WINTER RATES TO YAQUINA BAY.

Oregon's Great Recreation and Health Resort at the Newport Beaches. Ticket Sales Resumed Nov. 1st to May 31st, 1907.

As a winter health and recreation resort to Newport is the one par excellence. Recognizing this, the Southern Pacific and Corvallis & Eastern have resumed the sale of tickets through to Yaquina. From all S. P. points, tickets will be sold throughout the winter and spring until May 31st, every and from Albany, Corvallis and Philomath on the Corvallis & Eastern, tickets will be sold to Yaquina and Newport DAILY.

Wednesday and Saturday

The rates will be the same as during the summer, and will be good for return 60 days from date of sale.

Dr. Minthorn's Sanitary Baths

Will be in operation during the entire winter and treatments will be given daily.

Other Health Resorts Closed.

During the winter nearly all other health resorts are closed or difficult to reach, and none of them have the advantages of Newport and vicinity as regards climate, points of interest, recreation, and amusement. For parties desiring to enjoy fishing, hunting, or seeing the ocean in sunshine or in storm, the famous resort is unequalled, the surroundings are ideal—beautiful scenery, climate mild, healthful and invigorating. Cottages for rent cheap. Fresh vegetables, milk, honey, fruit at lowest possible cost, fish and the famous rock oysters to be had for the trouble of securing them.

Full information from any S. P. or C. & E. Agent, or from the General Passenger Agent of either company.

Rate from Corvallis to Yaquina, $2.25.

Rate from Corvallis to Newport $3.75.

ANOTHER TRAGEDY

MURDERER STABS TWO WOMEN THEN KILLS HIMSELF.

Vengeance of a Jilted Lover—Woman Carrying Her Babe Falls From Her Arms on Red-Hot Stove—Other News.

Portland, Or., Dec. 28.—G. Savignoni, to avenge the persistent refusal of his attentions, went to the home of Arturo Bignani, 402 Water street, this morning, stabbed to death his wife, Giulia Bignani; stabbed and perhaps fatally wounded Anna Vismara, her mother, and then killed himself.

Savignoni went to the place at 9 o'clock this morning. Entering the house from the street, he crossed the hallway and suddenly appeared in the kitchen, where were Giulia Bignani, her mother, Anna Vismara, and her two children, a 3-year-old boy and an infant.

Emerging from the house, Savignoni hurried to the Davis drug store, Third and Everett streets, where Arturo Bignani, husband of the murdered woman, is employed. Detectives believe he went there to finish the extermination of the family by the murder of Bignani, but was deterred by the crowd in the store.

Reaching the place, he shook hands with a friend, excused himself and returned to a rear part of the store. An hour later a clerk, becoming suspicious at his prolonged absence, went to investigate. Savignoni was found lying upon the floor with a 32-calibre revolver by his side. There was a small, powder-marked hole in his temple. On their arrival police officers discovered that he was still alive and removed him to Good Samaritan hospital, where he died two hours later.

The dual and perhaps triple tragedy was the result of Savignoni's persistent attentions to the woman. Neighbors declare that they were first acquainted in Italy and there Savignoni began to show his admiration for the girl. He continued them on their arrival in this country, and did not desist after her marriage to Arturo Bignani.

The elder was preparing breakfast while her daughter held the infant in her arms. The little boy, who is a mute, was playing on the floor.

Quickly closing the door behind him Savignoni sprang toward the younger woman. As he advanced he drew a long knife from a scabbard and plunged it hilt deep into her breast. She screamed and staggered back, dropping the baby, which fell upon the stove. He drew out the knife and raised it again. Reeling the woman reached the door and stumbled down a stairway, trying vainly to escape. She ran a short distance and fell prone upon the sidewalk, expiring almost instantly.

Startled by the sudden attack and the scream of her daughter, the elder woman turned toward the murderer. She stood between him and the door, hoping to prevent his pursuit. He raised the dripping knife and the blade sank deep into the woman's shoulder. He struck again, sinking the knife in her back, and the woman fell bleeding to the floor.

The assassin walked quickly through the door by which he had entered, passed through the hallway and into the street and escaped. He closed the door in leaving the room where he had wreaked his vengeance.

The little mate and the infant were the only eyewitnesses to the deed. The child, suffering intensely, screamed while the little boy pounded and kicked upon the walls and doors. The infant was horribly burned.

Persons who reside in the same house in which the tragedy was enacted were attracted by the screaming of the child and the pounding upon the door by the boy. Notifying the police an investigation was begun.

The kitchen floor was covered with blood. Large drops and pools clearly indicated the direction the woman had taken after she had been stabbed, and on opening the door into a rear yard her body was discovered. She lay upon the walk a short distance from the door.

