What Mother Tells Me.

When Mother was a little maid
She was so very good—
I really often think that she
Must have been made of wood.
She never, never played a trick
On her pet pussy "Tib";
She would not tease; she would not tell
The tiniest little fib.
She always kept her dresses clean;
Her curls were brushed just right;
She never cried and coaxed that she Might stay up late at night.
And very often, when I've been
In mischief and been bad,
I think, "Ain't it an awful shame
That I took after Dad?"

—In the 24th annual convention just held at Philomath, Rev. Charles A. Phipps, field worker for the state of Oregon, took a leading part and was most entertaining, instructive in his addresses on leading Sunday school themes. Revs. Gibbs and Moses, of Corvallis, were active during the session and contributed very materially to the interest of the convention. A new constitution for the county was adopted. The following were elected officers for the ensuing year: President of the association, Virgil E. Watters; vice-president, Walter Wiles; rec. secretary, Ethel White; statistical secretary and treasurer, Rev. G. H. Gibbs; supt. training department, Prof. Henry Sheak; supt. primary department, Mrs. Sarah Cauthorn; supt. home department, Mrs. M. A. Wright. The following resolutions were adopted: "In as much as we have for our field of labor a strong temperance county, and as a result of which we are the recipients of many special blessings, therefore be it resolved, That we, as a Sunday school convention, express our appreciation of the International S. S. Association for the highly instructive and helpful temperance lessons which they have so carefully prepared. Resolutions of thanks were extended to the state S. S. officers for sending into the field such an able worker as Rev. Charles A. Phipps, to the citizens of Philomath for cordially receiving and royally entertaining delegates from abroad, and to Prof. Sheak for faithful and efficient services as president of the association and chairman of the convention.

body was discovered were introduced in court, the defendant puckered his mouth and seemed as if he was desirous of leaving the room while the money was being passed from juror to juror for identification. The bills, two of $20 denomination and another of $10 denomination, were covered with blood and they were repeatedly referred to as money which Sidney had stated he had received from his alleged accomplice in the crime and had been taken from the dead man.

Police-man McDermott related the two confessions Sidney Sloane made to him. In the first one the accused said another man killed James Sloane, robbed him of $500 and gave him $50. In the second, according to McDermott, young Sloane admitted his guilt and described his efforts to wipe out the bloodstains and get the body from the house.

The testimony of today was substantive of the insanity plea. Witnesses followed in rapid succession, who told of Sidney Sloane's eccentricities and indiscretions, bordering on insanity, of which he had been guilty in his early youth. The strong features introduced by the defense in its efforts to prove Sidney Sloane's mental derangement were:

Rev. Mr. Roberts testified that Sidney imagined himself a goddess, and he ran naked through the Sloane residence, in the presence of three women visitors and the witness. He said Sidney had mythology read to him at his home when he was about ten years of age; that from observations while at school and at home, he had formed the opinion that Sidney was insane.

Miss May O. Boynton, his former schoolteacher, said Sidney would sit sucking a thumb and dreaming, and was not broken of the habit even when the witness tied the thumb with a string; that he was deficient in his learning, and was only advanced half a year after spending one year in her class.

Mrs. Minnie Kilner, who taught Sloane in kindergarten, says he would be tardy an hour or two hours, and when reprimanded would not realize he was late. She never knew of another child like Sidney Sloane in her 15 years' experience in conducting a kindergarten.

Professor B. F. Boone said Sidney would steal small articles of wearing apparel from other students, and the latter were compelled to lock their doors.

Boston, Nov. 23.—Mrs. Hatty Green, who is making her residence here because it is cheaper to board in Boston than to keep house in Bellows Falls, Vermont, predicts a revolution because of the action of the trusts.

It would hardly be expected that the richest woman in the United States would be a trust-buster, yet Mrs. Green is a gainst trusts. She thinks them as iniquitous as are lawyers.

"There is going to be a revolution in this country," said Mrs. Green. People are going to revolt against oppressions of trusts. There will be a deluge and these streets will run with blood.

"People are gradually finding out about trusts. When they realize how they are ruining the chances of people there will be an outbreak."

When a correspondent asked Mr. Green for the loan of her photograph she wanted security and asked if he had a watch. The reporter's watch, when submitted, was snuffed at by the wealthiest woman in the world, and she then inquired if the reporter had any money. Finally she lent the picture without security.
