swooped down upon the hotel. The clerks say that never had any visitor such stacks of mail and telegrams, nor was ever any one so much asked for at the desk.

Mr. Bryan received numerous letters begging him to stay a week so that the American colony, irrespective of politics, might organize a dinner and hear him talk. He confessed that he was tempted to break his plans in view of the cordiality of the requests, but said that it was necessary for him to keep to his programme, as important correspondence was following by scheduled stages. Besides he was most anxious to take the opportunity to see Spain, especially Grenada.