The elder woman was lying upon the kitchen floor, bleeding profusely but conscious. She was able to give a brief account of the affair to the officers. She was removed to Good Samaritan hospital, where little hopes of recovery are given out.

Patrolman Stark Lytle was the first officer upon the scene and was soon joined by others. It was with the greatest efforts they kept back the crowds of Italians and others who gathered about the house soon after the tragedy.

"Savignoni had paid attentions to the woman for years," said one of the neighbors who was intimately acquainted with their affairs. "He was born in Venice and there he first knew the girl. He came to Portland during the Lewis and Clark fair, when Bignani and his wife were living here."

"In order to escape him they went to San Francisco and Los Angeles and he followed them there. Recently they returned to Portland and he came, too."

"On several occasions within the last week or so her husband has ejected Savignoni from the house and threatened more severe punishment if he returned. Savignoni has told several of his friends that he swore a long time ago that the girl should be his and that she must die if she did not. He kept his word."

About the house where Savignoni wreaked his vengeance there was an excited crowd of Italians this morning. Dark-haired women with babies in their arms swore vengeance while men cursed deeply. Threats of lynching and vows to avenge the deed were made by friends and neighbors of the stricken family.

Mr. and Mrs. Larson occupy the rooms on the second floor of the house. She heard the screams of the little baby as he lay in agony on the kitchen floor, and thinking perhaps the little fellow had injured himself while the mother was outside, she rushed down the front stairs to his assistance. At the bottom of the stairs she met Cecil, frantic with fear. The little fellow, too young to have a full understanding of the horrible sight his children eyes witnessed, wrung his hands. His little body shook with the excitement and the sobs that welled up in his throat. She spoke to him, but he made only a few incoherent sounds.

Even then Mrs. Larson did not realize that anything was wrong. While she stood in the hallway for a moment trying to get something from Cecil, men from the street broke open the front door. "What's gone wrong?" they asked, and when she could give them no information they told her of the bleeding woman who had but the moment before rushed down the back steps and dropped dead on the sidewalk.

Then she went to the kitchen. The little baby lay on the floor close to the body of the grandmother. Its clothes were covered with blood and he lay in a bloody pool which had flowed from the wounds of the old woman. Mrs. Larson stepped over the body of the prostrate grand

NEGROES' CRIME.

TIE AND BEAT TELEGRAPH OPERATOR PENNED IN BLOCKHOUSE.

Wires Appeal for Help—Spartanburg Sheriff Rushes to the Scene With Armed Posse, but the Blacks Make Good Their Escape.

Spartanburg, S. C., Dec. 28.—Telegraph Operator Porter, in charge of the block station at Mount Zion, six miles from here, on the main line of the Southern Railway, was taken out of his station tonight, shortly after 7 o'clock by a crowd of drunken negroes, tied and whipped.

The mob surrounded Porter, who barricaded himself in the station, and shot out windows and lights. Porter then wired the train dispatchers at Spartanburg, to send help. He scarcely had finished the message when the negroes broke into the station, seized and dragged him outside and beat him.

Sheriff Nichols and a party of officers left on a special train, but when they arrived the negroes had disappeared. The posse is searching the woods. No arrests have been made.

El Reno, Okla., Dec. 29.—It is believed that the negro, supposed to be a soldier from Fort Reno, who last night held up and shot a Chinese laundryman, was the same man who last week shot and seriously wounded Captain Edgar A. Macklin. Late yesterday a negro answering the description of the Macklin assailant attempted to hold up the railroad agent at Darlington, near here. The agent knocked the negro down, but he escaped, and it is believed he came to El Reno.

Several days ago bloodhounds traced Macklin's assailant to Darlington, where the scent was lost. The Chinaman is not seriously wounded. After last night's shooting, the negro is believed to have escaped on a stolen horse.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 29.—Local newspapers assert that the book written by General Kuropatkin on the Russo-Japanese war, which has just been published, has been confiscated by the authorities. General Kuropatkin, who has just recently finished the fourth and last volume of his history of the war, has just returned to St. Petersburg. The last volume is entitled "The Lessons of the War," and in it the General sums up his criticisms of the war office in its administration and conduct of the campaign.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Healthful cream of tartar, derived solely from grapes, refined to absolute purity, is the active principle of every pound of Royal Baking Powder.

Hence it is that Royal Baking Powder renders the food remarkable both for its fine flavor and healthfulness.

No alum, no phosphate—which are the principal elements of the so-called cheap baking powders—and which are derived from bones, rock and sulphuric acid.
