—Rev. Donald Cannan of Tualatin, will conduct services at the Congregational church Sunday, both morning and evening. Special music at each service. Sunday school and C. E. at usual hours.

—"How to Hold out Faithful" will be the morning subject at the Christian church Sunday. "Seeking God" will be the evening theme. The male chorus will sing at the evening service.

—Those who send to the Chicago mail order houses for goods will find something to interest them on the grst page of this paper. It will also interest general readers.

—The bride—My husband loves me better than he loves his life.

Her friend—Did he tell you so. The bride—No; but he eats the things I cook.

—A former Corvallisite was indicted at Eugene for selling liquor. He is Hermann Breyer, and along with him four others have true bills returned against them on the same count. Among them is Charles Mayhew, once a Corvallis resident.

—Albany Democrat: A good sized audience appreciated the merits of A Royal Slave at the Opera House last night. The costumes were elaborate and the acting good. A newspaper man was the hero of the story, and of course was an interesting character in the midst of happenings.

Willie—"Papa, if I was twins would you buy the other boy a banana too?"

Papa—"Certainly, my son."

Willie—"Well, Papa, you surely aint going to cheat me out of another banana just 'cause I'm all in one piece?"

—The OAC basket ball girls go to Monmouth tomorrow to play the Oregon State Normal school team. The members of the team are, Miss Moore, center; Miss Roderick and Miss Holgate, forwards; Miss Pelland and Miss Scoggin, guards. The game will be the first of the season.

—The Reynolds house and four lots in Job's addition near the Covell home has been purchased by S. W. Bowser, formerly of the vicinity of Bruce. Mr. Bowser will build a new house on the property. The deal was negotiated by J. L. Lewis.

—The 34 acre tract of land north of town, formerly the property of the Buffington heirs, has been sold to two new arrivals from Iowa. The price paid is supposed to have been about $2,500. The purchasers are Mr. Young and Mr. Bailey, and they will divide the property and occupy it. The tract was formerly a part of the Haman Lewis donation claim. The sale was made by J. L. Lewis.

—Miss Adelaide Greff z, formerly a well known Corvallis girl is in Paris France. She left New York the 25th of October and is supposed to have reached the French capital several days ago. Her trip is largely a visit to her father, P. P. Greffoz, formerly a popular Corvallis jeweller, but in part she goes in hope of finding relief for ill health which she has suffered of late, an e rand in which she has the earnest sympathy of many Corvallis friends.

—The Spencer brothers farm at Blodgett, changed hands Tuesday. It was purchased by C. R. York, lately of Alberta, Canada, but now a resident of Dundee, Oregon. The place comprises 357 acres and the price paid for it was $4,500. The buyer is to take immediate possession. The deal was made by Stevenson & Robinson. Eli Spencer has also disposed of his city property in Corvallis. William and Eli Spencer are both working at the carpenter trade at Chehalis, Washington.

—L. L. Brooks has sold his straw stacks and 100 tons of hay to a cattle feeder with the stipulation that it is to be fed on his farm. Mr. Brooks believes that the hay and straw made into manure will equal $300 in fertilizer. His plan is to spread the manure on his vetch field, plow it under, and then sow the land to clover. By this treatment, Mr. Brooks claims the soil will be almost as productive as when first plowed. Mr. Brooks is authority for the statement that his farm that six years ago would produce but six bushels, this year yielded four tons of vetch, alsike, and red clover per acre.

—T. D. Campbell, late of Corvallis, is now a partner in the City Transfer & Storage Company, with offices at 103 Front street, Portland.

—Mrs. B. W. Johnson has been confined at home with illness several days. Her position at the postoffice is being filled by Mrs. McKellips.

—John Withycombe, who has been taking treatment for his eyes for two or three weeks, arrived from Portland today.

—The Westside came in today two and a half hours late, due to the presence of so many trains on the line and the delay at meeting points. Ten to a dozen trains were on the Westside this forenoon, all hurrying into Portland as fast as steam would carry and the crowded condition of track permit.

