IN BENTON.

Remarks elsewhere in this paper by District Attorney Brown ought to be welcome reading in Benton county. Mr. Brown is a sincere man who never trifles. There is no motive behind his commendation. The record at the court house backs up his statement.

No people anywhere in Oregon have so little crime in their midst. No courts anywhere, are so barren of business. No public prosecutor anywhere is so nearly without duties. The district attorney, sitting as a grand jury, waits in vain in Benton for important complaints. Trivial matters alone come before him, and these are fit rather for justice courts. In ten years of official career as district attorney, he has never tried a case of murder in Benton. He has never had other case wherein important criminality was manifest. The county has little use for courts and prosecutors so far as crime is concerned. The most these arms of the law accomplish is whatever deterrent influence they may exert.

Such is the statement of Mr. Brown. It is a condition to appeal to homeseekers. It is a condition to gratify home-owners, it is a condition to applaud and to be proud of. It is a condition in delightful concord with the fact that here is the home of a great educational institution. It is a condition that must be welcome and gratifying to the friends of that institution all over Oregon. It is a condition for which the TIMES has always stood, for the achieving of which it has always appealed and to which it points with undeniable pride. Why not?

DEATH AT 82 YEARS.

Mrs. Lucy S. Ryder Succumbs to the Weight of Years.

The death of Mrs. Lucy S. Ryder occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Beckwith, this city, Tuesday evening, November 27th at the age of 82 years, six months and seven days. From the weight of her years Mrs. Ryder had lingered in the border land during many weeks, but the time came when the enfeebled vital organs were compelled to abandon the long struggle for supremacy.

Funeral services were held Thursday at the Beckwith home. Rev. M. S. Bush delivered a touching sermon, and the remains were attended to Crystal Lake cemetery by a large concourse of relatives and friends.

Deceased was the wife of S. B. Ryder, who survives her. The aged couple came to Oregon with other members of the family, from Iowa about twenty-eight years ago. During many years they occupied their home just north of the saw-mill. For some months, however, on account of failing vitality, Mr. and Mrs. Ryder have lived with their daughter, Mrs. Beckwith. Ten children were born to them, five of whom are living, name y, William, Edward, Mrs. Wesley Newton, Mrs. O. W. Beckwith, all of Benton county, and a son in Connecticut. Other children were Charley Ryder, who was accidentally killed at the Co wallis saw mill, and Mrs. N. A. Wheeler, who died here many years ago. Mrs. Ryder was a lady greatly esteemed by neighbors and acquaintances who have no hesitancy in stating that she filled her place in life in a manner which left a valuable impress upon the conduct of others.

MILKING MACHINE IS HERE.

Will be Used for Testing Purposes at the College—Something About it.

The milking machine at the college has arrived. As was related some time ago in the TIMES, a test of the appliance is to be made with a view to determining its practicability. The test will last over a period of one year and will be very thorough. The milking herd will be divided into two groups with the milking capacity of each as nearly balanced as possible. The milk product from each group will be tested regularly, both from the bacteriological and chemical standpoint. That will determine the relative cleanliness of the hand and machine process and settle the question of whether the machine method is more cleanly and with a milk product of better keeping qualities as is claimed for machine drawn milk. Besides the matter of practicability, the question of economy will be determined by the test. It will also be a feature to determine the effect of the machine upon the cow both physically and mentally. A fear is that the machine method of milking will tend to make the cow nervous, and that a shrinkage in the milk flow will result. All these and various other points will enter into the test, and the results will be not only of extreme interest, but of great value, especially since Oregon is moving to the front as an important factor in the dairy industry.

