the extension of the C. & E. to Newport. It is supposed to be the plan of the company to make the survey now and later on, perhaps in the winter, to begin building op-erations. By that time it is believed men will be more available and HOP that the work can be prosecuted more economically. It is believed to be certain that the same com-pany will enter upon the extension of the C. & E. across the mountains in the early spring, and that it will be the plan to get the Newport ex-tension out of the way before the Cascade project is begun. Mr. Hammond and his general manager, George McCloud, together with many other assistants and officials are all in Pertland now, and, according to the TIMES informant, are the busiest men in that busy