—They keep the railroad offices at both stations open all night now on account of the train situation. Ernest Miller did extra service for a time at the S. P. station and Mr. Albin of Philomath is at the C. & E. Mr. Miller's place in the Western Union office was filled by Eric Butler, son of Fred Butler across the Willamette.

—Walter Green, aged 36 and unmarried, was taken to the asylum Wednesday by Officer Wells. A year and a half ago he was committed to the asylum from this county, and in the month of August last year, was discharged. Of late he has been found with poisons in his possession and there were fears that he intended to use them for self destruction. His home is with his parents in Job's addition.

—The Independent people give it out that service on their lines for a few weeks must not be expected to be up to their well known standard. A big gang of workmen is stringing new cables and the contact and disturbance of wires cannot be avoided, which means that central service and phone efficiency will be more or less interfered with. After the improvements are completed though, look out. The new cable means that storms cannot molest or bad weather make afraid. Cables cannot be prostrated by every passing zephyr.

—The annual game of football between O. A. C. and U. of O. takes place at Corvallis on Saturday of next week, and Coach Norcross is much discouraged with the outlook. Cady a crack halfback was injured in The Dalles game and cannot possibly be in the lineup. The same is probably true of Darby. Beside this, there are other discouraging features that have put a gloomy phase on a situation that a week ago was quite cheery. The only hope is that the remnants of the team will get together with "an old guard" fighting spirit and even yet be able to make a fitting defense of OAC's best tradition.

WRECK ON EASTSIDE.

And big Passenger Trains Again Using Westside Tracks—Three Trains of U. S. Troops.

Five big passenger trains, of which four were overlands from California, passed through town this morning, coming over the C. & E. from Albany and going down the Westside to Portland. They began to arrive at four o'clock and had all passed by nine. One of the trains was the Cottage Grove local. Another was the regular California overland. Three others were troop trains, carrying United States soldiers from San Francisco to Portland, whence it is supposed they are to go the Vancouver barracks. Of the troops there were about 1,200.

In the last few days, the Eastside trains have not been using the Westside, but have been reaching Portland via Albany, Shelburn and Woodburn. The latter route is said to be shorter by 17 miles than via Corvallis. About midnight last night however, a rail at the Shelburn siding turned while a heavy freight train was passing over it and a locomotive and three cars were d'ched. A wrecking train has been sent to the scene, and until the pile up is cleared away and the track restored the Eastside will be used by all eastside trains. The eastside line will probably be restored some time today.

IN EVERY DIRECTION.

And on Most Roads—The Tortuous way to Salem now—It's a Long Trip for Booze.

The train passenger for Salem from Corvallis now travels in every direction on the compass and gets on most of the railroads in Oregon, so to speak. His first ride is to Albany over the C. & E. There he transfers to another train and goes to Shelburn over the C. & E. There he transfers to another railroad line and goes to Silverton located about 18 miles east of Salem. From there he goes to Woodburn, a long way the northward of Salem. There he takes a new train and starts for Salem over another railroad division. The last transfer carries the passenger back to where he started from which means that he has arrived at Salem. The long ride doesn't cost a cent more than it used to cost when the train went straight through. If a man carrying a grip was enroute from dry Corvallis, and had to go so far around to Salem to get a drop of the Crayther, his tongue would be mightily parched before he could get a drink in one of the saloons in the capital.

THE LIGHTS WERE OUT,

But a Lawyer Didn't Know the Difference—A Conversation Over the Phone.

There have been many complaints about the electric lights since it passed into the hands of the Willamette Valley people, but so far as known no case of kicking has been so striking as happened in the following instance. It was a conversation by phone, with City Attorney Bryson at one end, and the office of the Light company at the other. The talk ran like this: Bryson—"Hello there; is this the light company?"

"Yes; this is the Electric Light office," was the reply.

Bryson—"Say, I can't see worth a cent by this light of yours; can't you make it better?"

Light Office—"Why, there has been an accident and the lights have been out for two hours."

Bryson—"Oh, is that so? Why nobody could tell it, it hasn't seemed much darker than it was before. Goodbye."

Light Office—"Goodbye." And a gurgle of a laugh from the girl who was listening at the conversation floated over the wire.