The machine is to be run by an engine. The motive power where electric power is available, as is the case in some Eastern states is electricity. Two cows are milked at a time. The teat cups are of rubber and are of various sizes so the teat may be properly fitted. The vacuum is the vital principal on which the device operates. The engine operates a sort of pump that connects by proper pipes with the teat cups. A pulsating vacuum causes the milk to flow from the teats into the cups and thence through the pipes into the proper receptacle. The device connects with each stall, making the process of attaching the cups to the teats about all the operator has to do in the actual process of milking. The running of the engine, and the subsequent cleaning of the pipes and connections are of course to be taken into consideration as a part of the trouble. The cost of the machine laid down in Corvallis is about $380. The machine will be set to work about the 7th of January, according to present plans. The men and women, too, perhaps, who have been milking cows by hand all these years will have much curiosity to see the new device in motion, as all will have full opportunity to do.

ALL GOOD PEOPLE.

Benton's low per Cent of Crime—What District Attorney Brown has to say About it.

In a speech before a jury last spring, District Attorney George M. Brown said many complimentary things about the standard of citizenship in Corvallis and Benton county. The TIMES published a portion of Mr. Brown's remarks, and the extract was widely published. "I haven't gone back on what I said then," said Mr. Brown Wednesday. "It's all true. The people of Benton county ought to be proud of their citizenship. They have but little use for courts and district attorneys. When I come to Corvallis to attend court, I get lonely sitting in the grand jury room waiting for complaints to come. Trivial complaints belonging in a justice rather than the circuit court are about all that come before me. Hunting without a license or kindred offenses are the usual character of wrong doing that I meet with, when sitting as a grand jury in Benton county, I have served here as district attorney for ten years and have never had a murder case in the county. A burglary or two, a case of horse stealing and occasional offenses of that character, have constituted the main part of my duties as prosecutor during the extended period of my official career. In this county courts and district attorneys, if useful at all, are mainly so, in whatever deterrent influence they may exert.

It can be added truthfully that the high estimate District Attorney Brown places on Benton county citizenship is largely reciprocated in the estimate here in which people hold their prosecuting attorney.

THREE FANCY COWS.

Added to the Herd on the College Farm—Best of Their Kind.

Three fancy cows have been added to the college herd. Each is the highest type of her kind, and of great individual excellence. The purpose of their purchase is to present to the classes in animal husbandry a perfect animal of her type so that the students may become perfectly familiar with her points of excellence. The animals purchased are a Guernsey from Hazel Fern farm owned by the W. S. Ladd estate in Multnomah county, an Ayrshire from the farm of Mrs. William Honeyman of Scappoose, Columbia county, and a Holstein from the P. W. Frakes farm also in Columbia county.

The purchases give the college five breeds of dairy cows, each breed being represented by a choice animal. The principal herd is the Jersey, in which there are several heifers which by their performances are entitled to advanced registry. The other breed is the milking type of Short Horn, one cow in which it is anticipated from a test now on will yield ten thousand pounds of four per cent milk during the current 12 months.

BEAT A CHINAMAN.

Charles Carns did and has Been Bound Over to Circuit Court.

The brutal assault of a Chinaman by Charles Carns, and the belief for a time that the victim might not recover was a star event of the past day or two in Corvallis. According to all accounts the assault was both cowardly and wanton. The Chinaman's face was beaten almost to a jelly. There is a deep gash across the forehead. Both eyes are still closed. For a time the victim was unconscious, but he is much better today and his recovery is assured. Carns fled immediately after the assault, and was captured in Alsea yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Rycraft. Hardy McCormick and Constable Wells brought him to Corvallis, where he was at once lodged in jail.

The victim is an inoffensive old Chinaman known to everybody as "Old Tom." He is connected with the laundry east across the street from Homing's. He also opens oysters at Wiley's. He has an affection of the hip that makes him a cripple, and he probably never harmed a living thing in his life.

At 2 o'clock today Carns was arraigned upon a charge of assault and battery, the proceedings being in the nature of an examination, instead of a trial, the result of which would necessarily result either in the acquittal of the defendant, or his being bound over to the circuit court. Carns chose to have no attorney, and after some explanations by Justice Holgate and Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Bryson, decided to waive examination. On account of the possibility of more serious results than are now deemed probable from the assault, the bonds were placed at $1,000. Carns believes that he will be able to give the required bond.
